PREFACE.

The present volume is the result of labors instituted by Ebenezer Mack Treman and carried on for some time during the years 1893-4, and partially abandoned for several years, owing to the pressure of business duties, to be finally revived in 1901, and carried to a successful conclusion, with the assistance of Murray E. Poole. The latter can not refrain, in this connection, from expressing to the former his sincere thanks for the encouragement which he has ever received in the prosecution of the work, and desires further to bear testimony to his colleague's strong love of family and pride in its achievements and to his public spirit and generosity in providing this family memorial. An earnest, and we hope successful, attempt has been made to gather together, in this volume, the widely scattered family records. As the years go by they will become more and more valuable. It is hoped that the members of the family will take great care in preserving family records. If this work brings the various members of the family into closer communication, one of its objects will be attained. Its value as a contribution to local history must necessarily be great, while it is an authentic record which may some time prove of great value in enabling some member of the family to establish his right in the courts of law to an inheritance, or before the Interior Department to a pension for war service, or to prove eligibility to membership in the hereditary patriotic societies. Genealogy, once interesting to a few, has become a popular study. In the early days of few newspapers and with books seldom indexed, one would seldom meet, in print, his family name; nowadays the newspapers print long lists of names of individuals and a book of an historical character without an index is a rarity. Historical, biographical and directory publishing companies also provide many sources of genealogical information. The plan of this book is so simple as to need no explanation. The price is placed at actual cost.

If any mistakes occur, and it is almost impossible to prevent them, in the thousands of names and dates, it is hoped that they will be reported for correction in some future edition. If any names have been omitted, it is regretted, as an effort was made to include every person bearing the family name or related to the family by intermarriage. We desire especially to thank those who have furnished information.

The Treman, Tremaine, Truman family is of Norman origin. The first ancestor of the family in England came over from France with William the Conqueror. The original family name Tremayne, meaning three hands, was of Norman origin. The meaning of the name was lost and then from losing its meaning it gradually became converted into another name that had another meaning. This was not a very unusual occurrence in family names and can not be explained philologically. The change came by modification and use. The first of the name of whom we have any knowledge was Perys Tremayne who resided in Cornwall, England, in the reign of Edward III. (1312-1377.) His descendants were seated in Cornwall for many generations. There is an old saying "By Tre, Pol and Pen, you may know the Cornish men." The first of the family bearing a different name, of whom we have any knowledge, was Rev. Henry Trewman, instituted rector of Cromwell, Nottinghamshire, England, July 27, 1635. His successor was Rev. Joseph Truman, D. D. The meaning of this name was, obviously, true man. An explanation of the change of name is found in the original pronunciation of the names Tremayne and Truman, the letter "u" in Truman having the sound of French "u" which is the sound of English "e", showing that the two names sounded very much alike. The Anglo-Saxons spelled the name Træwman, meaning wood-man. In America the name appears Treman, Tremaine and Truman. As illustrating how families re-adopt the old name it may be mentioned that many of the grandsons of Joseph Truman, the first American ancestor, remembering the family tradition that the old family name was Tremayne, adopted the old name Tremaine, as the name was spelled Tremayne and Tremaine in the olden time in England.

TREMAYNE, JOHN, Esq., of Heligan, Cornwall and Sydenham, Devon, M. P. for East Cornwall from 1874 to 1880, and from South Devon 1884-85, J. P. and D. L., High Sheriff 1859, b. 15 April, 1825; m. 13 Nov. 1860, Hon. Mary Charlotte Martha Vivian, dau. of Charles Crespigny, 2nd Lord Vivian of Glynn, and has issue.

- III. Grace Damaris Matilda, m. 1889, Charles Babington, Esq.

Lineage.

From the manor of Tremayne in the parish of St. Martin, on the banks of Helford Haven, this family derived, at a very remote period, its designation. In the reign of Edward III. (1312-1377), Perys Tremayne was there resident. By his wife, Dame Opre Treskewys, he was father of

John Tremayne, to whom, having no issue himself, s. his brother, Perys Tremayne, who m. Onera Trevertea, and was grandfather of Thomas Tremayne. This was the last resident of the family at Tremayne. He m. Isabella, dau. and sole heir of Trenchard of Collacombe, and removed in consequence to that estate, where his descendants flourished for more than three centuries. Isabella Trenchard, surviving her husband, remarried with Sir John Damerell.

Thomas Tremayne was s. by his elder son,

Nicholas Tremayne who was s. by his son,

Thomas Tremayne who m. Elizabeth Carew.

John Tremayne, of Collacombe, who m. Emma, dau. of John Beare, of Huntsham, had issue,

1. Thomas, his heir.

2. Richard, of Tregonan, Cornwall, ancestor of Lewis Tremayne, of Heligan, who commanded a regiment of foot for King Charles I., and was Lieutenant Governor of Pendennis Castle. This gallant person had two sons,

1. John (Sir), King's Serjeant, and author of the Pleas of the Crown, who d. s. p.

2. Charles, whose son,

Lewis Tremayne m. Mary, dau. and co-heir of ——— Clotworthy, Esq., of Rashleigh and Clotworthy, in Devon, and was s. by his son, John, m. Grace, youngest dau. and co-heir of Henry Hawkins, Esq., of St. Austell, and left with a dau., Grace, wife of Charles Rashleigh, Esq., younger brother of the house of Menabilly, a son, Rev. Henry Hawkins Tremayne, of whom hereafter, as representative of the family at the decease of Arthur Tremayne, Esq., of Sydenham, 1808.

Mr. Tremayne was s. by his only son, Thomas Tremayne of Collacombe, High Sheriff of Cornwall 2 Henry VII. (1485). He m. Philippa, eldest dau. of Roger Grenville, Esq., of Stowe, and had eight sons, with as many daus. The former were,

I. Roger, who d. s. p.

II. Edmund, of whom Prince, in his Worthies of Devon, gives the following account: "Being a younger brother, he became servant to Edward, Marquess of Exeter, and a great sufferer for his inviolable fidelity to his noble master; for when the Marquess of Exeter and the Lady Elizabeth (afterwards Queen of England, of glorious memory) were committed to the Tower in Queen Mary's days, upon an accusation of being privy to Wyat's conspiracy, Mr. Edmund Tremayne was set on the rack, thereby to extort from him a confession of their guilt (prisoners were oft examined about her, and some were put to the rack to try if they could be brought to accuse that lady), wherein approving their innocency and his own fidelity, with invincible resolution, he was, upon the Lady Elizabeth's advancement to the throne, made one of the clerks of her Majesty's most honourable privy council. He had also an honorary salary settled upon him by the City of Exeter, for the good offices it had received and expected from him." He m. Eulalia, dau. of Sir John St. Ledger, and had two sons, named Francis, who both died issueless.

III. Digory, eventual successor to the estates.

IV. Richard (twin with John), in holy orders, and an eminent divine. He was educated at Oxford, and became a fellow of Exeter College in that university, which he retained until the accession of Queen Mary when he was obliged, from his zeal for the Reformation, to seek an asylum in Germany, having been deprived of his fellowship. Upon the elevation of Elizabeth to the throne, he returned from exile, and, visiting his college, had the honour of receiving both degrees of divinity at once, on 15 Feb., 1565. Dr. Tremayne subsequently removed to Gates Hall, and thence passed within a short period into his own county, being instituted Canon Residentiary of St. Peter's, Exeter, and Treasurer of that church. He was esteemed in his time a famous preacher, and he is styled by Carew "well born, learned, and well beloved." He m. Joan, eldest dau. of Sir Piers Courtnay, of Ugbrook, but d. s. p. 1584.

V. John (twin with his brother, Dr. Tremayne).

VI. Nicholas ) twins : between these brothers so great a resem-VII. Andrew ) blance in person and sympathy and affection subsisted, as scarcely to have been paralleled in any other instance. Ridsen, in his survey of Devon, relates some singular facts regarding them.

Upon the monument of these remarkable brothers, the following lines are engraved :—

"These liken'd twins, in form and fancy one,
Were like affected, and like habit chose ;
Their valour at Newhaven siege was known,
Where both encounter'd fiercely with their foes ;
There one of both sore wounded lost his breath,
And t'other slain, revenging brother's death."

VIII. Robert who d. an infant.

The two elder sons, Roger and Edmund, dying issueless, the estates eventually devolved upon the third son,

Digory Tremayne, Esq., who thus became of Collacombe, and was s. by his son, Arthur Tremayne, Esq., of Collacombe. This gentleman m. in 1586, Mary, dau. of Sir Richard Greville, Knt. of Stowe, by whom he had a numerous family, and dying 1634, was s. by his eldest son, Edmund Tremayne, Esq., of Collacombe, who m. Bridget, dau. of Sir John Cooper of Dorsetshire, and had issue :

I. John, d. unm.

II. Thomas, d. unm.

III. John, one of the most gallant and devoted of the Cavaliers.

IV. Edward, like his brother, a distinguished and faithful adherent of King Charles I.

V. Arthur.

The youngest son eventually inheriting the estates became,

Arthur Tremayne, Esq., of Collacombe, and was a Col. in the army. He married Bridget, dau. of Nicholas Hatherleigh, Esq., of Lamberton, and was father of Edmund Tremayne, Esq., of Collacombe, m. Arabella, dau. and sole heir of Sir Edward Wise, K. B., of Sydenham, Devon, and had issue, Arthur, his successor ; Edward Wise, who appears to have d. s. p.; Arabella; and Bridget. Mr. Tremayne was s. by his eldest son, Arthur Tremayne, Esq., of Sydenham, m. Grace, dau. of Sir Halsewell Tynte, 1st Bart. of Halsewell, and was s. by his son, Arthur Tremayne, Esq., of Sydenham. He m. Miss Hammond, of Wilts, and left an only child, Arthur Tremayne, Esq., of Sydenham, b. 1775, who dying unm. Dec., 1808, devised the principal estates of his family to

Rev. Henry Hawkins Tremayne, b. 27 July, 1741, the lineal heir, and after the decease of said Arthur, representative of the ancient house of Tremayne. Mr. Hawkins Tremayne m. 1767, Harriet, dau. and co-heir of John Hearle, Esq. of Penryn, some time Vice Warden of Cornwall Stannaries, and left at his decease, 10 Feb., 1829, an only son, John Hearle Tremayne, Esq., of Heligan and Sydenham, J. P. and D. L., b. 17 March, 1780; High Sheriff of Cornwall 1831, and M. P. for that Co. from 1806 to 1826. "Cornwall."

One of the oldest and most distinguished families of Tremayne is that of Heligan. This name recalls more than one deed of daring in which the Cornish Tremaynes have taken part. During the reign of Pendennis, in Cromwell's time, Lieutenant Colonel Tremayne of Helligan escaped by swimming through the enemy's fire from one of the blockhouses to Trefuse's Point. A branch of the Tremaynes of Cornwall has been seated in Lamberton, Devon, for many centuries. (Worthy's Devonshire Parishes.)

(FROM LEGENDS, SUPERSTITIONS AND SKETCHES OF DEVONSHIRE ON THE BORDERS OF THE SAMAR AND SAVV, BY MRS. BRAY.)

"In the parish of Lamerton, three miles from Tavistock, is Collacombe, an old house that for generations was the seat of the Tremaines (in their origin a Cornish family). Before the marriage Col. Arthur Tremaine with Bridget Hatherleigh induced them to remove to the more splendid mansion of Sydenham. When we visited the church we were much pleased with viewing the old monuments there existing of the family of Tremaine. But before I speak of the twin brothers I must say a few words of their father and family. Our great ancestors in the reign of Richard II. founded an hospital at the west end of the town of Tavistock and dedicated it to St. George.

Thomas Tremaine, the parent of the twins, had eight sons and as many daughters. Edmund, the second son, was the devoted follower of Edward, Earl of Devon and Marquis of Exeter, and suffered severely by his unshaken attachment to that nobleman during his many troubles. He was by order of Queen Mary racked in the Tower of London in the hope he would reveal enough to prove the guilt of the Marquis, but no torture could compel him to accuse the innocent or betray the confidences of his friend. The Queen did not forget the fidelity he had evinced under such a cruel test, as on her accession to the throne she rewarded Edmund by making him one of the Clerks of the Privy Council.

The family of Tremaines is of ancient standing. Their arms consist of three united arms with clinched hands, and two hands above support a Saracen's head as the crest.

The hall window of Collacombe House has 3545 small panes of glass in it.

We visited the interesting old house of Sydenham commenced in the time of Elizabeth and finished in that of James I. The mansion is built in the shape of the letter E. One of the gables has been despoiled of its beautiful old windows and common modern ones put in—supposed to have been the whim of a certain old Mr. Tremaine, the father of the late possessor of Sydenham, who was born in 1708 and died in 1808.

Sydenham was garrisoned for King Charles and taken by the parliamentary forces in January, 1645.

Among the pictures in one of the apartments was the sister of the former Mr. St. John, who acted in concert with Hampden and Pymir during the rebellion. This lady was by marriage connected with the family of Tremaine. Over the chimney piece is the portrait of the gallant Col. Arthur Tremaine who lived to see the monarchy for which he fought and bled restored, and to wed with fair mistress Bridget Hatherleigh, who at that period had become for want of male issue the heiress of Sydenham. Bridget was grand-daughter of Sir Thomas Wise and by her marriage with the brave Col., the house and lands of Sydenham came to the family of Tremaine. Mr. Tremaine, the present worthy and respected proprietor, does not often reside in this princely but decaying mansion. He inherited it by will from the last old gentleman dying unmarried, who, though he had never seen him, left it on account of his being the same name and being the younger branch of the family with whom, however, he had kept up no communication.

Nicholas and Andrew Tremaine were twin sons of the afore named Thomas Tremaine, born at Collacombe House in Lamerton. They were of such close resemblance in feature and gesture that they could not be known the one from the other by their own parents or friends. They wore a knot of colored ribbons to distinguish them. In 1563 they bore arms among the English forces sent into France, the one as Captain of Horse, the other as a volunteer. In one of the engagements near Newhaven, now Havre de Grace, they stood side by side. At last one fell and the other immediately took his place and shared his brother's fate.

The monument in Lamberton Church is that of their family.

The following epitaph on Nicholas and Andrew appears inscribed on a tablet of marble with several rude rhymes to the memory of the same race:

These likened twins in form and fancy one,
 Were like affected and like habits chose.
 Their valor at Newhaven seige was known,
 When both encountered fiercely with their foes.
 Then one of both sore wounded lost his breath,
 And t'other slain revenging brother's death."

The Tremaynes are said to come from Sydenham. (This is Sydenham Damerel, 4 miles N. W. of Tavistock in Devon.)

There is now no parish of St. Martin on the banks of Helford (? Milford) Haven.

Tremain is a parish 4 miles N. E. of Cardigan, Wales.

Tremaine is a parish 6 miles N. W. of Launceston, Cornwall.

St. Martin is 6 1-2 miles S. of Liskean, Cornwall.

St Martin is near Owesly, Shropshire.

THE FAMILY OF THE TREMAYNES.

The ancient family of Tremayne, originally of Cornwall, settled in Devonshire in consequence of a marriage with the heiress of Trenchard of Collacombe in the parish of Lamerton, where for many generations was the chief seat of the family.

The mansion, now used as a farmhouse, is of the style of the Elizabethan age, and in the parish church are some of their monuments.

* His will dated Oct. 27, 1576, proved 15 Dec., 1584. His widow Joan's will made at Ugbrooke 24 April, 1591, proved 25 July, 1593.

It is impossible here to enter into genealogical details and for these we must refer to Prince, nor can we do more than briefly notice the most distinguished individuals.

Wescot, in his manuscript View of Devonshire, informs us that one of this ancient family, whose Christian name he does not mention, founded an hospital in the western part of Tavistock in the reign of Richard II. and dedicated it to St. George.

But the most remarkable instances of distinguished individuals occur in the family of Thomas Tremayne, Esq., who had sixteen children, eight sons and eight daughters by his wife Philippa, who twice had twins. Their second son, Edmund, was servant to the Marquis of Exeter, when he was thrown into the Tower, and was put on the rack, with the view of extorting from him some confession; nothing, however, was elicited from him; and for his firmness on this occasion, when Elizabeth came to the throne he was made one of the Clerks of the Council. He also had an honorary salary settled upon him by the city of Exeter, for the good offices which they had received from him, and expected.

Richard, the fourth son and eldest of the first twins, was educated for the church at Exeter College, Oxford, and being deprived of his fellowship there, on account of his firm attachment to Protestant principles in the reign of Mary, he fled into Germany, but on the accession of Elizabeth, he returned to his college, where he received both his degrees in divinity at once. He was afterwards made Canon residentiary of Exeter Cathedral and also Treasurer of that church. He likewise became Vicar of Menheniot in Cornwall, and was esteemed an excellent preacher in his time. He died without issue in 1584.

Nicholas and Andrew were the second twins, then follows account of their similarity and death at Newhaven (Havre de Grace).

The most remarkable monument in Lamerton Church of the Tremayne family is that of Thomas Tremayne, wife Philippa and sixteen children.*

(FROM DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.)

EDMUND TREMAYNE (d. 1582), Clerk of the Privy Council, was second son of Thomas Tremayne, of Collacombe, Lamerton, Devonshire, where the Devonshire branch of this old Cornish family had been established since 1366. His mother was Philippi, eldest daughter of Roger Grenville, of Stowe. Of this marriage were born sixteen children, of whom four—Edmund, Richard and the twins, Nicholas and Andrew—acquired some reputation. The twins Andrew and Nicholas were strikingly alike, physically and mentally. The elder, Andrew, fled with Sir Peter Carew, on 25 Jan., 1554, and both were imprisoned on suspicion of piracy on 24 Feb., 1555, but escaped to France where they were pensioned by the French King. They were also implicated in the Sir Anthony Kingston plot in 1556. After Elizabeth's accession they entered her service. Andrew led a brilliant cavalry charge against the French at Leith in April, 1560, and was killed at Newhaven (Havre) on 18 July, 1562. Nicholas, who seems to have been a special favourite of Elizabeth, was frequently employed in carrying important despatches between France and England, and distinguished himself at the siege of Newhaven where he was killed on 26 May, 1562. Edmund entered the service of Edward Courtenay, Earl of Devonshire, in the autumn of 1553, but was committed to the Tower in February or March following, on suspicion of being concerned in Wyatt's rebellion. He was racked during the time Elizabeth was a prisoner in the Tower (Fox) but would not implicate her or Courtenay, his master. On Friday, 18 Jan., 1555, he was released with Sir Gawen Carew, the three sons of the late Duke of Northumberland and others. His fine (40 l.), was the lowest enforced. Tremayne seems to have joined Courtenay in Italy. Courtenay wrote from Venice on 2 May, 1556, "I am sorry for Tremayne's foolish departure, albeit satisfied and content therewith as he shall well perceive, but I trust the cause thereof will prove as you have written." This probably means that the Earl thought it foolish of Tremayne to leave England and lay himself open to a charge of treason. Courtenay died at Padua on 18 Sept., 1556, and it is possible that Tremayne entered the service of Francis, Earl of Bedford, who was in Venice in 1557. The appointment he received in 1561 of Deputy Butler for Devonshire must have been through the influence of the Earl of Bedford, then lord lieutenant of Devonshire. Tremayne spent some time at Elizabeth's court, and Burghley thought so highly of him that in July, 1569, he sent him on a special mission to Ireland, "to examine into the truth and let him know quietly the real condition of the country." Tremayne remained in Ireland until the close of 1569, writing frequently to Cecil on Irish affairs. On 3 May, 1571, he was sworn clerk of the Privy Council at Westminster. He wrote in June a paper entitled "Causes why Ireland is not Reformed," which was endorsed by Burghley with the words, "a good advice." Tremayne was returned M. P. for Plymouth (1572) with John Hawkyns. In June he drew up, with Lord Burghley, an important document, "Matters wherewith the Queen of Scots may be charged," from which Burghley's signature was afterwards erased. Tremayne succeeded to the family estates on his elder brother's death on 13 March, 1572. He still maintained a special interest in Irish affairs, and revisited the country late in 1573. (See "Instructions given to Mr. E. Tremayne upon his being sent to the Lord Deputy of Ireland by the Lord Treasurer," 1573, in Lambeth MSS.) The City of Exeter granted Tremayne in 1574 a reversion to Sir Gawen Carew's pension of 40 l. "in reward of their good services done this city." (Isaacke.) Carew outlived Tremayne, so the latter never benefited by the grant. The family mansion of Collacombe was altered and enlarged by him; the date 1574 still appears with the family arms and those of his royal mistress in the great hall. Tremayne was in 1578 senior of the four clerks to the Privy Council, but he chiefly resided in Devonshire, where he acted as commissioner for the restraint of grain and held other local offices. On 24 Oct., 1580, the Queen wrote from Richmond commanding him to assist Francis Drake in sending to London bullion brought into the realm by Drake, but leaving ten thousand pounds' worth in Drake's hands. This last instruction "to be kept most secret to himself alone." Tremayne made his will 17 Sept., 1582. The Earl of Bedford wrote to announce his death to Burghley a few days later. Burghley, in reply, described Tremayne as "a man worthy to be beloved for his honesty and virtues." In September, 1576, he married Eulalia, daughter of Sir John St. Leger of Annery. A son Francis, named after Tremayne's "Good Lord" Bedford, lived for only six weeks after his father, and at his death the estates passed to Degory, Edmund's third brother. Degory erected in 1588 a fine monument to his five brothers, Roger, Edmund, Richard and the twins, with their effigies well modelled and lifelike. Edmund appears as an elderly man with a refined and thoughtful face. Tremayne's "Discourses on Irish Affairs" remain unprinted among the Cottonian manuscripts at the British Museum.

RICHARD TREMAYNE (d. 1584), younger brother of Edmund, was fourth son (the younger of twins) of Thomas Tremayne. He was sent to Exeter College, Oxford, where he graduated B. A. in 1547-8. He was elected a fellow on March 28, 1553, and proceeded M. A. on July 17. He vacated his fellowship by flying to Germany in the first year of Mary's reign. On his epitaph he is stated to have "fled for the gospel's sake." He was at Louvain on Nov. 16, 1555, acting as tutor to Sir Nicholas Arnold's son. He was reckoned among the conspirators against the Queen, and on April 4, 1556, was declared a traitor with his brother Nicholas and others who were concerned in Sir Anthony Kingston's plot. Tremayne returned to England very soon after Elizabeth's accession, and was favourably regarded at court. He was made Archdeacon of Chichester by Elizabeth on April 7, 1559. Cecil had some correspondence with Sir Nicholas Throckmorton, ambassador in France, regarding Tremayne's employment in the diplomatic service, "he having the high Dutch tongue very well." But he stayed at home, and was ordained deacon by Grindal, Bishop of London, on Jan. 25, 1560. He had been re-elected fellow of his college on Oct. 17, 1559, but vacated his fellowship by absence the ensuing May. He was also presented by the college to the vicarage of Menheniot (Carew), and was installed treasurer of Exeter Cathedral on Feb. 10, 1560. For reasons not stated in the "Bishop's Register" he was deprived of his treasurer-ship, but re-installed on Oct. 27, 1561, and held the office until his death. He became rector of Doddiscombeleigh on Jan. 15, 1561, holding the living until 1564, when he resigned. Tremayne was something of a puritan. He sat in convocation as proctor for the clergy of Exeter, and signed the Canons establishing the Thirty-nine Articles. On Feb. 13 he spoke, and gave his two votes in favor of sweeping alterations in the Book of Common Prayer. He was elected fellow of Broadgate's Hall (afterwards Pembroke College), Oxford, on Feb. 20, 1565. On Feb. 15, 1566, he took the degree of B.D., proceeding D.D. on April 26. He became rector of Combe-Martin in 1569, and the Earl of Bedford vainly recommended him on July 23, 1570, to Cecil for the vacant bishopric of Exeter. Tremayne was buried on Nov. 30, 1584, at Lamerton, and his will proved on Dec. 15 at Exeter. On Sept. 19, 1569, he married Joanna, daughter of Sir Piers Courtenay of Ugbrooke. His only child, Mary, married Thomas Henslowe. He gave to Exeter College a copy of the polyglot Bibles in eight volumes, printed by Christopher Plantin at Antwerp, 1569-72, at the command of Philip II.

SIR JOHN TREMAVNE OF TREMAINE (d. 1694), lawyer, eldest son of Lewis Tremayne, Lieutenant Governor of Pendennis Castle, who married Mary, daughter and co-heiress of John Carew of Penwarne in Mevagissey, was born in the parish of St. Ewe, Cornwall. He was brought up to the study of the law, by 1678 was a man to be consulted, and soon acquired considerable practice. His name frequently occurs in cases before the House of Lords from 1689 to 1693; he was counsel for the crown against Sir Richard Graham, otherwise Lord Preston, and others for high treason, January 1690-1, was engaged for Sir John Germaine in the action brought against that adventurer by the Duke of Norfolk for adultery with the duchess, and he acted for the Crown on the trial of Lord Mohun, a brother Cornishman, for the murder of Mountford, the actor, January, 1693. Tremayne was called with others to be Sergeant-at-law on May 1, 1689, was made King's sergeant, and next day took the oaths, when he and his colleagues entertained the "nobility, judges, sergeants, and others with a dinner at Sergeant's Inn in Fleet Street," London. He was Knighted at Whitehall on Oct. 31, 1689, and in 1690 was returned to Parliament for the Cornish borough of Tre-gony. In June, 1692, he was a candidate for the recordership of London, but was beaten at the poll. It is recorded by Luttrell on Feb. 20, 1694, that Tremayne was dead. He died issueless. His brother's descendant now lives at Heligan, near Mevagissey (where the Sergeant rebuilt the family mansion), and inherits the ample estates in Cornwall and Devon. His useful volume, "Placita Coronae or Pleas of the Crown in matters Criminal and Civil," was published in 1723, many years after his death, when it had been "digested and revised by the late Mr. John Rice of Furnival's Inn." An English translation by Thomas Vickers came out in two volumes at Dublin in 1793. A collection by Tremayne of "Entries, declarations and pleadings" in the reigns of Charles II. and James II., numbering in all 182 pages, is at the British Museum.

JOSEPH TRUMAN (1631-1671), ejected minister and metaphysician, son of Richard and Mary Truman, was born at Gedling, near Nottingham, and baptized there on Feb. 2, 1631. His father, who held some public post in the place, got into difficulties by speaking disrespectfully of the "Book of Sports." Joseph was educated first by the minister of Gedling, and afterwards at the free school at Nottingham. He was admitted a pensioner at Clare College, Cambridge, on June 9, 1647, proceeded B.A. in 1650, and M.A. in 1654. He was made rector of Cromwell near Nottingham (probably by the Assembly of Divines, as his name does not appear on the institution books), some time after Dec. 4, 1656, when the former "minister of Cromwell" (Henry Trewman, instituted July 27, 1635), was buried. The similarity in the two names (or possibly identity with a variation in the spelling) suggests a family connection. After the passing of the Act of Uniformity in 1662, Truman, according to Calamy, declined to read the whole of the service in the Book of Common Prayer, because, he said, there were "lies in it": to prove his assertion, he quoted the collect for Christmas Day, and pointed out that not only was the birth of Christ stated to have taken place that day, but also on the following Sunday. The collect is said to have been amended in consequence, but in reality it had been altered by the Savoy Conference in 1661. Truman's successor in the rectory was instituted on Nov. 3, 1662. After his ejection he resided in Mansfield in order to be near his friend Robert Porter, and always attended the services of the established church. He refused, however, all offers of preferment, was frequently indicted for non-conformity, and was once unsuccessfully sued to an outlawry. He died at Sutton in Bedfordshire on July 19, 1671, and was buried in the chancel of the church there on July 21. In 1669 Truman published anonymously his first work, "The Great Propitiation," in which he endeavored to explain the Apostle Paul's theory of justification without works. He attached to his work (also anonymously) "A Discourse Concerning the Apostle Paul's meaning of 'Justification by Faith,'" in which he maintained that it was not intended "to exclude repentance and sincere obedience from being a condition of our justification," but that they were indeed included in the meaning of the word "faith." "The Great Propitiation" reappeared in London in 1671, 1672, and 1843. On the appearance early in 1670 of Bishop Bull's "Harmonia Apostolica," Truman felt that many of his positions were seriously assailed, and commenced at once to write an answer in English for private circulation. It was, however, published anonymously under the title of "An Endeavour to rectify some prevailing Opinions contrary to the Doctrine of the Church of England" (London, 1671). Truman's main contention was the all-sufficiency of the Mosaic law, which, he argued, was able not only to work true sanctification in man, but if rightly interpreted, to insure eternal life. Interpreted as a law of grace, it was no type or shadow, but the very gospel itself, to which the Sermon on the Mount had added nothing essential, and which remained in force to the present day. In the same year (1671) Truman, still with Bull's views in mind, published anonymously "A Discourse of Natural and Moral Impotency," in which he contended that whereas natural inability excuses from blame or guilt in proportion to its extent, moral inability aggravates it in like proportion.

consisting as it does in aversion of the will. The book was re-published with the writer's name in 1675 and again in 1834. Bull answered Truman at some length in his "Examen Censuræ," pp. 149 et seq. Truman's writings all exhibit close, subtle argumentation. He was a man of unusual learning and untiring diligence and industry.

The following letter is from J. Henry Lea, Esq., an American genealogist resident in London, England, who has been retained to ascertain the direct lineal ancestry of Joseph Truman of New London, Conn., (1666) and his connection with the Tremayne family of Cornwall, England. The result of his research will appear, inter-leaved, in this volume :

7 Pleasant Street, Taunton, Mass: 14 June, 1901.

DR. MURRAY E. POOLE, Ithaca, N. Y.

Dear Sir—Your note of the 5th inst. to Mr. Greenlaw has been forwarded to me by him for reply, and has just reached me at this place where I am detained at the deathbed of a near relative—a fact which must plead my excuse for a hurried and incoherent reply.

I should be very pleased to undertake your case and use my best efforts to solve it for you.

For the next two or three days my address will be as above, after that at my home at South Freeport, Maine, where letters will always reach me.

Truman, Treeman, Tremaine, etc., are probably all variants of a common name and you are no doubt correct in attributing its origin to Cornwall, where it is well known. You are probably familiar with the Tremaine pedigree as given in Col. Vivian's Cornwall Visitations, which book, while not strictly reliable, is very useful as a guide. I have a good correspondent in Devonshire who can obtain Exeter wills (covering Cornwall) without traveling expense from London, quite an item.

Please give me all possible detail known of Joseph Truman and his family on which to base my quest. Do you wish detailed report of search or simply the sifted results of value?

Awaiting your further advice in the matter I remain, Sir,

Yours faithfully,

J. HENRY LEA.

JOSEPH TRUMAN OF NEW LONDON, CONN. (1666.)

1. JOSEPH TRUMAN. His ancestors lived anciently in Cornwall, England. He was born in Nottinghamshire, England. He married in England but neither his wife's name, nor the name of her family, has yet been ascertained. He appeared with his wife, and perhaps some of his children, at New London, Conn., in 1666. In the following year he was chosen Constable, a position of considerable honor in those days. He purchased in 1667 from Alex. Piggins, and about 1670 from Hugh Roberts, some pits for tanning, which were located in a meadow near the entrance of Cape Ann Lane. Truman Brook and Truman Street are named after him and his family. He had two tanneries, one at each end of this street on Truman Brook. The brook ran into Bream Cove near the Hempstead lot. He appears as plaintiff in law suits in Oct., 1682; May, 1683; Oct., 1683, and May, 1685. He died in 1697 at New London, Conn. In his will, executed in Sept., 1696, he mentions four children, Joseph, Thomas, Elizabeth and Mary, his daughter Ann having died before the will was made. In a note-book, now in the possession of Lucy E. Greene of Denver, Col., which was owned by her great-grandfather, Jonathan Truman, appears the following entry in 1822: "Jonathan Truman, owner of this book, is the son of Jonathan Truman, born at New London, June 25, 1730. He was the son of Thomas Truman who was also born at New London. His father who was named Joseph, came to America from England (Nottinghamshire), in company with a brother who settled in Virginia. He left at New London two sons, Joseph and Thomas, and a number of daughters. Public Records of the Colony of Connecticut say:

"Trueman, Joseph. Oct., 1682. Whereas Joseph Trueman has complained to this Court that he is greatly prejudiced by an execution that was served upon John Higly, for a judgment of court he recovered against him at New London, September 20th, '81, for 26 gallons of Rume and cost of court, one pound ten shillings and sixpence, the execution being levied upon two hundred seventy one yardes of old statute lace, and apprized to answer the judgment.—The Court having veiwed the execution and the lace cannot judg it of a quarter of the value of the judgment, and therefore that righteousness may be attended in this case doe order that the Marshall doe return the lace to the sayd Higly, and that he demand him to present the estate granted by judgment, and in defect or want of that estate some other good and pasable estate he is to present for execution, and if he doe refuse to make such presentation, the Marshall is to levy the execution upon the body of the sayd Higly; and this Court appoynts Mr. John Loomys and Tho. Stoton and Mr. John Fyler to be apprizers of what shall be seized by execution."

"Trueman, Joseph. May, 1683. In answer to John Higley's request, This Court haveing October last, ordered a new execution to goe out against Higley's estate to answer a judgment of court Joseph Trueman obteyned against Mr. Higley at New London court. Sepr 20, 1681. This Court doe now see reason to repeale the former order for a new execution and doe grant Joseph Trueman liberty to prosecute his case against John Higley, by way of appeale, at the Court of Assistants; October next."

"Trueman, Joseph. Oct., 1683. Upon the petition of Mr. Steven Richardson that he might have liberty to appeale from the judgment of the county court at New London, June last, wherein Joseph Trueman was plntf. against him, This Court haveing considered the petition of Mr. Richardson, and findeing that that Court where Mr. Richardson did reveiw to, fell, by the providence of God. This Court grants that Mr. Richardson should have liberty to appeale from the afoarsd judgment of the court, to the next Court of Assistants in May, providing he enter his appeale in the records of the court of New London and give the sayd Trueman timely notice thereof."

"Trueman, Joseph. May, 1685. In answer to the motion of Richard Edwards, this Court grants Joseph Truman liberty to prosecute John Higly at the Court of Assistants in October next."

History of New London, Conn., Caulkins, 1852, says:

"Truman, Joseph. Hugh Roberts was a tanner, and had his pits or vats in a meadow near the entrance of Cape Ann Lane. His establishment was purchased about 1670, by Joseph Truman."

"Truman, Joseph. Persons who are mentioned as inhabitants. In 1667, appear John Baldwin, Peter Treby, Joseph Truman and John Wheeler."

"Truman, Joseph. Patent of New London sanctioned by the Governor and Company, 14 Oct., 1704. Seventy seven names are registered in the patent of which Joseph Truman is one."

"Truman, Joseph. Joseph Truman died in 1697. Joseph Truman came to New London in 1666, and was chosen constable the next year. Truman's Brook and Truman Street are names derived from him and his family. He had a tannery at each end of this street on Truman's Brook and the brook which ran into Bream Cove, near the Hempstead lot. In his will, executed in September, 1696, he mentions four children: Joseph, Thomas, Elizabeth and Mary. Neither his marriage, nor the births of his children are in the town registry."

Savage's Genealogical Dictionary says:

"Joseph Truman, New London 1666, constable 1667, died in 1697, made his will in Sept. 1696, mentions children Joseph, Thomas, Elizabeth, Mary and Ann, all perhaps born before he went thither. Joseph, New London, son of the preceding, m. 5 Dec., 1701, Mary Shapley, d. of Benjamin."

7. JOSEPH TRUMAN. (Joseph.) 2. He married, Dec. 5, 1701, Mary Shapley (daughter of Capt. Benjamin Shapley and Mary Picket of New London, Conn., son of Nicholas and Ann Shapley of Boston. Mary Picket was the daughter of Capt. John Picket and Ruth Brewster, daughter of Hon. Jonathan Brewster, Assistant, and Lucrecia Oldham, of New London, son of Elder William and Mary Brewster of Plymouth Colony.) She was born March 26, 1677, at New London. He was a tanner. It is recorded that Joseph Truman and others received a grant of land Oct. 14, 1704, from the Governor and Company of the General Court, by authority of Letters Patent, to them given by Charles II, dated April 23, 1663. An order was made, April 10, 1711, by the Governor and Council to pay him a sum of money out of the treasury of the colony. Also another order in Sept., 1711, on the treasurer of the colony, to pay him for leather furnished to the colony for shoes for the soldiers in the Indian wars. He was a constable in 1724. He was sent by the people of New London to Gov. J. Talcott, Dec. 28, 1730, to obtain money from the treasury of the colony to build a battery at New London.

Colonial Records of Connecticut say :

"Truman, Joseph. 1710. At a meeting of the Governour and Council in New London, Sept. the 29th, 1710. Ordered, that Richard Christophers, Esqr. pay the several sums following, viz. To Joseph Truman, 7 shillings, 9 pence."

"Truman, Joseph. April, 1711. At a meeting of the Governour and Council in New London, April 13th, 1711. Ordered pay out of the colony's money in his hands, to the persons hereafter named. To Joseph Truman, 3 shillings, 6 pence."

"Trueman, Joseph. Sept. 1711. Ordered, that the treasurer do pay out of the colony treasury to Mr. Joseph Trueman of New London, the sum of three pounds and twelve shillings, money, for eight pieces or sides of leather which he furnished our Indian souldiers with, for shoes, that are gone on the present expedition."

"Trueman, Joseph. July, 1724. On account of service done by Joseph Trueman, constable of New London, for pressing of men and horses, dated June 24th, 1724, amounting to one pound, fifteen shillings, was examined in Council, and all that was certain in it was reduced to five shillings, and an order made out for the said five shillings to be paid him:"

Conn. Hist. Soc. Collections say :

"Truman, Mr. Committee for building battery at New London, to Governor Talcott. New London, Decembr 28th, 1730. Honoured Sir : Therefore we pray your Honour in Council to send us some money down by the bearer, Mr. Truman. (Signed) J. Plumbe, Jno. Pickett, Richd. Christophers, Committee."

"A letter from J. Talcott to Capt. Hez. Wyllys directs him to send an Act relating to drawing money out of the treasury for the building the battery at N. London, and send it by the bearer, Mr. Truman. No date."

He married, July 30, 1785, at Alford, Mass., Mary McLellan (daughter of John McLellan of Alford, Mass., and Hillsdale, N. Y.) She was born Nov. 5, 1767. He was a soldier of the Revolution. At the age of sixteen years, he enlisted Sept. 5, 1777, as a private soldier in Captain Aaron Rowley's Company of Col. John Brown's Mass. Reg't., serving 24 days, at northward of Pawlet, and was honorably discharged Sept. 29, 1777. After his removal to New York State he joined the Second Regiment of the Line, commanded by Colonel Philip Van Cortlandt of New York, and was assigned to the Fifth Company where he served till the close of the War. He was one of the picked company selected by Washington himself to accompany Gen. Anthony Wayne in his hazardous and successful attack on Stony Point. He was one of the advanced guard under Lieutenant Gibbon, a forlorn hope, in which he acquitted himself as a cautious and brave soldier in an extremely dangerous service. He also accompanied that brilliant young Irishman to whom due credit has never been given, Gen. John Sullivan, with over one-third of the Continental Army, in his Indian Expedition in 1779, to punish the Six Nations. He was successively Corporal, Sergeant and Sergeant Major. He was also honored with a Badge of Merit. He served five years and two months and after his death his widow applied, Feb. 16, 1839, for a pension which was granted. He received for his war services six hundred acres of land, located in what was then the County of Herkimer. This land is now in part occupied by the Village of Trumansburg, N. Y. It was named after the family and was once called "Tremaine's Village" but in making out his commission as Post Master the name of the place was misspelled "Trumansburg" and so it has remained. He came in 1792, with his wife, three children, his brother Philip and Philip's son Benjamin, and his wife's brother, John McLallen, with his bounty warrant and took possession of his land. He immediately commenced clearing up his land and in 1794 built a grist mill procuring the necessary machinery from Chenango Point, now Binghamton, N. Y. It was on his homeward journey that he froze his feet so that one of them had to be amputated. He built his first log cabin on a site opposite the present M. E. Church where he subsequently built a frame house which is still standing.

CAPTURE OF STONY POINT

New York in the Revolution says :

"Trimmins, Abner. Private in Colonel Philip Van Cortlandt's Second Regiment of the New York Line."

Washington Records say :

"Department of the Interior, Bureau of Pensions, Washington, D. C., February 24, 1893. Sir:—Referring to your communication received in this Bureau by the reference of Hon. A. C. Hopkins in which you request information concerning the military history of Abner Treman a soldier of the Revolutionary War. I have to state that his widow Mary McLallen (maiden name) was granted a pension for his services in that war as a private in the Second New York Regiment for five years and two months. Dates of enlistment and discharge, officers under whom service was rendered and battles engaged in not mentioned. It appears that he was honored with a Badge of Merit for three years faithful service. In the widow's application for pension dated Feby. 16th, 1839, she states that she was married to the soldier July (30) thirtieth, 1785, at Alford, Mass., and that he died August 18th, 1823. Very respectfully, Charles P. Lincoln, Deputy Commissioner."

"Landmarks of Tompkins County" says of him :

"Abner Treman passed his boyhood and reached the age of responsibility just as the struggle for freedom by the American colonies was being inaugurated and with four brothers patriotically assumed his share in the memorable contest. He was sixteen years of age when he enlisted in Col. Van Cortlandt's Regiment and was assigned to the Fifth Company, serving until the close of the war. His courage, firmness and ability were such that he was selected by Gen. Washington himself, as one of those to assist in the capture of Stony Point, on the Hudson River. General Wayne was in command of the expedition; Lieutenant Colonel Fleury had the immediate command of the right wing, which was composed of one hundred and fifty volunteers, and these were led by twenty men under Lieutenant Gibbon as a forlorn hope. Of these twenty men Abner Treman was one. He was in General Sullivan's army and accompanied him on his expedition through the Wyoming Valley and up the Susquehanna. He was successively corporal, sergeant and sergeant-major. It appears from the records at Washington that he was honored with a

Badge of Merit for faithful service. He received as a bounty for his services in the Continental Army six hundred acres of land located in what was then the County of Herkimer. The Indian title had been extinguished, and the State of New York had divided a large tract of land into twenty-eight townships of one hundred lots each, and each lot containing six hundred and sixty acres of land, to pay, as a bounty, to her soldiers who were in the army of the Revolution. Abner Treman's number drawn was Lot No. 2, Township No. 22. It proved to be a strip of land three-fourths of a mile wide, and about two miles in length, on which is now located the beautiful village of Trumansburg, N. Y. He came in 1792 with his wife, three children, his brother Philip and Philip's son Benjamin and his wife's brother, John McLallen, with his bounty warrant to take possession of his land. He immediately commenced clearing up his land and gave a man a deed of one hundred acres of it for one year's service to work it. In 1794 he concluded to build a grist mill, and went east to Chenango Point, now Binghamton, to purchase the necessary machinery. On his return he stopped all night at Davenport's tavern which was located a mile from Ithaca on West Hill. It was in the month of February, and there came on a snow storm which covered the ground about two feet deep. He left the tavern at nine o'clock in the morning; after walking all day and until about midnight he arrived at the house of Mr. Wayburn on Goodwins point, and about two miles from home. He could go no farther, he was exhausted, frozen and nearly dead. They kindly cared for him but imprudently put his feet into warm water; one of them had to be cut off and it was this that made him a cripple for life. Abner Treman took up land on the site of what is now the village of Trumansburg. The settlement at this point has had several names, but its present one is derived wholly from the fact of Mr. Treman's settlement there. It was first called 'McLallen's Tavern,' and it is said that at one time it was known as 'Shin Hollow.' Upon the authority of Dewitt Clinton it was also, and much more appropriately, known at an early day as 'Tremain's Village.' Just how or when the final transition to its present name occurred is not known. Mr. Treman had married Mary McLallen, daughter of John McLallen, several years before his migration westward. For their dwelling he built the first house on a lot opposite the present M. E. Church. It was of course a primitive log cabin, its roof covered with bark. There several of his children were born and on the same lot he eventually erected the house which is still standing. It has been written of Abner Treman that he was a man of marked characteristics, full of life and animal spirit, of robust physique and powerful voice, brusque and sometimes rough in speech, generous and charitable, yet exacting as to his rights; he was respected by all good citizens and feared by the bad. The blood that flowed in his veins was good and strong and he transmitted to his posterity the sterling qualities which he possessed in so eminent a degree, and his children and children's children in turn became prominent and representative people wherever they lived."

The following is from the pen of a noted local historian :

"Recollections of Abner Treman. [From the Ithaca Daily Journal, November 28, 1877.] A Tompkins County Revolutionary Hero. Editors Journal: Having written a few incidents of the early settlement of Ithaca, it has given me an opportunity of learning the history of not only its early settlers but one of the heroes of the Revolution. I have stated before that on the platform, which contained the officers of the day, (on our Fourth of July celebrations of over fifty years ago), men were seen who had fought to establish us as a nation. One of them who used to be there with his wooden leg, was Abner Treman (or Tremain, as it was then spelled) whose history, most of which I have learned from his son Jared Treman, now living at Trumansburg. Mr. Abner Treman was born in Columbia county, New York, in 1761, and at the early age of sixteen enlisted in the Continental army in the year 1777, serving nearly six years, or until the war was finished and received his discharge signed by Gen. Washington. He was the grandfather of Leonard Treman, Lafayette L. Treman, and Elias Treman, who have been residents of Ithaca for over forty years, and who were born in this county. I will commence his history on events that happened ninety-eight years ago but I might say that it would have commenced an hundred years before (1778) at the battle of Monmouth, if he had not been sent to the hospital, as being sick with the smallpox, a few days previous. His courage, firmness and ability were such that he was selected by Gen. Washington himself, as one of those who were to take a hand in the capture of the fort, that was located on Stony Point, on the Hudson river, (you will permit me, Mr. Editor, to take a little from history of its situation, and the manner that it was captured, on the night of the 15th of July, 1779, that we may better understand the hazard our hero underwent in that battle.) It is several years since I have seen the Point, but it is well named Stony Point, for it is covered with stones, and is about 300 feet in height. It was Washington's plan to have taken another fort at the same time, but that failed, as the men did not come to time. If the Americans could have taken both forts, they would have made it difficult for the English war ships to go up the Hudson river, and would have given the American army the ferry at that point of the river. It was Washington that planned the taking of the fort and selected the men for the difficult task, and he well knew that if taken at all, it must be by surprise. Six weeks previous the English had taken it from the Americans, and had placed there six hundred men who were building and adding to it breastworks for large cannon; there was also built half way up the hill an abatis of two rows of sharpened trees. There had also been placed there a considerable quantity of stores. General Wayne was put in command of the expedition. Lieutenant Colonel Fleury (a Frenchman) had the immediate command of the right wing, which was composed of one hundred and fifty volunteers, and these were led by twenty men under Lieutenant Gibbon as a forlorn hope. Of these twenty men, Abner Treman was one. They had to pick their way up the stony hill and when they came to the abatis it was their duty to make a way through it for others to follow. The left wing was composed of one hundred volunteers led by twenty men constituting another forlorn hope under Lieutenant Knox. At half past eleven at night orders were given to march. On the right wing was Commanding General Wayne with Lieutenant Colonel Fleury, and Treman says: 'that as the forlorn hope of twenty men, under Gibbon, passed Col. Fleury to take the lead up the hill, he took each one of them by the hand, and with tears gave them a parting kiss. That there might be no confusion, Gen. Washington had directed that each man should have pinned on his cap a piece of white paper, and every gun was unloaded, the bayonet only to be used,' and Treman said, 'that instead of a flint he only had a piece of wood put in its place. When the right wing came to the abatis, they encountered the out-post of the enemy. Gen. Wayne was wounded and seventeen out of twenty of the forlorn hope were either killed or wounded. Treman was one of the three who were unhurt. Major Murphy, with his men came to the rescue, and within an hour the fort was taken with the loss of fifteen killed and eighty-three wounded. The British had twenty men killed, seventy-four wounded, fifty-eight missing, and four hundred and seventy-two taken prisoners with stores valued at $150,640. Mr. Abner Treman had an older brother in the army who, after the fort was taken, remarked to him, 'Abner, I would rather have seen you dead than to have you been a coward and not gone with that forlorn hope.' And whose heart would not move with emotions of pride and pleasure, if he could say that 'my father's father was there'?

"We have all read of Sullivan's expedition through this country in 1779. Abner Treman was one of the soldiers of that army, whether he came up the Susquehanna with Gen. Sullivan from Wyoming valley, or was with Gen. James Clinton, who started from Canajoharie, on the Mohawk river, and went over to the Otsego Lake, and came down the Susquehanna, I am not able to say: but the two armies met at Tioga Point (now Athens) and formed an army of about five thousand men. The battle of Chemung was fought on the 29th of August, 1779, near Elmira.

"In reading the history of the battle it appears that on the side of the Indians there were more white men than Indians. It is not necessary for me to enter into the particulars of that march, but it was finished in the month of September, about the 28th. There must have been about six hundred of that army in Ithaca. Mr. Jared Treman says, 'that his father's Colonel was Col. Courtland,' and that he visited them at Trumansburg, after they settled there. Mr. George W. Schuyler remarks 'that his father had a cousin by the name of Courtland in that army, as Colonel, who camped on South Hill, near Aurora street bridge. The Tuscaroras who were scattered, lived two miles up the Inlet; those at the head of the lake being the Cayugas. There are two names that will always remain green in connection with that expedition, Horseheads from the number of horses' heads found there, which were left by the army, and Pony Hollow from the number of ponies found there, that had also been left by them.

"Abner Treman came here in 1792, settled, and made this his home, a number of years before there was even a township organized, and this section was in the county of Herkimer. The Indian title had been extinguished, and the State of New York had divided a large tract of land into twenty-eight townships of one hundred lots each, and each lot containing 640 acres of land, to pay, as a bounty to her soldiers who were in the army of the Revolution. Abner Treman's number drawn was Lot No. 2, Township No. 22. It proved to be a strip of land three-fourths of a mile wide, and about two miles in length, on which is now located the beautiful village of Trumansburg. He came in 1792 with his wife, three children, and his wife's brother, (a Mr. McLallen), with his bounty warrant to take possession of his land. His title was of the best as was his land. He immediately commenced clearing up his land and gave a man a deed of one hundred acres of it, for one year's service to work on it. In 1794 he concluded to build a grist mill, and went east to Chenango Point, now Binghamton, to purchase the necessary machinery, that could not be made at the farm. On his return he stopped all night at Davenport's tavern, which was located a mile from here on West Hill. It was in the month of February, and there came on a snow storm which covered the ground about two feet deep. He left the tavern at nine o'clock in the morning, after walking all day and until about midnight he arrived at the house of Mr. Wayburn on Goodwins Point, and about two miles from home. He could go no farther, he was exhausted, frozen, and nearly dead. They kindly cared for him, and as far as they knew did what was for the best, but they imprudently put his feet into warm water, one of them had to be cut off and it was this that made him a cripple for life. He died August 18th, 1823, aged 61 years. W. T. Eddy."

The following letter was written by a grandson :

"Mecklenburg, N. Y., Mar. 22d, 1876.

"Dear Son : I learn from Erastus Treman today that in the early settlement of this country as he was informed by Grandfather Abner Treman and also his nephew, Benj. Treman, that Phillip Treman, a brother of Abner Treman, and Phillip's son Benj. came to this country on foot, about the year 1792 or 3, from about 30 miles north of Albany, each with a gun and an ax and provisions for 30 days and one dollar in money, having only 6 cts. left upon their arrival here in the month of June and Phillip, as he says, struck the first blow by any white man at or near Trumansburg. They cut down about 8 acres of timber on the east bank of the creek in Trumansburg where the M. E. church now stands.

"They came back there in the fall of the same year and cleared up the timber that they had cut before, saving enough and putting up the body of a log house on the N. W. cor. opposite the now Meth. church and sowed the land to wheat, my grandfather, Abner Treman, giving them each 50 acres of his land for coming here and settling with him. Grandfather came here the next spring from Chenango Co., starting with oxen and sleigh in the month of Febry, 1793 or 4, and arrived here about the first of March, with his family, wife and 3 children, after living in Chenango Co. one year, having moved there the year before from Columbia Co. Says there were quite a good many Indians here at that time.

"Late in the fall of the same year Grandfather, Abner Treman, took his oxen down to what is now Ithaca to have them kept there on the marsh through the winter, and in returning from there late at night froze both his legs, rendering amputation necessary of both legs, one below the knee, the other the front part of the foot.

"GEORGE B. TREMAN."

The following letter was written by Abner's son Jared :

"Trumansburg, Nov. 24th, 1877.

"Dear Nephew :—I believe Uncle John McLallen built the first frame house and Wm. Treman cut the first tree. But who cleared the first land I don't know. Father gave Jesse Herriman one hundred acres of land for one year's work. Father built his first house or shanty down by the creek. I think he did not live there long. I know there used to be peach trees there, where I used to get peaches when a lad. Father built a log house within a few feet of the house he lived in when he died. I remember when they used to have dances or balls there. Wm. Atwater and Isaac Varna and many others would attend. Father's frame house now stands in center of village ; was raised in 1806. I think if Mr. Eddy will call on Mrs. James McLallen she will let him look over James' genealogical record; he will get more information than he can anywhere else. James was better posted than any one that I know and had the record of many events. If you ever come here (it don't look as if you ever would) I would go over there with you and you could look for yourself. I think it would be very interesting to you as he had I think nearly two ledgers full of events or things that transpired during his lifetime. I think Leonard, Lafayette and Elias would be well paid for their trouble to see for themselves. Nothing more at present, good by.

"Yours, etc.,

"JARED TREMAN."

The History of Four Counties, so-called, says :

"Feb. 18, 1819, Abner Treman gave a deed to the First Presbyterian Church of Ulysses three-quarters of an acre of land for $100, for cemetery purposes, where the 'Old Cemetery' now is, reserving certain rights that the following quotation from the deed will explain : 'It is hereby agreed between the Trustees of the First Presbyterian Church of Ulysses, in the County of Tompkins, and Abner Treman, of said town, that the said Abner Treman, his heirs and assigns, shall have the exclusive privilege of pasturing the premises within described forever, provided that the said Abner Treman, his heirs and assigns, shall not put into the said ground anything but calves and sheep ; the said Abner Treman, his heirs and assigns, yielding and paying therefor yearly, and every year, on the first day of May in each year, one pepper-corn.'" The same work says :

"The tombstone of Abner Treman contains the following inscription : 'This monument is erected to Abner Treman, died Aug. 13, 1823, aged 61 years. A native of Columbia Co., N. Y. A soldier of the Revolution, in Colonel Courtland's Regiment, and merited lot No. 2, Ulysses, where his remains repose. He was the first settler in Trumansburg, in 1792, from whom it takes its name.'

"Abner Treman erected the first grist mill, in 1794. Part of the timbers are still (1878) to be seen, a little above the stone mill of J. W. Bouton, in the village of Trumansburg."

The following in regard to Abner Treman is from the Trumansburg Free Press of May 12, 1894 :

"One hundred years ago this winter Abner Treman brought from the East the first grist-mill erected in this township, in fact, the first mill between Owego and Geneva. The winter was exceptionally severe, and Mr. Treman was so badly frozen on his trip that it became necessary to amputate one of his feet. This was in the second year of the history of Trumansburg.

"The amputation was performed by Dr. Lewis Halsey, then a young physician of Seneca County, son of Hon. Silas Halsey, the first physician and one of the earliest settlers in the country between the lakes.

"When Dr. Halsey was called by Mr. Treman, and saw that amputation was necessary, he said to him: 'You had better send for some one else. I am a young man and have not had the necessary experience.' But the old soldier had so much confidence in his young friend that he replied: 'Whoever else you get, I want you to take it off.' Then the young surgeon went to work and was just ten minutes in performing the operation and ligating the arteries."

The Souvenir of the Trumansburg (N. Y.) Reunion (1897) says of him:

"In mid-winter 1792, a revolutionary soldier living in Columbia county, resolved to brave the dangers and privations of a journey to the 'far west' and personally occupy the square mile of land for which he held the grant, and had located—on the map. Abner Treman was no common man; he came from good stock, had proved his worth on the battle field, was in the very prime of his young manhood, full of that spirit of patriotism, progress and expansion that gave the nation her freedom and has made her the pride of its people, the admiration of its sister nations and the terror of its foes.

"Mr. Treman was at this time thirty-one years old and his family consisted of a wife, Mary McLallen, two children and a brother-in-law, John McLallen, a lad nineteen years old. With this little family and all their earthly possessions, in a sleigh drawn by two horses he turned his face westward and began a journey that was the opening of a new life. After weeks of toilsome journeying in the beginning of the first month of spring, he for the first time saw the country that was to be the home of him and his generations. Just at night-fall after a beautiful day the little caravan emerged from the forest on the hills to the south of what is now Ithaca. Out to the north and west lay the beautiful Cayuga. On its glassy surface was mirrored the dense forests which for as far as the eye could reach lined either shore. Masses of towering pine stood like sentinels in the midst of oak, hickory and maple, whose bare and leafless branches seemed to seek shelter under the evergreen of its stalwart neighbor. At their feet lay the plain, buried under its snowy mantle, across which, somewhere out among the hills beyond but a few miles away, lay the haven of their hopes and destiny. The following day the hill was descended, the swampy plain crossed and striking an old Indian trail along the west bank of the Lake, night found them at Goodwin's Point, eight miles down the Lake, and the guests of Mr. Weyburn, who had located there the summer before. They were most hospitably entertained, and their joy on finding that they were to have at least one neighbor, can be imagined. From Goodwin's to their destination there was no trail, but Mr. Weyburn kindly offered his services as a guide, and the next day the party halted in the dense wood, near the center of Mr. Treman's grant, on the very spot where now stands the Cooper house, Main street. Here Mr. Treman struck his ax into a tree, saying, "Here I build my home," and here he did build it, a rude log hut with no windows or doors; but it was home; and from that little hut sprang the great race of Tremans. Trumansburg was born.

"The following year Mr. Treman returned as far east as Utica, where he purchased a set of mill-stones and the machinery for a grist-mill. On his return he became lost in the wilderness, and when found was so badly frozen that amputation of one foot was found to be necessary. It is tradition that the operation was performed by a carpenter with the ordinary tools of his trade.

"This first mill, erected in 1794, was the nucleus around which grew in a comparatively short time quite a settlement. The mill was built of logs on the site of the present Stone Mill. Its construction was of the simplest possible character. There was but one run of stone, and no elevators or conveyors of any description. The grain was emptied directly into the hopper and the product found its way by gravity through the various processes to the bag of the customer. In those days a grist-mill was the center of civilization for a large extent of territory which was being rapidly cleared and settled, and as one industry naturally opens the field for others so it was here. A blacksmith shop, shoe shop, carpenter shop, tailor shop and tavern soon followed, and in five years from the time that Abner Treman struck the first blow with his ax he saw clustered around him a busy hive of industrious workers."

FREMAN HOMES HEAD, FRYMANSBURG, N. Y.

At the time of his death the Ithaca Journal said of him :

“Abner Tremain was a hardy and brave soldier of the Revolution. In this character he served in the regular army with fidelity and honor, till he obtained a proper discharge. His arm helped to achieve that independence, and those social advantages, which we now enjoy. God shielded him in the day of battle. The savage shout, and the clangor of arms, were not permitted to announce the period of his mortality. Unlike many of his fellow-soldiers, he preserved the lands which he merited and received for his military services, at the hands of a grateful country. Improved by his industry and economy, they are now chiefly possessed by his bereft widow and offspring. The deceased was one of the earliest settlers in his town. He experienced, in an eminent degree, the hardship and privations incident to such enterprizes. He has moved in most of our social circles. We have long known and respected him as a neighbor and friend. But the ardent eye of the soldier is suffused in the darkest shades! The warrior’s powerful arm is palsied! While the companions of Washington and Warren, of Greene and Montgomery, are falling in rapid succession to the tomb, the bosom of the patriot heaves a sigh, and his eye drops a tear over the frailty of man.”

Calendar of Land Papers of New York says :

“Abner Tremain and others, in Nov., 1791, gave a power of attorney to Jasper Hopper, to obtain their warrants from the United States for lands to which they were severally entitled, and when obtained to assign the same to the Surveyor General, for the use of the people of the State of New York.”

The following is a certified copy of Abner Treman’s deed for his bounty lands :

The following in regard to Abner Treman and the name of Trumansburg is from the Ithaca Journal :

"The subjoined description of Ithaca and vicinity, in 1810, is taken from the private journal of DeWitt Clinton, written during his journey through this state as one of the commissioners appointed by the legislature to explore the country between the Lakes and the navigable waters of the Hudson, and to report upon the most eligible route for a water communication.

"Governor Clinton arrived at Tremain's Village (Trumansburg) on August 10, 1810, and passed the two succeeding days in Ithaca and vicinity.

"Concerning this locality at that date the journal reads as follows :

"We dined at Tremain's Village, so called from the soldier who owns the lot for military service. He resides here and is proprietor of the mills, and in good circumstances. The village has several houses, three taverns, and two or three stores, and mills in a ravine or hollow, formed by a creek which runs through it. It is in the town of Ulysses, and was formerly called Shin Hollow, by some drunken fellows, who, on the first settlement, frequented a log-tavern here, and on their way home broke their shins on the bad roads.' "

The following lines are from a poem by Rev. Lewis Halsey, D.D., at the Trumansburg Reunion. Aug. 18-19, 1897, printed in the Free Press of that date :

"The very family whose fame
Gave to Old Trumansburg its name,
Has almost disappeared from view
In Trumansburg we call the new."

He married (1st) Abigail Spellman, (daughter of Elijah Spellman of Sheffield, Mass.) Soldier in a Massachusetts Regiment in the Revolution. He was a soldier from Conn. and drew a pension while residing in New York State. He was also a soldier in Mass.

The following is from Mass. Soldiers and Sailors in the Revolution :

365. DAVID TRUMAN. (Benjamin<sup>3</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, Joseph<sup>1</sup>.) 77. Soldier in Rev. War.

Connecticut in the Revolution says of him :

"David Truman. Enlisted May 26, 1777, for the term of the war, in Capt. Ezekiel Sanford's Company of Redding, Conn.; in Col. Philip Burr Bradley's Rfd. Reg. (See David Freeman. Don't seem to be certain of Truman or Freeman.)"

Record of service of Connecticut men, in the War of the Revolution, War of 1812, and Mexican War, compiled by authority of the General Assembly, Hartford, 1889, says :

"Fifth Regiment 'Connecticut Line.' Formation of 1777-1781. Regiment raised for the 'Continental Line' of '77, to continue through the War. Recruited largely in Fairfield and Litchfield Counties with men from all parts of the state. Rendezvous Danbury; went into camp at Peekskill in spring of '77 and in September ordered to Pennsylvania with McDougal's brigade. Engaged in the battle of Germantown, Oct. 4th, '77, and suffered some loss. Assigned to Huntington's Brigade and wintered at Valley Forge '77-'78. On June 28, '78, present at battle of Monmouth and went into camp at Redding '78-'79. In operation of '79 served in Heath's wing east of the Hudson; its Light Co. under Capt. St. John detached to Meigs's Light Regt. Wintered at Morristown, '79-'80, and in the following summer served in Conn. Division with main army on both sides of the Hudson. Wintered '80-'81 at 'Camp Connecticut', village near Robinson's House opposite West Point; there consolidated for formation of '80-'83."

"Name, David Trueman. Company, Capt. Sanford's. Enlistment, May 26, 1777. Term, War. Remarks, See David Freeman."

"David Freeman, Company Sanford, enlisted May 26, 1777, for the War. Second Regiment 'Connecticut Line', David Freeman, paid from January 1st, '81 to Dec. 31st, '81. This David Freeman (or Trueman) was a private, and the status is that this (regiment) formed from the Fifth and Seventh Regiments of previous formation."

Again on page 364, under "Size Roll of Capt. Robinson's Company, Feb. 1st, 1783," is David Freeman. Resides Middletown. Enlisted May 24, 1777 for the War. (This is evidently not the David Freeman of the first quotation.) And again, on page 496 there is a David Freeman in Capt. Shepherd's Company which marched March 31st, 1777, and was discharged May 19th. This also not likely the first David Freeman. Again page 634, in the list of pensioners is David Freeman, private, on the pension rolls in 1818.

This ends the clear references relating to David Freeman, to which name reference is made under David Trueman, it being very probable that the first was believed by the compiler to be the same man, or possibly the same.

370. DR. THOMAS TRUMAN. (Jonathan<sup>1</sup>, Thomas<sup>2</sup>, Joseph<sup>3</sup>.) He married Jan. 31, 1773, by Rev. J. She was born at Trumansburg, Dec. 19th, 1799; moved to Mecklenburg after her marriage, and from there, in 1858, to Ithaca, where she has since resided. Mrs. Treman was marked by unusual religious earnestness, and her life was characterized, more than anything else, by her service and interest in such matters. Early in life she became a member of the Baptist Church and was an earnest and ardent supporter of its teachings until her death. For many years she was prominently identified with the Mecklenburg Baptist Church, being the leader of its music, and increasing in many ways its usefulness. Since her removal to Ithaca, she has been a beloved member of the Park Church of this place; a society she dearly loved, and to whose prosperity she has been, in every way ever since her connection with it, a generous contributor. Her attendance at church was something remarkable, being maintained long after the infirmities of age had made it hazardous. She was trained in the old school of religious expression, and the fervor and depth of feeling which characterized her utterances on all religious themes, will not soon be forgotten."

He died Nov. 14, 1837, at the comparatively early age of 41 years, at Mecklenburg. She died Sept. 15, 1887, at Ithaca, N. Y. Residence Mecklenburg, N. Y.

560. JARED TREMAN. (Abner<sup>4</sup>, John<sup>3</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, Joseph<sup>1</sup>.) 307. He was born Oct. 5, 1800. He married (1st), Nov. 23, 1819, Anna Maria Louise (LePine) Paddock.

Anne Marie Louise LePine, the wife of Jared Treman, was born Nov. 27, 1794. Her father, Joseph Roch Paul Gilbert Lafayette LePine, was a godson of the Countess de Charwagnac, and a friend of General Lafayette, who was ten years his senior. He came to this country with Lafayette on the occasion of the latter's visit in 1784. He owned or thereafter acquired extensive interests in San Domingo, and was also interested in a vessel or line of vessels operating between San Domingo, France and New York.

Prior to 1790 he had married Catherine Kearney, a lady of Holland Dutch descent residing in New York. Louise was the third child; her brother Joseph being five years older, and her elder sister dying in childhood. When Louise was five years old, she went with her mother and Joseph to join the husband and father in France, where they resided for a time, and where Madame LePine died. While Napoleon was first consul Louise went with her father and brother to San Domingo. It was during the troublous times on the island which marked the beginning of the century, and one morning Mr. LePine went out from the city to his plantation never to return. He undoubtedly perished in the general massacre of the whites.

Disguised as an orange girl, the little Louise, then about ten years of age, escaped on board a merchant vessel bound for New York. Hidden beneath bags of coffee, she could hear the tramp and clanking guns of the black soldiers on the deck above searching for refugees; and as long as she lived she vividly remembered the terrible experience. The escape of Joseph on a vessel bound for France; its capture by a Spanish privateer; his escape from the coast of Spain and return to his grandmother Kearney in New York, are equally thrilling. It was not many years after, when he was drowned in the East River.

Bereft of parents, and too young to know how to find her relatives in New York, from whom she had been separated so long, Louise was taken into the family of Captain Mussneau, where she found a home until at the funeral of Alexander Hamilton, she was recognized by a nurse who had formerly been in her mother's employ. The nurse, taking the child's address, at once informed her grandmother; and that night after Louise had gone to bed, she was summoned to meet her brother Joseph. She immediately exclaimed, "My brother!" and rushed into his arms.

In 1810, she was married to James Paddock, by whom she had four children, Louisa, Emily, Ann Eliza and Catherine. Before the birth of Catherine the family had moved to Trumansburg, N. Y., where Mr. Paddock soon after died.

In 1819 she was married to Jared Treman. Soon after the birth of Adriana (1824), Gen'l Lafayette, who was then in this country, was informed of the fact and asked the privilege of naming the child after his wife. He wrote on a slip of paper now in possession of the Stone family, "Adrienne is the name, to which I beg leave to join my most affectionate thanks."

But a small portion of the property interests held by her father was ever recovered except, that in return for the lands confiscated in San Domingo, a small annuity was secured from the French government, and paid to her for many years.

She died Sept. 19, 1857. Her personal appearance is described by one who remembers her well as follows: "petite, erect, dark eyes, a pretty way of dressing her hair by parting it on one side, pretty caps, slender fingers, pleasant voice, full vocabulary, easy in manner, though dignified and rather reserved."

He married (2nd), Feb. 16, 1859, Wealthy (Crampton) Clark (widow of Samuel E. Clark, M. D., of Trumansburg, N. Y.) She was born Sept. 8, 1804. She died March 19, 1881. He built the flouring mill at Enfield Falls, N. Y., which he owned many years. He afterwards resided at Enfield, Trumansburg and Millport, Chemung Co., N. Y. He also owned a flour mill at Millport. He was one of the earliest Masons in his part of the state, being a member of Trumansburg Lodge. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church many years. Captain in the Militia. He was a Democrat in politics.

At the time of his death the Ithaca Journal said of him:

"He spent the business portion of his life at Enfield Falls, Tompkins County, building the grist mill at that point, and remaining until 1850. Then he bought the homestead at Trumansburg, but after a time removed to Millport, going into partnership with S. B. Banks in the purchase of the grist mill at that place. The firm of Treman & Banks conducted operations for about twelve years, and two years afterwards Mr. Treman returned to Trumansburg where he lived until about 1881. His subsequent life was passed with his children, and the last year with his daughter, Mrs. S. B. Banks. The deceased was for many years a member of the Presbyterian Church, and one of the oldest Masons in the country. His life was one of industry and usefulness. His character commendable in all respects, right principles guiding all his actions."

He died July 10, 1889, at Watkins, N. Y.

570. ABNER TREMAN. (Abner<sup>d</sup>, John<sup>s</sup>, Joseph<sup>c</sup>, Joseph<sup>t</sup>.) 308. He was born Jan. 30, 1803. He married Jan. 30, 1823, Jemima Thomas. She was born Nov. 1, 1803, at Bridgeport, Conn. He was the owner and proprietor of a flouring mill nearly all his life.

At the time of his death the Trumansburg Sentinel said:

"His life has been one of more than ordinary usefulness. In early life, and in his mature years, he had followed the milling business. He left this business only when impaired health, largely a result of his years, made his retirement a necessity.

"While possessed of a mild disposition, he was very firm in his convictions. He was a bold advocate of principles which he thought to be true, without catering to public sentiment. He was a temperance man, when temperance was not as popular with the people as in these times. He was anti-slavery in his sentiments, and early identified his sympathy with the abolition party, long before that sentiment had reached ascendancy in the history of the nation.

"His religious life began in 1830. At that time he united with the Methodist Church, and remained a faithful member through all his subsequent life. His companion, Mrs. Jemima Treman, with whom he had lived in sweet conjugal affection for more than 64 years, still survives him; though in very feeble health.

"In his life Abner Treman made many friends, and very few enemies; if, indeed, he ever had an enemy. Those who knew him longest and best, loved him most. His house was always open for the entertainment of ministers of the Gospel, and many of these have shared his hospitalities. Many with whom he worshiped in early life had preceded him to the Higher State of Being. While possessed with a mind of unusual strength, and of rare judgment, he was modest and retiring in disposition, 'esteeming others better than himself.' His death was more a result of old age, than from any apparent disease. Having lived beyond 'the allotted time,' he has finished his work, and ended his mission upon the earth.

"Conscious that his end was near, he conversed upon the subject with great freedom with his friends. When the time came for his departure, the faith which had sustained him so long, was equal to the hour; and with no fear, and no regrets, he waited the coming of the death angel, and then, imparting his blessing upon his companion and children, entered into life eternal. Seldom have we the opportunity of recording the death of one whose life had been so pure, so eventful and true."

The Ithaca Daily Journal said:

"His life has been one of earnestness and uprightness, while possessing a nature gentle and kind, yet was uncompromising in his convictions of right. He was forgiving and charitable in all his intercourse with his fellow men. He commanded the respect of all who came in contact with him, and was a liberal giver for all church and charitable purposes. He was a quiet and earnest Christian, exemplifying his profession by his daily life. He will be greatly missed by the entire community and all who knew him. The bereaved family have the sympathy of all. He leaves an aged wife and four daughters to mourn his loss."

She was born Feb. 20, 1811, at Truxton, Cortland Co., N. Y. Farmer. President of the Treman Family Association, 1879.

The following account of the Treman Family Reunion is from the Owego (N. Y.) Times of Aug. 21, 1879 :

"On Thursday last the Trumans of this village and vicinity, and the Tremans of Tompkins county, held their first reunion at Taghanic Falls. There is one peculiarity about this family, the residents in Tompkins County spell their name Treman and in Tioga County Truman. About five o'clock on Thursday morning last, the Truman family consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Truman, of Flemingville, Lyman Truman, Jr., and sister, Mrs. Gorman, Orin T. Gorman and wife, Mrs. Dodge, Orin Truman, Geo. Truman and wife, William Truman and wife, Gilbert Truman and wife, A. Chase Thompson, wife and child, W. P. Stone, wife and daughter, B. L. Truman and wife, George Stratton and Lyman Stanbrough, left Owego for Ithaca.

They arrived in that village about seven o'clock and immediately took the steamboat at Cayuga Lake for Goodwin's Point. They were met by Leonard Treman and Mr. and Mrs. William Thompson, and taken in carriages to the residence of Mr. Thompson, where they were elegantly entertained, and were then taken to Taghanic Falls, where the reunion took place. After the festivities of the day were over, the Owego delegation was brought to Ithaca in Mr. Treman's steam yacht, and then came by cars to Owego, arriving here in the evening. The party wishes to return their thanks to William Thompson and family and other friends, for the numerous courtesies extended them."

We clip the following in regard to the reunion from the Ithaca Journal:

"The first reunion and picnic of the Treman and McLallen families took place at Taghanic Falls north side, Aug. 14, 1879. The early morning, which indicated a stormy, unpleasant time, soon gave way to a most delightful day, neither too hot nor too cold, with a cool north breeze, it seemed as if nature herself had done her best to render the occasion a delightful one. With the arrival of the regular steamer Frontenac, from Ithaca at 7 1-2 o'clock, came a delegation of about thirty of the Truman family from Owego, and Mr. Wm. Thompson, of Goodwin's point, very kindly furnished carriages to convey the party to the ground. At about ten o'clock the stream of carriages began to arrive and from that time until noon the incessant arrival made one wonder if the population of Tompkins County was composed entirely of the families of Treman and McLallen. At about noon the Ithaca delegation arrived escorted by the Mecklenburg cornet band and officers of the day who met them near the lake. The members of the two families from Owego and different parts of Tompkins County composed the greater part of the assemblage, but numerous relations were present from Mecklenburg, Elmira, New York, Olean and Westfield, Pa.

"At about one o'clock the company were invited by the committee of arrangements to the grove where long tables were literally groaning beneath the weight of good things which had been brought to satisfy the wants of the inner man. In a short time the large company numbering, it was estimated, fully four hundred persons, were seated and a pleasant sight it was to look upon. In a short time it became quiet and a photograph of the scene was taken by Hall, an artist from Trumansburg, after which Rev. J. E. Cathell invoked the blessing of the Giver of all good upon the company present. The onslaught began and in a short time, the hunger of the multitude being satisfied, a resolution was offered and passed that a similar gathering take place on the second Thursday of August, 1880. After which the following officers were elected for the ensuing year.

“President, E. R. Treman; Vice Presidents, Jared Treman, D. K. McLallen, Abner Treman, Wm. H. McLallen, Aurora, Ill., Elias Treman, Ithaca, George Truman, Owego; Secretary, Leonard Treman, Trumansburg; Treasurer, G. J. McLallen.

“Prayer was next offered by Rev. J. J. Phelps, which was followed by an original poem written for the occasion by Rev. Dwight Williams, the preacher poet, who was followed by Rev. J. E. Cathell, who made a short speech. Next, Rev. J. J. Phelps made a short but happy speech and the exercises at the table terminated.

“It being the wish of many present, about a dozen of the older members of both families were grouped and a photograph of them taken by the artist, Mr. Hall, and a more venerable group it would be hard to find. May their days be long upon the land. A book was kept in which all members of either family were requested to record their names and we believe nearly all did so.

“The utmost harmony and good feeling prevailed; people who had never met each other before becoming acquainted without the formality of an introduction, saying: ‘We are all cousining today, let us know each other better.’ To the enjoyment of the occasion the genial proprietors of the Taughannock House, Messrs. Root & Burghardt, contributed very largely, doing all in their power for the comfort of their guests. Keeping the house as they do on strictly temperance principles, makes it a very desirable place for such gatherings. As the day grew on those from a distance began to think of returning home and each went feeling that it had been good to be there and that if their lives were spared the second Thursday in August, 1880, would again find them gathered together to renew the acquaintance made that day. A resolution was passed to the effect that an account of the gathering should be furnished the Ithaca Journal and in accordance with that request I offer the foregoing outline of the day’s pleasant event. F. B. A.’”

MRS. ALMIRA CORLEY TREMAN.

SIXTH GENERATION.

1800. LEONARD TREMAN. (Ashbel<sup>d</sup>, Abner<sup>d</sup>, John, Joseph, Joseph<sup>t</sup>.) 541. He was born June 18, 1819, at Mecklenburg, N. Y. He attended the Ithaca Academy, 1834-5. He married, Oct. 20, 1846, Almira Corley (daughter of John Corley, merchant, of New York City, and Katharine Fernhower of Philadelphia, son of Henry Corley and Katharine Corley, who came from Germany in 1782 to New York City and afterwards resided at New Rochelle, N. Y. The history of the Corley family is as follows: Henry Corley came to this country from Germany in the year 1782 and landed in New York. Soon afterwards moved to New Rochelle; was a millwright and carpenter by trade. His wife's name was Katharine. Had five sons and two daughters, born in succession as follows, viz: Henry, Joseph, Casper, Eliza, Katharine, John and Christopher. He lived in New Rochelle about ten years, when he died and was buried there, his son John then being twelve years old. About two years after that the family moved to New York. Katharine, his wife, died in New York in about the year 1824 and was buried in the Presbyterian Cemetery between Rivington and Staunton Streets. She was about ninety years old. John Corley, the son of Henry and Katharine Corley, was born in Germany in the year 1782. He came to New York with his father's family when eighteen months old, moved to New Rochelle and lived there till he was twelve years old, then his father having died the family moved to New York. About that time John went to Hudson, where he lived with a man four years, working at all kinds of work and then came back to New York. Soon after was bound for the term of five years to Carns & Hazlett, on John Street, near Cliff, to learn the chairmaker's trade. After working out his apprenticeship he worked jour work for about three years, when work became very dull and he got out of work. He then went into the grocery business at the corner of Fiatta and Henry Streets. At the end of one year he sold out and in the year 1812 during the embargo he went into the chair business at No. 7 Peck Slip. He was there 7 years, then went to west side of Pearl Street, near Beekman Street. Afterward he moved to Franklin Square and continued there 18 years. The lot ran through to Cliff Street. Lived on the same premises. He was married on Dec. 27, 1806, being one year after the great eclipse, to Katharine Fernhower who was born in Philadelphia in 1787, but at that time lived in New York. John Corley was baptized July 2, 1814. He died Feb. 8, 1869. Katharine, his wife, was baptized March 3, 1816. She died Nov. 22, 1853). Almira Corley was born May 25, 1823. He was the first of the notable Treman brothers to take up his residence in Ithaca. After leaving school he entered the store of Wood & Nye at Ithaca as a clerk where he remained two years, until his father's death when he returned home. Having a natural aptitude for business he again took up a business life, becoming a clerk in the hardware store of Edmund G. Pelton in Ithaca. In the year 1844 his brother Lafayette joined him and they purchased Pelton's business and established the firm of L. & L. L. Treman, which became Treman Brothers when their younger brother, Elias, joined the firm in 1849. They were associated together in business over half a century. He was one of the organizers and the first President of both the Ithaca Water Works Company, 1864-88, and the Ithaca Gas Light Company, 1870-88. President of the Ithaca Savings Bank, 1887-8. Director in the Newfield and Ithaca Plank Road, 1850. Director in the Ithaca and Athens Railroad Company, 1869-74, and Cayuga Lake Railroad Company, 1871-4. He was a Democrat in politics. Trustee of the Village of Ithaca, 1850 and 1869. Treasurer and Trustee of the Congregational Church many years.

Landmarks of Tompkins County says of him :

"Leonard Treman's early education was obtained in the district schools of his native village, finishing with a term at the Ithaca Academy in the winter of 1834-5. In the latter year he took up his first occupation on his own account by engaging as a clerk in the store of Wood & Nye, in Ithaca, where he remained two years, when his father died and he returned to Mecklenburg. His early tastes were wholly turned towards a mercantile career, and with the purpose of making that his life work he again came to Ithaca and entered the employ of Edmund G. Pelton, who was carrying on the hardware trade. From that time onward until near the time of his death he retained his connection with that business. In the year 1844 his brother, Lafayette L., joined him, and the firm of L. & L. L. Treman was founded as successors of Mr. Pelton. The business prospered as most business will when superintended by men of ability, integrity and industry. On the first of February, 1849, Elias, the youngest brother, came to Ithaca and joined the firm, the style becoming Treman & Brothers. On the first of February, 1857, Leander King, a cousin of the Tremans, who had been long and faithful in their employ, was admitted to the partnership and the style was again changed to Treman, King & Co., and so remains at the present time (1894), though other changes have been made in its membership.

"In the year 1849, when Elias Treman came into the firm, they acquired a foundry and machine business then located on the East Hill on the south bank of Cascadilla Creek. These works were subsequently burned and the business was then transferred to the corner of Cayuga and Green Streets, and was very successfully conducted under the firm name of Treman & Brothers and distinct from the hardware trade. Under the firm name of Treman & Co., Leonard Treman also established a general hardware business in Watkins, Schuyler Co., N. Y., which was continued until a few years ago.

"While these extensive operations would seem to have been sufficient to satisfy the ambition of most men, as well as to employ one's whole time, such was not the case with Mr. Treman or his brothers. They foresaw the future importance of the village and its needs, and were the builders and owners of a large portion of the stock of the Ithaca Water Works, which has continued in the family ever since, and they took a large share of the stock of the Ithaca Gas Light Company. Mr. Treman was made president of the former company in 1864 and of the latter company in 1870 and held the offices until his death. It hardly need be added that the various important positions to which he was chosen were filled and their duties administered with the same faithfulness and ability that had long characterized the conduct of his private affairs. In the business and social life of Ithaca his position was an enviable one and was honored by him in the same degree that it honored him."

At the time of his death the Ithaca Democrat said :

"In the death of Mr. Leonard Treman, which occurred last Friday morning, our community has lost another good citizen whose hold upon its business and social life was a strong one. Seldom has a death here made a more profound impression. It was hoped that his illness, caused by a disease of the spine producing muscular atrophy, would not prove fatal, but as he had not been in robust health for some time his powers of resistance were unable to cope with a malady that might not have proved immediately fatal to a younger or a stronger man. Mr. Treman had nearly attained the age allotted to man, being sixty-eight years old. He leaves a widow and one daughter, Mrs. John Bush, of Buffalo. Deceased was the senior member of one of our oldest and most reliable business firms, first known as Treman Brothers, successors to Edmund G. Pelton in the foundry and hardware business, and latterly as Treman, King & Co., firm names which have long been associated with enterprises that have added greatly to the growth and prosperity of Ithaca. Mr. Treman was the oldest son of the late Ashbel Treman, of Mecklenburg. Two brothers, Lafayette and Elias Treman, and one sister, Mrs. Charles D. Johnson, are the surviving members of his family. He began life, as so many of our self made men do, as a clerk, in order to obtain that knowledge of business methods that he was afterwards to make so valuable to himself and others in building up a large business on enduring foundations. The firm which he founded has been dissolved only by death. As a village official, the leading spirit of several local railroad enterprises, director of the Tompkins County National Bank, president of the Savings Bank, Ithaca Water Works and Gas Light companies, and trustee and treasurer of the Congregational Church, Mr. Treman well and faithfully performed all the duties which these various interests required. In his social relations, his genial manners were but the expression of a kind and sympathetic nature. A staunch Democrat, he was always true to his party and rejoiced in its success. In closing this imperfect tribute to a character and career of marked worth and usefulness, we regret to so ill express the loss that this community has sustained by the death of Leonard Treman."

The Ithaca Daily Journal said :

"Leonard Treman died of spinal disease and muscular atrophy shortly after eight o'clock this morning. Mr. Treman's health had been feeble for some months, but it was not until about three weeks ago that he was obliged to relinquish his numerous business cares and remain a prisoner at home. When first prostrated it was generally hoped and expected that his naturally robust constitution would prove sufficiently strong to throw off the ailment and permit a speedy return to health. But about two weeks ago his family realized that his condition was critical and that the end was surely at hand. Mr. Treman was one of Ithaca's landmarks, having been very prominently identified with the community's important industries for more than two generations.

"Mr. Treman personally superintended the many important and varied interests of which he had long been the head, and regularly fulfilled the public duties that had claim to his attention. In 1862 he went to Europe and visited England, Ireland, Scotland, Switzerland and France.

"Mr. Treman was a man of military bearing, of unfailing courtesy and possessed a well-poised judgment. His knowledge of history was found in familiar conversation with friends to be quite thorough and extensive.

"His loyalty to truth and justice was well known. He never gave his support to a policy or institution until convinced of the claims of it, and any cause or friend once gaining his adhesion, his devotion could be absolutely relied upon so long as sound reasons for his support remained in force. He was a man of tender sympathy and ever ready to minister to those who were in trouble. His loss will be deeply felt by the Congregational Church and by the community."

The Ithacan said :

"Mr. Leonard Treman, one of Ithaca's most prominent, wealthy and influential citizens, passed away from earth life last Friday morning. The sad event cast a pall over the entire community, for his friends were legion. Mr. Treman had suffered from failing health for several months, but it was not until about three weeks before his demise that he reluctantly laid aside the cares of business, to which he had so long been accustomed, for the confinement of his home and the sick room—never, alas, to leave alive. Spinal disease and muscular atrophy was the cause of his death. There was no thought at first of a fatal termination of the disease and his death seemed sudden to the many who were wont to meet him daily in the numerous circles of business with which he was so prominently connected.

"Leonard Treman has filled numerous positions of public trust and responsibility in the village of his choice, having served the people as trustee and director of many important enterprises during its history. For many years he was trustee of the Ithaca Savings Bank, until recently when he was elected its president. He was director of the Tompkins County National Bank, president of the Ithaca Water Works Company and the Ithaca Gas Light Company. Mr. Treman had also for several years been a trustee and treasurer of the Congregational Church of Ithaca. He has ever fulfilled with promptness and faithfulness the various duties devolving upon these several important positions, and his loyalty to truth and justice are too well known to need comment."

At the time of her death the Ithaca Daily Journal said :

"At the age of 13 she came with her parents, on a canal-packet-boat—the only mode of travel, in that day, between New York and Ithaca, excepting coaches. Here since that time she has resided. Mrs. Treman derived from her German parents most estimable and solid traits of character. She possessed a charitable disposition and sound judgment, and her speech was guided by instinctive wisdom. With a liberal hand she responded to the demands of religion and philanthropy. Mrs. Treman as well as her late lamented husband, was profoundly concerned in the welfare of the church to which she belonged.

"In the city hospital, also, she was deeply interested, and before she succumbed to illness she had made wise arrangements for the completion of the furnishing of a room in that institution. The society of Ithaca experiences a great loss in the death of Mrs. Treman. An only surviving sister, Mrs. Sammis, resides in New York City."

He died May 25, 1888, at Ithaca, N. Y. She died May 19, 1897, at Ithaca. Residence Ithaca, N. Y.

CHARLES F. REMOND

MRS. ELIZA MACK TREMAN

1804. LAFAYETTE LEPINE TREMAN. (Ashbel<sup>3</sup>, Abner<sup>4</sup>, John<sup>5</sup>, Joseph<sup>2</sup>, Joseph<sup>1</sup>.) 542. He was born April 3, 1821, at Mecklenburg, N. Y. He attended Penn Yan Academy. He married April 9, 1849, Eliza Ann Mack (daughter of Hon. Ebenezer Mack and Eleanor Dey, daughter of Peter Dey and Eleanor Board. For a full account of her ancestry see the History of the Mack, Dey and Board Families, in this volume.) He was one of three brothers who have left their impress upon the history of the City of Ithaca, N. Y., where they spent nearly all their lives, taking a leading part in the social, business, religious, educational and political affairs of its people. An older brother, Leonard, had preceded him in Ithaca but he soon joined him and formed the firm of L. & L. L. Tremen in the hardware business; the firm name became Tremen Brothers upon the accession of their younger brother, Elias, to the firm in 1849, and with various changes in the firm name, the three brothers were associated together in business for a period of over fifty years. He commenced his business life as a clerk in the hardware store of James D. Morgan, at Penn Yan, N. Y. He came to Ithaca in 1844, to engage in business for himself and ever afterwards made it his home. The success which he won was due to his own energy and talents together with a courtesy and kindness which ever made him friends. His activities did not entirely cease even in advancing years till age compelled him to devolve many of his duties upon his son who had been trained to, and did, succeed him in most of his business positions. His business activity may be shown by the many official positions which he held. He was elected President of the Tompkins County National Bank in 1873 and held the position until his death in 1900. Under his administration this bank became known as one of the soundest financial institutions in the interior of the State. He was also one of the organizers of both the Ithaca Gas Light Company and the Ithaca Water Works Company and was President of both companies from 1888 until his death. He was also a Director of the Ithaca Trust Company, and of the Lyceum Company. Upon the organization of the Ithaca and Athens Railroad Company he was elected its Secretary and held the position several years. He was a Democrat in politics but did not care for office. He early took an interest in the affairs of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church, of which he was a member and Warden over fifty years, 1847-1900, being a generous contributor to the support of its many interests. He also remembered the church of his father and mother, and just before he died he sent the Baptist Church at Mecklenburg a handsome fund in their memory. In his death Ithaca lost one of its most upright citizens, one who was foremost in every movement for the welfare of the community in which he lived. His presence was ever welcome in the Church and social circle and if he had any enemies they did not make their presence known. The officials of the bank and other institutions over which he presided, passed appropriate resolutions upon his death, recognizing his worth and paying just tribute to his memory. He was a member of St. Augustine Commandery, Knights Templar, of Ithaca. He was an Ensign in the old State militia.

Landmarks of Tompkins County says of him :

“He received his education in the common schools supplemented by a period of study in the Penn Yan Academy. In that village he found his first employment away from home as a clerk in the hardware store of James D. Morgan. In the year 1844, when he was twenty-three years old, he came to Ithaca and joined with his elder brother, Leonard, in the hardware trade under the firm name of L. & L. L. Treman, succeeding Edmund G. Pelton.

“This young man was possessed of exceptional natural business ability, which he had assiduously cultivated during his clerkship at Penn Yan, and when the two brothers joined their interests in Ithaca it was with a firm determination to accomplish just what they ultimately did accomplish, the building up of a successful and extensive trade in an establishment that would be an honor to the place and bring them a justly earned competence. This determined purpose has governed Mr. Treman ever since, and while other interests have in later years claimed much of his attention, he has never permitted his allegiance to his first legitimate business to falter.

“The qualifications before noted soon gave Mr. Treman an acknowledged position among the most enterprising business men of Tompkins County, while his reputation for staunch integrity led to his being called to several positions of trust and responsibility. He served for a time as Secretary of the Ithaca and Athens Railroad when its consolidation with the Lehigh Valley system. He early became a Director in the Tompkins County National Bank, and in 1873 was chosen its President, a position which he still holds, (1894). Under his skillful financial guidance this sound old institution is known as one of the most successful of the banks of the interior of the State. In 1888 he was made President of the Ithaca Gas Light Company and the Ithaca Water Works Company, both of which positions he still occupies. In their management his counsel has always been for enterprising liberality towards the public, a policy that has at the same time been to the interest and prosperity of the companies. He is also a director and one of the principal promoters of the Lyceum Company, which has just completed one of the finest opera houses in the State. He is also one of the original Board of Directors of the Ithaca Trust Company. In all of these positions Mr. Treman has won the entire confidence and respect of those with whom he has been associated. Modest and retiring in his temperament, with unflinching courtesy for all and a broad charity and kindness for the weaknesses of human nature, Mr. Treman has found a warm place in the community outside of his large circle of business connections. He is a member of the St. John's Protestant Episcopal church, and since 1847 has continuously held the office of Warden, contributing cheerfully of his means to the building up of the cause of religion. Like other members of his family Mr. Treman is a Democrat in politics, but entirely without desire or taste for public office."

At the time of his death the Ithaca Democrat said editorially :

"With the death of Lafayette L. Treman there passes away from the city of Ithaca one of its most highly honored and justly esteemed citizens.

"For more than fifty years Mr. Treman has been prominently identified with the business life of this community. Coming here in 1844, with his brother, Leonard Treman, he engaged in the hardware business. He lived to see a modest hardware store of early days, in what was then only a small village, grow to be one of the most prosperous and one of the largest mercantile establishments of a thriving city.

"Among the men who have won success in the business life of Ithaca, of few can it be more truthfully said than of Mr. Treman, that success was truly earned and well deserved.

"His enterprise, his good business judgment, his industry, his integrity won for him the high position in this community which he enjoyed. Of his customers he made friends. His conscientious regard for fairness and justice in business transactions led him to be accorded many positions of trust and responsibility and the qualities which made him a successful merchant made him a successful banker.

"He was the President of the Ithaca Gas Light Company and the Ithaca Water Works Company and his management of these enterprises was always characterized by a generous and considerate treatment of the working classes.

"Mr. Treman was a Democrat in politics, and a true Democrat by nature. No man in humble station was by him despised. 'Before man made us citizens, great Nature made us men.' Mr. Treman recognized in all men something of worth. Courtesy and kindness were not by him reserved for some, but were habitually extended to all with whom he came in contact. His death will be sincerely mourned by all who knew him."

The Ithaca Daily Journal said editorially :

"Ithaca loses in the death of Lafayette L. Treman a character of whose kind there are all too few representatives. Upright and respected all his life, manly and admired all his maturity, Mr. Treman held the confidence of the community for many years. He was a leader in business affairs, a pioneer in public spirit, and a promoter of public improvements. In church and in charity he was ever ready with work and with substance; his counsel was valued and followed.

"Mr. Treman was distinctively a man of positive character, of energetic and forceful mind. He was progressive in all that the word implies forward and upward. His daily association was a benefit: his converse was uplifting; his doings were an example. Cleanly and commendable in words and works, Mr. Treman was highly and justly esteemed, and his memory will be a constant inspiration to those who knew him."

In another column the same paper said :

"Lafayette L. Treman passed to the other world at 4 o'clock this morning after a brief illness, during which his family had been encouraged to hope that he might recover. The announcement this morning on the doors of the Treman, King & Co. stores, 'Closed on account of the death of Lafayette L. Treman, one of the founders of the firm,' was read by hundreds of the people, and through all the city during the day the history of the deceased was the most prominent topic discussed.

"He was a member of the St. John's Episcopal Church and since 1847 has continuously held the office of warden, contributing cheerfully of his means to the building up of the cause of religion.

"Like other members of his family Mr. Treman was a Democrat in politics, but entirely without desire or taste for public office.

"For nearly sixty years the name of Lafayette L. Treman has been coupled in Ithaca with purity and modesty, rare intellectual power, gentleness, consideration for employes, firmness, integrity. He was a model husband and father, always looking far in advance of his day; profoundly respected and trusted by the entire community; a sincere churchman, a loyal friend and an ideal of physical manhood, not indicating his ripe age. All the honors due from mankind to such a combination of virtues and graces are now cheerfully and publicly accorded to him who laid them down this morning for final judgment.

"Not one word has been uttered about him except of praise and respect, and of sympathy for the family whose loss and sorrow are so great."

The Ithaca Daily News said:

"This morning Ithaca lost one of its oldest and most highly esteemed citizens, in the death of Lafayette L. Treman. He was the last of three brothers who took a very active interest in the business life of Ithaca during the last half century. For several months Mr. Treman has been in failing health and to his family and nearest friends his death at this time was not wholly unexpected."

At a meeting of the directors of the Tompkins County National Bank the following memorial was presented:

"In the death of Lafayette L. Treman, which occurred on the 27th of April, the Tompkins County National Bank suffers the irreparable loss of its president, and this community one of its most upright and prominent citizens.

"He died at the ripe age of 79 years, after a life more than ordinarily filled with the activities of a varied and successful business career. For more than half a century he left the imprint of his own personality upon the numerous business enterprises, both corporate and private, with which he was identified, and to all of them he brought the aid of his wise counsel and sound judgment, and contributed his unceasing effort to promote their successful development.

"This Bank owes much to his devotion. He was first elected as a director 42 years ago, and was chosen its president in the year 1873, and he continued to hold this office until the time of his death. During all these years he has given his best efforts to up-build this institution, and its present highstanding is owing largely to his untiring energy in its behalf.

"He was a safe counselor, and an earnest advocate of a high standard in all business methods. He commanded the respect of all classes in this community, not only because of his probity in all business affairs, but by reason as well of his manly virtues in his private life. His death is universally lamented and will cause especial sorrow in his family circle, and yet the grief there as everywhere will be tempered with the fond recollection of a well spent and a well rounded life.

"Resolved, That the foregoing be spread upon the minutes of the Bank, and a copy thereof suitably engrossed, be presented to the family to whom in their bereavement we tender our sincere sympathy."

Minutes adopted April 28, 1900, at a special meeting of the Vestry of St. John's Church:

"Since it has pleased Almighty God, in His providence, to terminate the earthly life of our late associate, Lafayette L. Treman, Senior Warden of St. John's Church,

"Therefore the Rector and Vestry, representing the whole parish and congregation, desire to put on record our sense of the great loss we have sustained in the departure of one who as Vestryman and Warden had served so long and so faithfully.

"It is now fifty-three years since he was first elected Vestryman. Thirty nine years ago he became Warden and was re-elected each year. In the discharge of the duties thus imposed upon him he was ever most faithful. His interest in the church was sincere and unflinching. His judgment was sound, and his advice invaluable.

His hand was always open and his benefactions constant. Kind and courteous to all, he was universally esteemed and beloved, and was the ideal of a Christian gentleman.

"His life was rounded out to completeness and in the fullness of days he was gathered to his father's in the communion of the Church: in the comfort of a reasonable hope, and in perfect charity with all men. With full hearts we bid him farewell for a time, and commend him to the holy keeping of Him whom he faithfully served.

"In the full consciousness of our own loss we turn to those who are indeed bereaved, and we offer to his widow and children our tenderest sympathy in the heavy trial which has befallen them. We commend them to Him who alone can give strength in the time of trouble, and that eternal peace which passeth understanding.

At the time of his making the gift to the Mecklenburg Baptist Church the Ithaca Daily Journal said:

"'A Blessed Christmas Day.' A Gift of $1,000 by Lafayette L. Treman to the Mecklenburg Baptist Church. At the close of the musical program on Christmas night in the Mecklenburg Baptist Church, the pastor, Rev. J. Bruce Abbott, made an announcement to his people and friends of a 'Christmas Gift' of one thousand dollars from Lafayette L. Treman, to that society. In the letter accompanying the same Mr. Treman states his wish to thus honor his beloved Christain mother, long a member of said church. Said gift coming to and also honoring his cousin, Mrs. Lufanny Grant, the oldest living member of the church, who lovingly handed the same over to its pastor and people at once. Well, indeed, did it conclude the most excellent exercises, and add to brighten the already brilliantly decorated little chapel, and also brighten many eyes and faces, and make glad all true hearts of God's children. It so impressed others that glad tears of joy were visible and put such a genuine meaning upon the whole evening of God's great Gift of Love in His Son (for lost humanity).

"Other members of this loyal family have already remembered this dear old church in honor of their parents, as well as others of different families now living in this vicinity, and it will be indeed good news to all to know of this last gift and also to know that our finances are already in good investments, and satisfactory to the church.

"A unanimous vote of this church, thanking our dear benefactor and brother for his generosity to us, is the desire of all concerned."

MRS. ELIZABETH LOVEJOY TREMAN

was born June 1, 1832, at Stratford, Conn. He was the youngest of three brothers who settled at Ithaca and became noted in its history as successful business men and prominent citizens for over half a century. After leaving school he entered the hardware store of his brothers at Ithaca in 1847, and two years afterwards became a partner in the business under the firm name of Treman Brothers. He was one of the organizers and a Director in both the Ithaca Gas Light Company and the Ithaca Water Works Company. Director in the Tompkins County National Bank several years and also in the Ithaca Trust Company. Trustee of the Ithaca Savings Bank. President of the Village of Ithaca, 1861. Captain of the Protective Police of the Fire Department eighteen years. Chief Engineer of the Fire Department, 1866. Member of the Board of Education several years. He was a member of the Citizens' Committee which prepared the Charter of the City of Ithaca. He was a Democrat in politics. He was for many years a Trustee of the Presbyterian Church of Ithaca. He built the Lyceum Block at Ithaca in 1898.

“Landmarks of Tompkins County” says of him:

“Elias Treman attended school in his native village and finished in the Penn Yan Academy, after which he entered the employ of Morgan & Armstrong in Penn Yan as clerk in their hardware store (where his brother was already engaged) and remained there six years. In 1847 he came to Ithaca and entered the employ of the then well established firm of L. & L. L. Treman, becoming a partner in said firm on February 1, 1849, the style being thereby changed to Treman & Brothers. In this connection he has ever since remained to the present time (1894). Uniting his admirable business qualifications with those of his brothers, a foundry and machine shop were built and the hardware trade largely extended. When the building of the water works was taken up he was made one of the directors of the company, and also in the Gas Company, which positions he holds at the present time. A large share of the burden of directing the mercantile business of the firm falls upon his shoulders. He is a Democrat in politics, like his brothers, but also like them has never become an aspirant for public office, though he has capably filled the position of President of the Village of Ithaca. Mr. Treman enjoys to the fullest extent the confidence and respect of the community.”

He was thrown from his carriage and seriously injured June 1st, 1898, and died from the effects of his injuries.

The following account of the accident is from the Ithaca Daily Journal, June 2, 1898:

"Our well known townsman, Elias Treman, met with a serious accident yesterday afternoon while driving to his summer cottage on the west shore of the lake. He was accompanied by Charles D. Johnson, who sat with him on the rear seat of a democrat wagon, Jasper Woodsin driving Mr. Treman's gray horse singly. When nearly opposite the James L. Baker place a snake was seen gliding across the road at which the driver aimed a blow with his whip. The swish of the whip startled the horse, causing it to spring forward so abruptly that the seat and its occupants were thrown out. Mr. Johnson was slightly stunned by the fall but quickly regained control of his senses. He saw Mr. Treman lying motionless in the road, with the seat across his body, he having struck on the back of his neck, and sustained a dislocation of the neck. Mr. Treman was placed in Professor John L. Morris's carriage, which came along opportunely, and brought to his home in this city, where he was attended by Dr. Biggs.

"In answer to inquiries this morning relative to Mr. Treman's condition a reporter was informed that he passed a fairly comfortable night but that both legs were paralyzed from his hips down. It is hoped that this condition may be only temporary, inasmuch as Mr. Treman despite his advanced years is an unusually strong and robust man.

"The news of the accident spread through the city very swiftly last evening and awakened a general sentiment of regret.

"A specialist in consultation is expected to reach here tonight."

The same paper said editorially, June 4, 1898:

"Not half a dozen men in this city have been so long, actively and extensively engaged in business here as Elias Treman. Few citizens, if any, enjoy as large and intimate acquaintance with the people of Tompkins county. Hale and cheery to the very instant of the accident which suddenly invalidated him it is but natural that thousands are eager for frequent and detailed reports from his bedside. The fortitude and cheerfulness which marked his daily walk are reported unimpaired."

At the time of his death The Ithaca Democrat said editorially :

"In the death of Elias Treman, Ithaca loses one of its ablest and staunchest business men, one who has impressed upon the business life of our city the stamp of his individuality to a remarkable degree.

"His name has ever stood as a tower of strength in our business and commercial circles. His sturdy integrity, his cheery encouragement, his indomitable courage and spirit has furnished to many a young man that incentive which has resulted in business success. He was ever a man of the people caring little for ostentation and outward show, and wonderfully gifted in his ability to correctly read and judge the men with whom he came in contact.

"He more than any man the writer ever knew valued men for what they were rather than what they appeared to be. He hated sham ; but ever prized and applauded in no uncertain way what he saw of good in mankind without reference to the coat or social position of the wearer. His friends and business acquaintances everywhere valued his friendship because they believed it sincere, and thus it is that throughout this and neighboring counties there is many a sad heart today plunged in real grief because of his death.

"His has been a long, prosperous and honorable career. One that may well serve as an example to the younger men of Ithaca.

"While his life was essentially a business life to which he was ever devoted, he yet found time to mingle freely with his fellow citizens in social functions where he was ever a favorite, and to make himself felt in everything that pertained to the welfare of our city.

"A good citizen in every sense of the word, a kind neighbor, a fearless advocate of the right, a manly man, such was Elias Treman. Ithaca will miss him sadly, but she cannot forget the example of his life so closely allied to the business integrity and public spirit of her citizens."

The Ithaca Daily Journal said :

"Elias Treman died about one o'clock this morning of the injuries he received by being accidentally thrown from his carriage, near his summer cottage on the west shore of Cayuga lake, the first of last June. Distinguished non-resident surgeons were called to aid his own physician, but they frankly admitted their inability to avert the inevitable and fatal result that must follow so serious an injury as the severing of the spinal cord.

Elias Treman accepted his awful misfortune in a philosophical and Christian spirit. During the long contest with the Angel of Death he never complained. He suffered no pain. His passing was peaceful.

The prominence of the deceased and his immediate family, a prominence long maintained and steadily increasing, in the financial, intellectual, social and religious life of Ithaca, makes a sketch of his ancestry interesting and appropriate at this time. * * *

Elias Treman, the subject of this article, was born in December, 1822, fifteen years before his father, Ashbel, died. His childhood was passed in Mecklenburg, his youth in Penn Yan.

In 1844 Leonard and Lafayette Treman purchased the hardware store of Edmund Pelton on the southeast corner of Owego (now State) and Cayuga Streets in Ithaca. They continued the hardware store in conjunction with a foundry and machine shop. In 1847 Elias came to Ithaca and served as clerk in the store. In 1849 he became a partner. In 1857 Leander R. King, R. H. Treman in 1885, and in 1892 C. E. Treman, became partners.

Leonard Treman died in 1888. Lafayette retired from the firm in 1897.

Treman Brothers met with success from the beginning of their mercantile venture. The hardware store became the basis for a system of wider and more important corporate and financial pursuits, including banking, gas works, water works, etc., for which Leonard and Lafayette withdrew from active service in the store many years ago.

The published history of the town of Ulysses credits Abner Treman, his grandfather, with 'great force of character, plain and expressive manner and address.' That also applied to his grandson, Elias Treman. He had also a stately presence and a splendid constitution, for at 75 he appeared as vigorous and nearly as supple as he was at 15.

Although an earnest Democrat, Elias Treman could not be induced to accept party or political office, except in 1861 when he was elected President of the Village of Ithaca. In 1865, while a member of Tornado No. 3, he was elected Chief Engineer of the Fire

“He was a member of the non-partisan Citizens’ Committee that framed our city charter.

“At the time of his accident he was a member of the Protective Fire Police, having been its captain for fourteen years, a member of the Board of Education, a director of the Tompkins County National Bank, the Ithaca Savings Bank, the Ithaca Trust Company, the Ithaca Water Works Company, and the Ithaca Gas Company.

“He was chairman of the board of trustees of the Presbyterian Church and senior member of the well-known firm, Treman, King & Company.

“He was opposed to rhetorical obituary or passionate praise of the dead. He once said: ‘A community knows its own members well.’ Hence his theory is followed in this article and words of praise are unsaid, for Elias Treman was one of the best known men in the city and county.”

The Ithaca Daily News said :

“Elias Treman passed away peacefully at one o’clock this morning at his home on the corner of Buffalo and Geneva Streets, his death being the result of an injury which he received by being thrown from his carriage on the first day of last June, when on his way to his summer cottage on the shore of Cayuga Lake. He was thrown backward from the carriage, and the accident resulted in the severing of the spinal cord at the seventh vertebra, causing paralysis of almost the entire body. He was confined to his bed for the four months following the accident. He was always cheerful, and accepted the result of the accident with resignation.

“Elias Treman was an ardent Democrat in politics, but was never very active, holding only one political office, that of President of the Village of Ithaca, in 1861, and was one of the Citizens’ Committee selected to form the present Ithaca city charter.

“He was always much interested in the Ithaca Fire Department, being elected Chief Engineer in 1865. He was also one of the organizers of the Protective Police, and was captain of the same for eighteen years.

“He was chairman of the board of trustees of the First Presbyterian Church of this city, was a director in several corporations, among which are the Ithaca Water Works Co., Ithaca Gas Light Co., Ithaca Savings Bank, Ithaca Trust Co., and Tompkins County National Bank, and was senior member of the firm of Treman, King & Company. He was also a member of the Board of Education."

The Elmira Telegram said:

"Elias Treman, one of Ithaca's most loved citizens and respected business men, passed away this morning, at 1 o'clock. While the fatal fall from his carriage last June had prepared the minds of all to expect the inevitable result, yet when the end came, expectancy could not allay the deep-felt grief of a surviving community.

"By Associated Press:

"Elias Treman, of the retail and wholesale hardware firm of Treman, King & Co., died at his home in this city at an early hour this morning, at the age of seventy-six. Mr. Treman was one of Ithaca's foremost citizens. He was a lifelong resident, prominently identified with all movements looking to the improvement and welfare of the city. He was a director and large stock-holder in all the banking houses of the city, and is well-known throughout the business world. The cause of his death was paralysis, coming from injury to the spinal cord, resulting from a fall from his carriage in June last."

At a meeting of the Board of Education the President, Roger B. Williams, said:

"Gentlemen of the Board of Education:

"As we assemble here tonight our eyes naturally turn to that vacant chair which has been for so many years and so regularly occupied by Mr. Treman. Our thoughts revert to the unfortunate accident which has for four months deprived us of his companionship and counsel, while he lay with unflinching cheerfulness and heroic patience bearing the heavy cross that was placed upon him. And now they turn to the scene we witnessed yesterday when all that mortal of our beloved friend was placed out of our sight forever. Nothing can efface our admiration of his character, the inspiration we have received through his example, or our reverence for the memory of Elias Treman. We mourn his loss, but we glory in the good he has left behind him and are thankful that for so many years we have been privileged to know him and work at his side."

President Williams from the committee appointed at the special meeting to prepare resolutions in memory of Commissioner Treman presented the following report :

“To the Board of Education :

“Your committee appointed to prepare resolutions in memory of Commissioner Treman respectfully report the following :

“Whereas, This Board has sustained an irreparable loss through the death of our esteemed fellow commissioner, Elias Treman, which occurred on the morning of October 1, 1898; be it “Resolved, That we hereby record our profound realization of the severe blow that has fallen upon us, and upon our work, in this dispensation of an all-wise Providence, beneath which we humbly bow. We would place upon record, also, our high admiration for the character, abilities and business methods of the deceased, and our full appreciation of the notable aid his efforts have given to the advance of education and educational methods in this city.

“Elias Treman entered this Board in 1885, since which he has been a leader among us; and, not only by his personal effort, but by his counsel and example, he has aided in the intelligent, methodical and harmonious prosecution of our work.

“He was a man of unswerving integrity, unselfish purpose, and unflinching devotion to duty; an untiring worker, a conservative adviser and a faithful friend. He conspicuously combined the wisdom and experience of age with the keen, active vigor of youth. He was outspoken and frank in the expression of what he thought to be wise and right. He was noted for his superior business judgment, his thorough Christian honor and devoted personal friendship.

“After his thirteen years of faithful service as a member of this Board, in which he has met with us regularly, performing with fidelity the duties of his office, we shall miss his cheery presence and his wise counsels. We mourn the loss of a kind friend, wise counsellor, and upright citizen. His memory will be cherished, and will inspire all who know him to emulate his virtues.

“To his bereaved family we tender our warmest sympathy.

“To our schools and to our city, who have lost one of their strongest and wisest leaders, we commend the example of his life for emulation.

“Resolved, That this preamble and resolution be inscribed upon the records of this Board, and a copy thereof presented to the family of the deceased.

“R. B. WILLIAMS, }
 “A. B. BROOKS, } Committee.
 “H. W. FOSTER, }

“On motion of Commissioner St. John the resolutions were unanimously adopted.”

In memory of Mr. Treman the public schools were closed during the afternoon of the day of his funeral and the flags were at half-mast throughout the day. Places of business were also closed during the funeral.

From report to Board of Education by Supt. Foster, published in the Ithaca Journal, Oct. 6th, '98:

“In the death of Mr. Treman I feel a personal loss. Prompt, keen and frank, having the experience of age with the vigor of youth, he was quick to reach his decisions; and was outspoken in his opinions. During all the time of his illness, his interest in the affairs of the schools continued unabated and he inquired frequently concerning what was being done. I shall always treasure it as a valued memory that on the last evening when he was fully conscious he asked for me to come and see him. The same keen interest inspires every member of the Board, and it is this which makes it possible to make our work successful.

“H. W. FOSTER, Sup't.”

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Ithaca Trust Company and upon the announcement of the death of Elias Treman, a member of such Board, it was ordered that the following memorial of our deceased associate be entered upon the records of the Company and that a copy thereof, attested officially, be presented to the family of the deceased:

“The death of Elias Treman, one of the Directors of this Company, creates a new vacancy in our number, and leaves us the duty of joining in the wide sorrow for his loss and recalling the many traits of his character which made him not merely our business associate but our welcome and cherished friend.

“He had long been a resident of this city, and taken an active part in promoting its growth and adding to its prosperity. The vigor and industry and intelligent care which he gave to his own affairs was fully developed in those enterprises which, beyond his personal interests, touched also the public welfare and affected the general health and safety. In the early lighting of our streets and homes, and, later, in the bountiful supply of water for the public safety and health, his business ability and courage found a wide and useful field of activity, with results not only beneficial to himself and his associates, but vitally essential to the health and security of the City, and which even yet we scarcely appreciate as they deserve. If, as is true, his private interest was the impelling motive of his share in the enterprise, at least it was directed to worthy and useful ends, and demanded of him and his associates a foresight and courage the utility of which for all of us we are slowly beginning to realize.

“When the Trust Company was organized, and took its place quietly among the City’s financial institutions, he came among us with the same business ability and watchful oversight which had carried his own enterprises to success, and beyond that, brought with him a constant cheerfulness, a playful bluntness of expression, and a regard for his associates lurking under a humorous welcome, which made us all his sincere and attached friends. That cheerful and kindly temperament followed him through the long days of his last illness and left him only at the end.

“His place we can supply but cannot fill. We can only put upon our records this memorial of the man, and of the loss which as his business associates we have sustained.

“We shall see his face no more, but he has left us the legacy of a sincere and lasting respect for his memory.

“W. H. STORMS, Secretary.”

Resolutions of the Protective Police :

“It is with deep sorrow that we miss from our midst the form of Ex-Captain Elias Treman whose death occurred at his home in Ithaca on Oct. 1st. He was a charter member of this Company and for fourteen years its Captain, and was deeply interested in the welfare of the Company. For more than fifty years he has been a prominent and influential member of our business community. As a member of the house of Treman, King & Co., a Director of the Tompkins County National Bank, of the Ithaca Water Works Co., of the Ithaca Gas Light Co., one of the organizers of the Ithaca Trust Co., and since its organization a Director and member of its Finance Committee, his ability, wise counsel and sound judgment contributed largely to the success of each and every one. During his active business career he was ever mindful of his duty to his church and to the public. As Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Presbyterian Church he gave freely of his time to the business interests and welfare of this body. He was an active and faithful member of the Board of Education, and a highly valued Trustee of the Ithaca Savings Bank. Mr. Treman commanded to an unusual degree the respect and admiration of this entire community, and his warm greeting and bright smile will be missed by all.

"We valued his friendship in life and will always treasure his memory in our hearts.

"Resolved, That this minute be spread upon the records of this Company and a copy thereof be sent to Mr. Treman's family.

"H. L. HINCKLEY, )

"D. B. STEWART, ) Committee."

"E. L. WILLIAMS, )

At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of the First Presbyterian Church, held Dec. 26th, 1898, the following report of committee, appointed Oct. 10th, was, on motion, unanimously approved and adopted:

"While the members of our Board were appalled and grieved by the loss of our worthy treasurer, General Blood, we were doubly bereaved by the sad accident on June 1st, to our beloved President, Elias Treman, that deprived us of his wise counsel and ever courteous presence at the head of our Board. While denied all his usual activities and realizing only too well his own helpless physical condition, he did not sorrow as one without hope, but gave to all who were privileged to minister to his needs, or to visit him for a moment, abundant evidence of heroic Christian fortitude and wonderful patience in waiting for the inevitable end.

"The interest that he manifested in the welfare of the church he served so faithfully and so long, the brightness and cheer with which he encouraged those around him must be to his family, as it is to his friends, a source of great comfort. The end came on October 1st and we, with the entire community, sorrow for one whose place hardly be filled.

"Therefore, be it Resolved, That the Board of Trustees of the First Presbyterian Church of Ithaca extend to the family of our beloved President our deep and sincere sympathies in their bereavement and that we commend them to our Gracious Father above who alone can give them full consolation.

"Resolved, That we desire here to testify to the faithful and unselfish services of our associate as trustee for more than twenty years, the last ten of which he served as President. We wish to bear testimony to his kindly consideration, his courteous treatment, his unfailing regularity and promptness in the despatch of business, and to his readiness to take upon himself much more than his share of the details of our work.

"Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family and that they be spread upon the minutes of our Board.

The Tompkins County Democratic Convention, Oct. 3, 1898, adopted the following resolution:

"We, the representatives of the Democratic party, assembled in County Convention, desire to express our sympathy and condolence to the family of the late Elias Treman in their bereavement. In Mr. Treman's death we have lost a highly valued friend and wise counsellor."

The following letters were among many received by the family:

"ORANGE, Oct. 3, 1898.

"MY DEAR MR. TREMAN:—

"I have just received the Ithaca paper with the news of your father's death.

"I need hardly say in what high regard I ever held him for I think you must know how long and at one period of his life how intimately I knew him and that was before and up to the time of his marriage. He was always just the manly man that his straight and manly figure symbolized. He was outspoken, you always knew where to find him on every question of importance, political, local, social or religious that came up for discussion.

"I cannot multiply words but I feel his loss. * * *

Please assure your mother of my own and my daughter's sympathy and respect for her and the entire family of your lamented and respected father.

"I am sincerely yours,

"A. SCHUYLER.

"Mr. R. H. Treman."

"ALBANY, N. Y., 5 Oct., '98.

"MY DEAR ROB:—

"I want to express to you and the entire family my sincere sympathy in the great loss you have sustained. I have often thought since hearing of your father's accident how hard it must have been for one so full of energy and vitality to be afflicted as he was and though I hear he bore it with the utmost fortitude and resignation. I was thankful, for him and his family, when he was released from suffering. I know what it means to lose a father and how severe the shock is when the end finally comes, even though it has been for some time anticipated, and am truly sorry for you. The loss comes to you, as it did to me, after you had reached manhood and were well able to go alone but you cannot help feeling that you have lost a strong prop and support and a wise and prudent counsellor. Your father will be sadly missed by many in Ithaca outside his immediate family—his strong personality having impressed itself on all who came in contact with him socially or in business.

"Yours truly,

"WM. H. SAGE."

"NEW YORK, Oct. 14, 1898.

"ROBERT H. TREMAN, Esq.:

"DEAR SIR:— The notice of your good father's death has come to us, and its saddening information brings a pang of deep sorrow to me, his long time personal and admiring friend. For more than forty years have I known and many times have I met him, and each time enjoying his presence more than the preceding. His hearty cheerfulness, his candor, his integrity, his old time lively, breezy ways, combined with his shrewdness and sagacity made him a delightful person to meet either in a social or business way.

"The first time I saw him, as perhaps I have told you, was soon after he was married, when he was living at the hotel—the 'Clinton.'

I think—and from the first I was interested in him, an interest that has increased as the years have gone by.

“To your mother and to his children I desire to convey the assurances of my most tender sympathy with sincere and earnest wishes for their comfort and consolation.

“Faithfully yours,

“GEORGE HENRY SARGENT.

“UNITED STATES LEGATION, TOKIO.

“MY DEAR FRIEND CHARLES:—

“I wanted to send you a line to let you know that I think of you and your mother and family at this sad time. I will not try to say more now, but you must know in what high respect I have always held your father for his upright, sterling character. You may not know, however, that it was he who largely influenced my father to send me to Cornell, and you can appreciate how much college meant for me. Please give especially my affectionate regards and sympathy to your mother and write me when you can.

“Ever sincerely your friend,

“RANT S. MILLER.

“HUDSON, WIS., Oct. 5th, 1898.

“MR. LEANDER KING, Ithaca N. Y.:

“MY DEAR FRIEND:—I received last evening from you the Ithaca News announcing the death of Elias Treman. I have his countenance as clearly in my mind as when I left the dear old town.

“Elias Treman was a man I shall never forget. My acquaintance with him was different of course than with you and others nearer my age, yet like Judge Finch with whom I studied law I could never forget Elias Treman. While he was independent and fearless and did not stand on conventionalities, as I knew him he was so kind, considerate, thoughtful and gentlemanly toward those younger, that today I remember him with that high esteem and deep respect that the high, noble and manly qualities which he possessed ever command.

“In what I have said I hope you can recognize not only its truth but also recognize that my memory is not dim.

“Sincerely yours,

“H. L. HUMPHREY.”

From the Ithaca Daily Journal, May 1, 1899 :

"The children of the Central School celebrated Arbor Day by planting trees and by appropriate exercises in their school rooms.

"The Persian poet says : 'When a good man dies, all mortals weep, but the angels rejoice that his trials are ended, and that they have him amongst them.'

"No man deserved this exquisite Eastern verse better than did Mr. Treman.

"It is not necessary to mention here his munificent works of benevolence or devotion to public good. A Christian man, a faithful friend of the schools, a gentleman thorough in all good works, these describe one whom 'none knew him but to love him, none named him but to praise.'

"To Mr. Elias Treman we dedicate this tree. May it ever be a reminder to cherish his memory with affection, to be thankful for his example and to think of him now as in the 'light perpetual' of a glorified existence."

From the Ithaca Daily Journal, Sept., '98 :

"As the Journal goes to press this afternoon the Ithaca fire department is making its 39th annual parade in a broiling sun.

"As the Protective Police marched by the stalwart form of Elias Treman was missed at their head. The company of Protective Police was organized in 1868 by Elias Treman and Joseph Esty, and today, for the first time in thirty years since its organization, Mr. Treman was absent from the line. This is a remarkable record, and probably cannot be duplicated by anyone connected with the Ithaca or any other department. The patient invalid, doubtless, had this in mind today when the strains of the band told of the fact that this was the annual parade of the department."

Mrs. Treman gave to the new First Presbyterian Church of Ithaca, as a memorial to her husband, one of the finest organs in the country.

At the time of her death the Ithaca Daily Journal said :

Mrs. Treman was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of this city, and always took an active part in church work. She was a woman of very fine personal character, always cheerful, and the geniality of her temperament won a large circle of warm

For a full account of her ancestry see the History of the Mack Family in this volume.) Merchant and member for many years of the firm of Treman, King & Co., wholesale and retail hardware merchants of Ithaca, N. Y. Director in the Tompkins County National Bank and the Ithaca Water Works Company. Stockholder in the Lyceum Theatre Company. He was appointed, in 1862, by the Governor, as one of the Town Committee to raise volunteers for the Civil War.

At the time of his death the Ithaca Daily News said of him :

"Leander R. King, one of Ithaca's oldest and most highly respected business men, died this morning, shortly after 6 o'clock, at his home at No. 111 West Green Street.

"Mr. King's last illness began about three weeks ago, while on a trip to Canada. At Tadousac he had a very severe attack of angina pectoris, but recovered sufficiently to return home, which he did about ten days ago.

"Since that time he has been confined to the house, but up to the very last his family entertained great hopes of his ultimate recovery. The end came quite suddenly and until a few minutes before his death it was supposed that he was getting better. Then indications were seen that denoted a change and the end came quietly and peacefully.

PETER MEYER

"Leander King was born at Trumansburg, February 3rd, 1828. At an early age his family moved to Albany where he received his early education. He came to this city at the age of 23 and entered the employ of Treman Brothers, who were then engaged in the hardware business on the present site of the store. In the year 1857, Mr. King was taken into the partnership and the new firm did business under the name Treman, King & Co. Mr. King continued as a member of the firm until 1870 when he was obliged to retire from business on account of his health. After a year of complete rest in California, he was able to resume his work, and upon his return to this city he re-entered the firm, where he continued his interests up to the time of his death.

"Mr. King was the senior member of the present firm, Treman, King & Co., and the last survivor of the original firm which consisted of himself and the three brothers, Leonard, Lafayette, and Elias Treman. Mr. King was a cousin of his partners.

"For many years Mr. King has been closely identified with many of the principal business interests of this city. He has been a director of the Tompkins County National Bank since '71, and he was also a director of the Ithaca Water Works Company, and a principal stockholder in the Lyceum Opera House Company. Mr. King was a genial gentleman and his social qualities made him many friends. He has always been a successful business man and his judgment on financial matters was respected by his associates. For years he has been a prominent member of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church and was at one time a vestryman. His life was an exemplary one, and his demise is mourned by the whole city."

The following account of the Tremain Family Reunion at the home of James K. Tremain and the historical address delivered by him is from the Genoa Tribune of July 7, 1893:

“WEST VENICE, N. Y., June 29, 1893.

“A grand occasion was the Tremain Centennial Picnic which has been held at the residence of James K. Tremain today.

“The day has been remarkably pleasant and no place could have been chosen more appropriate for this occasion, since it was just one hundred years ago that the father of James K. Tremain, Benjamin Tremain, built his log cabin in the woods, and with his family began life on the very ground where the tables were spread today. Neither could a pleasanter spot have been chosen than the spacious and shady lawn fronting his residence.

“For many weeks, James K. Tremain, the only survivor of a family of ten children, has labored unceasingly perfecting arrangements for this reunion whereby the descendants, many of whom have never met, might come together and celebrate this the centennial of his father's settlement on this spot, and his heart has been truly gladdened by so many responses from different parts of the Union.

“Carriages kept coming until at noon one hundred and fifty were comfortably seated at the tables which were groaning under their load of good things. Rev. E. A. Peck offered thanks, then association and appetite strove for the greater endurance. After dinner the relatives were grouped together and views were taken of the gathering by Wm. Battey, of Rochester, with a kodak manufactured at that place. During all this time sweet music was being discoursed by Moravia's popular orchestra.

“After this came a delightful little programme of exercises presided over by Geo. Truman, of Nashville, Michigan. The exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. E. A. Peck, of Ledyard, the orchestra following with a fine selection. The address of welcome was delivered by James K. Tremain in a manner which none could help feeling was indeed a welcome from the heart. It was neatly responded to by Rev. Wesley Mason of Skaneateles. A quartette from Ledyard favored the company with a choice selection after which a poem, written for the occasion, was read by C. M. Swift, of Cortland. Another of the orchestra's fine selections was then neatly rendered when came a historical sketch given by James K. Tremain, a portion of which we cannot help repeating. He says:

“In a backward glance, covering a period of one hundred years, justice would demand of me an impossibility under existing circumstances.

“In the presentation of this historical sketch, I am somewhat embarrassed as the ancient records, dating back to the emigration of the Tremain family, four brothers, from England to America in 1666, were destroyed at the burning of my house in 1862.

“In the rush and push and cry of hard times that reach us on every hand in this last decade of the nineteenth century, it is well to pause and consider: Who laid the foundations of this Great Republic? Who rushed to the front to drive back an invading foe? Who felled the mighty forests unaided by modern implements?

“With the primitive ax, patient ox and mammoth chain came together the logs with which the cabin of the pioneer was builded. Well may we honor the memory of the fathers, though dead their works remain, while we reap the reward of their labors. It is fitting and right that the descendants, friends and neighbors should assemble to commemorate the hundredth anniversary of this settlement.

“Philip Tremain and family are supposed to be the first settlers in this vicinity, locating on this farm in 1793, erecting a cabin in about the center of this yard, digging this well from which hung the old oaken bucket that has supplied the family with pure cold water for a century.

“In 1790, the family emigrated from the Bay State to the then far West. The route over which they came to Cayuga County with their household goods was toilsome in the extreme. The Hudson river furnished means for reaching Albany. Between that point and the Mohawk great difficulties were met. Sixteen miles over sand barrens to Little Falls. There a portage was made. The canoes and light boats were carried by men while the large ones were drawn by oxen. The time required to make the journey from Schenectady to Cayuga Lake was twenty days. The family made the first settlement where Trumansburg now stands, my father felling the first tree, giving the hamlet the name of Tremainsville, later changed to Trumansburg.

“In the month of March, 1793, with their household goods on a sled drawn by oxen, they came around the head of the Lake, following the shore to the mouth of Salmon Creek, taking that to the forks,

The following interesting letter was written by him :

“BINGHAMTON, Oct. 11, 1898.

“TO THE EDITOR OF THE JOURNAL:

“SIR:—I read with much interest your article in The Journal of Oct. 1, 1898, written upon the event of the death of the lamented Elias Treman of Ithaca.

“I hope it will be pardonable for me to attempt to correct your article that it may accord with the chronological history of the Truman family in this country.

"The first representative of the family to come to America was Joseph Truman who settled in New London, Conn., in 1666. The following year 1667 he was elected to the office of constable. He continued his residence there until his death which occurred in 1697. His will which is on file was dated the year prior to his death in which he bequeaths his property to his five children, Joseph, Thomas, Elizabeth, Mary and Ann.

"Joseph married Mary Shapley, daughter of Benjamin Shapley, Dec. 5, 1701. They had four children, John, Simeon, Nathaniel and Benjamin.

"John Truman, the first child of Joseph, married and they had nine children, Jonathan, Eliza, Philip, John, Gaines, Julius, Daniel, Abner and Jared.

"Abner, next to the youngest, born in 1761, entered the army of the revolution in 1777 and became distinguished for his bravery; his son, Ashbel, was the father of the late Elias Treman.

"The Truman family in Owego are direct descendants of Simeon Truman, the second son of Joseph and Mary Shapley his wife.

"The writer is a direct descendant of Thomas Truman, who was born in New London, Conn., A. D. 1681, and died there Jan. 15, 1747, he being the second son of Joseph Truman, who came from England in 1666 as before stated. I am much indebted for the knowledge I have been able to obtain of the Truman family in America, to George Truman, Esq., of Owego, N. Y., to the late Mrs. Christopher B. Arnold, of Providence, R. I., who in 1858 permitted me to make extracts from the record of a very old family Bible in her possession, which formerly belonged to her grandfather, Jonathan Truman, of New London (my great grandfather), and also to 'New England Chronological History,' by Savage, a work of great merit. My conclusions, after giving the subject much attention, are that the name Treman and Tremain and Trueman were all primarily and purely from the English name Truman, of New London in 1666, and that the exciting and disrupting scenes during the long years of the revolution and the conglomeration of nationalities, the Babel of tongues, are responsible for the different ways of spelling names of the oldest families in the United States.

"Very respectfully yours,

"JAMES C. TRUMAN."

He married, Nov. 18, 1874, in New York City, Julie Marie Judson (daughter of Charles Gideon Judson of Woodbury, Conn., and New York City.) Broker. Member of New York Stock Exchange. Mayor of Orange, N. J.

The National Cyclopedia of American Biography says of him :

“Henry H. Truman, son of Daniel Henry and Cordelia (Mead) Truman, was born in Greenwich, Conn., Feb. 7, 1847. After the usual preparatory course in the rudimentary branches, he was sent to the Polytechnic Institute of Brooklyn. After completing his studies, he left on one day's notice to begin his business career with the firm of Le Grand Lockwood & Co., Wall Street brokers and bankers. His salary was small at first, but his progress was rapid, and he was so well liked by his employers, that his advance was rapid, and it was but a few years before he received a large salary. The failure of the firm in 1869, threw him out of employment, but with the money he had saved he was enabled the same year to start in business for himself, having in 1869 purchased a seat in the Stock Exchange. He was successful from the start, but default of one for whom he was doing business necessitated a suspension in 1871. He subsequently met every dollar of his obligations. In 1871 he entered into partnership with Roswell P. Flower (later Governor of New York) and E. C. Benedict, under the firm name of Benedict, Flower & Co. This firm passed through the great panic of '73 with credit unimpaired. The firm dissolved in 1875. In 1876 Mr. Truman entered into an arbitrage business, that is buying and selling shares and bonds between New York and London or other cities. Mr. Truman was for a time a member of the Petroleum Exchange. He was a member of the Governing Committee and Chairman of the Membership Committee of the Consolidated Exchange, after the union of the Mining and Petroleum Exchanges. He withdrew from this Exchange in 1885, as the rules of the Stock Exchange at that time prohibited membership in the Consolidated Exchange. Later he has also become a member of the N. Y. Produce Exchange.

Mr. Truman settled in Orange in 1885, and three years later he purchased a fine building site on the S. W. corner of Lincoln and Highland Avenues, where he erected a beautiful villa, comprising the best of modern architectural features known as the American Domestic, the first story being of Belleville brown stone, the stories above it of frame.

At the time Mr. Truman was asked to accept the nomination for the mayoralty of Orange, he had not been in public life nor had he ever taken any interest in politics. It was known that he was a staunch Republican and being a man of the highest reputation, his constituents believed that these qualifications would insure the successful administration of the affairs of Orange. Before entering upon his duties Mr. Truman made himself thoroughly familiar with the condition of public affairs and of the needs of the city, and pledged himself to use his best endeavors to influence for good government. No one questioned his honesty, his integrity or his business capacity to execute the plans he formulated. His ability, however, to carry forward the work, and execute the laws as he interpreted them was largely dependent on the coöperation of those associated with him. A difference of opinion as to the best methods of accomplishing the desired results, caused some friction and by the close of his first year's administration it was generally understood that Mr. Truman would not approve of any improper legislation. His second message at the beginning of 1891 showed that he was fully conversant with every department of the city and his recommendations received the most careful consideration. His presentation of the city's financial condition was a most able exhibit, and showed his familiarity with all the details. His recommendation to the council that an effort be made to have the new issues of bonds exempt from taxation and the advisability of issuing long bonds, evinced great wisdom and forethought.

"He said truly that 'as the growth of the city continues the cost of the permanent improvements, which are now being made, and which benefit all proportionately, can be, and shall be, paid for by those who receive the ultimate benefit.' Mr. Truman urged that the system of sewerage so long under consideration should be pushed forward with all possible diligence and recommended the issue of four per cent bonds in such amounts as would enable citizens who were not property holders to invest and thus become interested in the affairs of the city. Mr. Truman referred to the Board of Education in praiseworthy terms, having made a personal investigation of the schools. Referring to the Police Department he recommended that all appointees should be required to pass a physical examination, and that any who were unfit for duty should be retired or dismissed; he also recommended that a patrol service be introduced and that 'call boxes' be established in different parts of the city, which would do away with at least one roundsman and give more efficient service. Mr. Truman called special attention to the valuable franchises granted by the city to railroad and other corporations, and to the small amount of revenue received by the city from these sources and rec-commended a plan which would insure a large annual revenue. No man ever labored more earnestly in the interests of a community, or worked more faithfully to effect the desired reforms than did Mr. Truman and when it is considered that his time and his energies were expended in this direction without any compensation whatever, he certainly earned and fully deserves the lasting gratitude of his fellow citizens.

"During his residence of sixteen years or more, in Orange, Mr. Truman has given much time and attention to the moral and religious interests of the community. Before coming to Orange he was a member of the Church of the Incarnation of New York, he was confirmed by Bishop Potter in the Church of the Holy Trinity, Brooklyn, in 1860. He was long a member of Grace Episcopal Church of Orange. He contributed to the building of St. Andrews Episcopal Church at Montrose Park, South Orange. At the first meeting of the new parish for organization he was proposed for and elected to the office of Senior Warden. He is also interested in the work of the Young Men's Christian Association, having been one of the early members of the Orange Association and later assisted in the organization of the Orange Valley Association, of which Association he was the President. He is a man of strong religious convictions, thoughtful, earnest, painstaking and imbued with a sincere desire to be helpful to others and to benefit his fellowmen. He is a member of the New England Society of Orange, the Orange Lawn Tennis Club and other organizations.

"Mr. Truman married Julia M. Judson, a daughter of Charles Gideon Judson of New York City, formerly of Woodbury, Conn., a son of Charles and Fannie (Marvin) Judson, son of Elijah, son of Gideon, born March 8, 1748, son of Elijah (born 1715) and Sarah (Hollister) Judson, son of Jonathan, 1682, son of John, who was one of the original signers of the Fundamental Articles for the settlement of Woodbury, in 1672. He was the son of Lieut. Joseph, eldest son of William Judson, who came from Yorkshire, England, in 1634, with his family, Joseph, Jeremiah and Joshua. He lived four years at Concord, Mass., and removed thence to Stratford, Conn., at its first settlement in 1639. Rev. Adoniram Judson, the missionary to Burmah, was a descendant of William and cousin to Gideon, above mentioned."

At the time of his inauguration as Mayor an Orange newspaper said of him :

“The inauguration of Henry H. Truman as tenth Mayor of Orange on Tuesday evening, March 25, 1890, was an eventful period in the history of Orange. His predecessor, Mayor Hartford, had held the position for twelve consecutive years, first as a Democrat, and for nine years as the People’s candidate. Mayor Truman, although not a politician was elected by the Republican vote. On taking his seat he was heartily congratulated by his predecessor, who in his closing remarks said : ‘Now that I am about to retire it gives me unbounded pleasure to know that my successor is a gentleman whose name is above reproach, and who I am confident, will have only the city’s best interest at heart.’ Mayor Hartford was overcome by his emotions and was compelled to sit down. Mr. Truman returned thanks for the hearty welcome extended him and especially for the ‘kind words of his predecessor, who had served so long and faithfully.’

“The Truman family from which Henry H. Truman is descended is identified with the early history of the Connecticut colony. The origin of the name was undoubtedly, as the spelling indicates, Truman or Trueman, meaning a true man and this has been a characteristic of the family through every generation.

“I. Joseph Truman, the ancestor, was born in England, and came to America with his family, which consisted of five children, viz: Joseph, Thomas, Eliza, Mary and Ann. He settled in New London, Conn., in 1666 and was chosen constable the next year where he died in 1697. The records show that ‘he purchased some pits for tanning from Alexander Piggins in 1670.’ Truman’s Brook and Truman Street derive their names from this family.

“II. Joseph Truman (2) son of Joseph (1) settled in New London. He with 77 others received a grant of land, Oct. 14, 1704, from the Governor and Company of Her Majesty’s Colony of Connecticut in General Court assembled by authority of Letters Patent given to them by Charles II, dated 23rd April, 1663. This was a part of the addition made to the bounds of New London, which included the Mohegan reservation which had long been claimed by the town, but not legally included in their bounds. The grant was signed by Deputy Gov. Treat of Conn., one of the original settlers of Newark.

Joseph Truman (2) married Mary (born 26 March, 1677) daughter of Capt. Benjamin Shapley (son of Nicholas, (who was the son of Alexander Shapley, born in England. Chosen Treasurer of the Province of Maine 1649. Captain 1653, Major 1656, Magistrate 1662, next to the right worshipful Henry Josselyn) and Mary Pickett, daughter of John and Ruth Pickett (Brewster). The children of Joseph and Mary (Shapley) Truman were Elizabeth, Eliza, Joseph, John, Jane, Benjamin and Daniel.

III. Daniel Truman, the youngest child of Joseph and Mary (Shapley) Truman, was born in New London, Conn., Oct. 24, 1717, died April 17, 1791. He married Deborah, daughter of Ebenezer Dennis, Dec. 10, 1741. She died March 26, 1801, aged 81 years. Their children were Deborah, Esther, Henry, Mary, Benjamin, Daniel. He was a Captain in the marine service.

IV. Daniel Truman (2) son of Daniel (1) and Deborah (Dennis) Truman, was born in New London, Conn., Jan. 8, 1766, died in New Haven, April 10, 1832. He married Amelia, daughter of Isaac Thompson in New Haven, Aug. 11, 1792. She died in 1803. He married, secondly, Mary, daughter of Col. Joseph Thompson, in New Haven, April 27, 1805. By his second wife he had a son, Daniel Henry. He was a Captain in the marine service and a man of integrity.

Daniel Henry Truman, son of Daniel (2) and Mary (Thompson) Truman, was born in New Haven, Feb. 13, 1806. He married, in Greenwich, Conn., Cordelia, daughter of Shadrach and Elizabeth Waite Mead of Chestertown, Warren Co., N. Y., son of Titus Mead, grandson of Ebenezer (1) born in 1663, son of John (2), son of John Mead (1), who emigrated from England about 1642, or William Mead 1635. The family was an ancient and honorable one, one of the ancestors having been the friend and physician of Queen Elizabeth."

The History of Four Counties, so-called, says of him :

"Hon. Lyman Truman is at the present time the leading business man of Tioga County, and its wealthiest citizen. He was also, until a recent period, the leading Republican politician of that county. His life is a remarkable example of what one can accomplish, unaided and alone, without any external advantages of wealth or family, in working out for himself a successful personal career by force of character and a temperate, moral, industrious, and economical habit of life.

"He started a poor boy, on a farm remote from any business locality, the eldest of a family of ten children, of whom Aaron Truman was the father.

"Aaron Truman was born in Granville, Mass., and came to Owego in the year 1804, where he married the following year Miss Experience Parks of Candor. Lyman Truman, the brother of Aaron, came in 1808, and Asa H., another brother, followed about 1814.

"Lyman Truman, the subject of this memoir, was born March 2, 1806. Aaron, the father of a large family, died in 1822, when Lyman was but sixteen years of age. The only property left by the deceased to his family was a small farm of sixty acres, incumbered with a debt greater than its value: and it was due to the sympathy of creditors only that the household was not driven from its humble shelter, which was but little better than a cabin, located on a farm. By the blessing of Providence, the mother, who was endowed with remarkable sagacity and energy, so admirably stimulated and directed the efforts of the young but industrious and untiring family, that within three years she not only succeeded in paying the heavy debt, but erected a comfortable house, that still remains as a monument to their thrift. From the death of his father until the year 1830, Lyman continued to follow the drudgery of day and farm labor, raising and carting the produce of the farm to market, making shingles, and sawing and selling boards.

“Of course the intervals of labor in such an overtasked youth left but a few scanty weeks for schooling, at the district school before, but not after, his father’s death. These brief intervals were improved, however, with the same energy that has characterized all of the subsequent career of the man.

“In 1830 he left the farm and became a clerk in the store of his uncle, Asa H. Truman, at the village of Owego, N. Y. He rapidly acquired the skill and tact in trade that made him desirable as a partner, and enabled him soon to start in business for himself, though without capital, as a member of the firm of Greenleaf & Truman, composed of John M. Greenleaf and himself.

“In 1836, with a magnanimity and love for his family that have characterized all his subsequent arrangements, he brought three of his brothers, Orin, Francis and George, from the farm, and sharing with them what he had earned, associated them with himself, under the firm name that has since become distinguished in the locality for its credit and solidity, of ‘L. Truman & Brothers.’ This firm, for certain purposes, continued until the present time. 1879.

“From 1836 onward, uniform success, unchecked by any considerable reverse or misfortune, has marked the business career of Lyman Truman.

“That success has been largely due to the strong native sense and almost unerring sagacity that has rapidly solved, with instinctive accuracy, every business problem that presented itself; he having never engaged in any speculation, except an extensive purchase, at government prices, of Illinois lands in 1856, which proved very remunerative. These lands were skillfully located before any settlement of the region, in the vicinity of streams and along the lines which their sagacity predicted prospective railroads must take. In the profits of this enterprise he generously associated the other members of the firm of L. Truman & Brothers with himself.

"In 1856 he was elected President of the Bank of Owego, and continued to hold that office until that institution became the First National Bank of Owego, of which he is still the president and principal stockholder, 1879.

"In 1857 he was elected State Senator from the senatorial district composed of Tioga, Tompkins and Broome; and continued to be elected to that position for three successive terms. His strong native sagacity, and his known integrity, gave him a commanding influence in that body; and although he made no pretensions to skill as a public debater, yet, even in that capacity, the directness with which he addressed himself to the subject under debate, the promptness with which he laid open the real point at issue, and the personally independent, frank, and outspoken fashion in which he treated all the influences at work to defeat measures that he favored, made him a formidable antagonist in debate. His original style and manner had a certain peculiar relish, and his home thrusts remarkable point and force.

"When the War of the Rebellion broke out, Mr. Truman was, as a matter of course, one of the foremost in favor of every measure calculated to bring the war to a speedy issue, and from its very commencement he contributed largely to the support of the families of ten volunteers.

"During all of Mr. Truman's active life his pecuniary help, and his invaluable personal direction and superintendence, have been often sought, and largely and successfully given to carrying business friends over difficult and embarrassing emergencies in their affairs. When, in 1849, a fire nearly destroyed the principal business portion of Owego, he was largely influential and active in rebuilding it, expending a large part of his own means, not very profitably, for that purpose. He has always been a ready contributor to public enterprises, and very helpful to many in the way of private charities.

"Since he left the Senate, Mr. Truman has retired from political life, the cares of his large property interests, now estimated by his neighbors at upwards of a million of dollars, demanding his exclusive attention. Over all, however, that bears the name of 'Truman,' the ex-Senator, as the head of the house, still extends, as ever, his supervisory care, and from time to time, as needed, his kindly and never failing pecuniary and personal help."

Our County and its People (Tioga), by L. W. Kingman, says of him :

“Lyman Park Truman was from 1833 until his death in 1881 the most conspicuous citizen of the county in the lines of its commercial activity, and the impress of his indomitable will and keen business acumen was seen far beyond its limits. He was a natural financier, a man of creative impress and of original and highly successful methods. Where other men could see only ordinary conditions his brain would discern far-reaching possibilities, which under his almost unerring sagacity would develop into vast sources of wealth, business activity or political power. He was blessed with natural advantages. He came of a long line of stalwart New England ancestors who so conserved their vital forces as to strengthen the stock with each generation, and he possessed a massive physique with wonderful powers of endurance and a brain large and commensurate with his great body. From the commencement of his commercial activity, little by little, steadily and continually, the influence of his personality expanded until all the circles of business energy existing in a wide radius were controlled by impulses projected by his brain. He never imitated. Whatever successes others won, mattered nothing to him. He developed his own plans, perfect in detail from conception to consummation, and dictated to others the methods to insure success. He dominated his associates and his ideas became theirs. He attached men to him so that their aid and service resembled the loyal devotion of the ancient vassal to his liege lord, and he never allowed contradiction. In everything in which he had part his will was law. Although holding local office to some extent and ably serving three terms in the State Senate, his home was in the region of business and finance. There his nature was given full play and the result was the acquisition of great fortunes for his own and others' enjoyment. Had his lot been cast in the broader opportunities of New York City and the more responsive atmosphere of Wall Street, Lyman Truman would have shown himself facile princeps among the moneyed Napoleons and financial kings of that great metropolis.”

At the time of her death the Owego Times said :

"She was a woman given to dispensing alms, helping the needy, anxious to relieve suffering and distress, whenever she found them. Time can never reveal what she has done to lighten the burden of other lives. Many will rise up in eternity to thank her. 'Let her own works praise her.'

"Of her love for the Church, and her intense interest in its prosperity, too much cannot be said. When unable, longer, to attend upon the services of the sanctuary, by reason of infirmity, she was always inquiring as to Zion's welfare. Often has she been heard to say, 'I do love the Church,' and none who knew her at all, can doubt that she did. The Congregational Church has lost a true, earnest and faithful member, and while the Church on earth has been made the poorer by her departure, the society of the redeemed in heaven has been enriched by her coming to them.

"Of the sacred and tender relationship in the home, we need say but little. There was cheer and sunshine about her home-life, which was a blessing to all who came under its influence. 'Her children rise up and call her blessed.' The sisters and brothers know something of the richness and preciousness of that home-life. They feel to exclaim in the words of Scripture, 'Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.' The large number present at her funeral on Sunday afternoon attest, more loudly than words can, the high esteem in which she was held by all. On that occasion her pastor, Rev. C. M. Bartholomew, chose for a text, Luke 11, 37, speaking of the old age of Christian faith and confidence as it applied to her life and its work. Renan has said, 'The highest style of living is to live so, that in ceasing to live, one does not cease to be loved.' Be that as it may, one thing is certain, our dear friend is still loved. Reviewing such a life and observing its happy, triumphant end, one feels like saying with one of old, 'Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his.'"

3640. HON. NELSON WILMARTH ALDRICH. (Anan E. Aldrich and Abby Burgess.) He was born Nov. 6, 1841, in Foster, R. I. He married, Oct. 9, 1866, Abbie Pierce Chapman. 1236. He received an academic education; engaged in mercantile pursuits, and was President of the Common Council of Providence, R. I., 1872-3. Representative, 1875; Speaker, 1876. Member of Congress, 1879-81. United States Senator from Rhode Island since 1881. Wholesale grocer. President of the First National Bank of Providence since 1877. Director in Roger Williams Bank. He was one of the incorporators of the Mechanics' Savings Bank. Director in Hartford and Fishkill R. R. Company. Prominent member of Masonic fraternity.

The Cyclopedia of American Biographies, by John Howard Brown, says of him :

Nelson Wilmarth Aldrich, Senator, was born in Foster, R. I., Nov. 6, 1841. His early education was acquired at Killingly, Conn. He then attended the academy at East Greenwich, R. I., and when graduated began a business life at Providence, R. I. His practical interest in city affairs caused him to be elected in the City Council from 1869-75, and from 1872-3 he was its President. On leaving the Council he was elected as a Republican to the General Assembly of the state, and in 1876 was Speaker of the House. In 1878 he was elected to represent his district in the 46th, and was re-elected in 1880 to the 47th Congress. His practical business methods applied to legislation so increased the confidence he had already won in the state, that in 1881 he was elected by the Rhode Island legislature to the vacancy in the United States Senate, caused by the death of Ambrose E. Burnside. He was re-elected in 1886 and again in 1892. During his several terms, he served on important committees, notably on that of finance, on which he was retained during his entire term of service in the Senate. He thus became thoroughly familiar with the intricate questions of finance and tariff, and Senators accorded him an attentive hearing whenever he had occasion to present his views. Large credit is due to Senator Aldrich for the reciprocity features introduced in the McKinley tariff bill, his suggestions being accepted, after the proposition made by Mr. Blaine had been discussed and dropped by mutual consent. In his subsequent career in the Senate he has been prominent in the discussion of the great financial questions that arose in Congress and was conspicuous as an earnest advocate of mono-metallism."

Children:

3641. Abbie Greene. The newspapers of the country of Aug. 27, 1901, announced her engagement to John Davidson Rockefeller, Jr. The wedding day is Oct. 9, 1901. The New York Journal of Aug. 27, 1901, says of her: "The engagement of Miss Abbie G. Aldrich, second daughter of the millionaire Senator from Rhode Island, to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., only son of the Standard Oil king and heir presumptive to the greatest fortune in the world, was announced yesterday. She is handsome, brilliant, a favorite of society, the bearer of a distinguished name; he is stalwart, earnest, pious, rich even without his great expectations, a business man. They are about the same age—twenty-six—and they have been in each other's thoughts since he was a college student at Brown and used to visit at Senator Aldrich's big town house, on Bennett Street, Providence, and at the villas at Warwick Neck. The same wire that brings news of the betrothal carries the intelligence that young Rockefeller is negotiating for the purchase of Rocky Point, the most beautiful shore resort on Narragansett Bay, which adjoins his future father-in-law's place. The match is no surprise; it has been an understood thing for some time, and society's main interest in the event concerns the future of the young pair who will start in wedlock so well endowed. Miss Abbie Aldrich has not been more conspicuous in church circles than most young ladies of her station in society, while the young man has been a leader in Baptist circles ever since he came from college. He is treasurer of the Fifth Avenue Sunday School, and has always seemed to dread the responsibility of the great wealth that will be his, rather than to consider it a means to promote his own pleasure. He is fond of speaking before religious bodies and has been known to refer to himself as a steward from whom an accounting would one day be demanded. Now the question is: will she make a society man of him, and will the Rockefeller name become a synonym for the magnificent entertainments she is so competent to give, or will he make a devotee of her? Or, will each adopt something of the other's character and make the house of Rockefeller famous alike for piety and for social splendor? When the young man was at Brown he was the manager of the football team and displayed his business quality by making the football team self-supporting for the first time in the college's history. He was a very democratic young fellow at college, made no display of his wealth, and though the football and his fraternity, Alpha Delta Phi, took much of his time, he was a good deal of a grind at his studies. He was at college to learn, and it is his nature to get the full worth of anything he goes into. It was through his influence that his father gave $500,000 to Brown University last fall. Young Rockefeller has had few diversions since he left the university. He rode horseback a little, but his life lay mainly between the offices of the Standard Oil Company and the Baptist Church. Recently he has emerged in a small degree from his retirement, and last week organized a dancing class, which will meet at Delmonico's four times next season. This is probably the greatest dissipation of which he has ever been guilty. As a business man he won his spurs in Leather stock a year ago. He bought in 700 shares of Leather at 11 to 20 and sold it at 30 or 40, thus making his first million. He went into the Standard Oil offices as a clerk and ran the gamut of the office routine. Now he is supposed to be competent to take his father's place and handle his vast holdings whenever he is called on to assume that great responsibility.

His life is as regular as that of a boy at a military school. He rises at 6:30 A. M.; from 7 to quarter of 8 he exercises—walking or chopping wood. He takes half an hour to breakfast, catches the 8:40 train at Tarrytown for New York, goes immediately to his office and remains there, except for half an hour for luncheon, until 3:15 P. M., when he returns to Tarrytown. He drives for an hour and then dines, and by 9:30 is in bed. His prospective father-in-law was a grocery merchant of very moderate fortune in Providence until he went into politics. Thirty years ago he became President of the Providence Common Council. In 1876 he was a member of the Rhode Island General Assembly. He went to Congress, and in 1880 became a United States Senator. He is a member of the Committees on Finance, Pensions and Ordinance and Warships and Chairman of transportation routes to the seaboard. He is said to have been the real author of the McKinley tariff bill. His position, apart from the Government, is President of the United Traction Company, of Providence. The bride-to-be had a narrow escape last month. She was on the yacht Wild Duck when it ran down the Joy Liner Tremont in Long Island Sound." The New York World of Sept. 1, 1901, says of her: "Miss Abby G. Aldrich, second daughter of the senior United States Senator from Rhode Island, who is to become the wife of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., the man who will probably be the first billionaire in the history of the world, is a cultured, brilliant and serious-minded young woman. Notwithstanding her father's long residence in Washington, she has passed most of her life in Providence, where she was born. Usually in the winter she goes to Aiken, N. C. The great social functions of the capital seemingly have no charm for her, although it has been stated that Senator Aldrich has taken a mansion in Washington this winter and will entertain, with Mrs. Aldrich and his two daughters, Miss Lucy T. and Miss Abby, as hostesses. Heretofore the Aldriches have lived at the Arlington Hotel and have done no entertaining, as Mrs. Aldrich and the girls have not been in Washington more than six months all told during the long service of Mr. Aldrich in the Senate. Probably the most interesting fact about Miss Aldrich is that, except in the most general way, she does not care for society and its frivolities. She is pretty and attractive and could easily shine should she care to enter the lists. Her interests are in opposite directions. She had advanced ideas about education and is a student of literature. Her pin money, her friends say, goes mostly for the newest high-class books and for the solid magazines. She is interested in practical charity and much prefers to investigate and relieve a genuine case of distress than to spend an afternoon with a dressmaker talking about the fit of a gown. From this it must not be imagined that Miss Aldrich does not dress well, for she does. Her father is several times a millionaire and lavishes his money on his family. But she cares for dress only as a young woman of her station who has no infatuation for society should care for it. It is not a passion with her and does not distract her mind from the larger problems of life, of which she is an earnest student. Miss Aldrich's fad is a firm belief in the higher education of both sexes. She is thoroughly in harmony with the educational ideas of the Rockefellers. She is devoted, also, to church work. These features of Miss Aldrich's character, in addition to her great personal charm, must appeal to both her future husband and to John D. Rockefeller, his father, whose financial support of the Baptist Church is only equalled by the great gifts he makes to the Chicago University, of which he is virtually the founder. Senator Aldrich, her father, is often spoken of as the "business man" of the Senate. He rarely makes a speech, but he is at the head of the immensely important Finance Committee, through which all tariff and other business legislation must go. His predominating trait of mind is exactness. He is thoroughly business-like. Miss Abby has inherited these qualities to a marked degree. In her charitable work she is as precise as the most painstaking manager of a business enterprise. She gives generously, but never until she has investigated the merits of each case brought to her attention. She does not believe in indiscriminate charity and will not afford the slightest assistance until she knows the facts. She tells to her intimates the story of an experience she had in Aiken which strengthened her resolution in this regard. A few winters ago, before she knew as much of the wiles of mendicants as she does now, a negro girl approached her with a tale of woe that was heartrending. Her mother was dead, her grandfather almost dead from rheumatism and she herself ill and suffering from hunger. Miss Aldrich was much moved by the tale of misfortune and called the girl into her house. She gave her a meal and some clothes and a generous sum of money for her immediate necessities. She promised also to find her work. After the girl left Miss Aldrich began to wonder if she had done her full duty in so distressing a case. Should she not have sent something to the rheumatic old grandfather? She decided affirmatively and told the cook to put some food in a basket. Then she ordered her pony chaise and drove to the address given by the girl. There was no house there. She searched the neighborhood and finally learned from a policeman that the girl was an impostor and the rheumatic grandfather a myth. So she gave the meal to an old negro woman who lived near by and drove home. Then she formulated this rule, which guides her now in all her charitable work: 'Never give even five cents to a mendicant until you have investigated the story. In benevolent enterprises the greatest benevolence is to punish the unworthy and thus protect the deserving cases of charity.' Undoubtedly in the great affairs with which Miss Aldrich will be connected after she becomes Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., she will follow this rule. Her tastes are so entirely in harmony with those of her future husband that the benevolences which they will institute will be carried out on the lines already indicated by the senior Rockefeller. It is understood that Mr. Rockefeller and Miss Aldrich have been lovers for some years and that the engagement has existed for some time. Nearly a year ago Senator Aldrich hinted something of the kind to his intimates in the Senate. Miss Aldrich is not particularly fond of outdoor sports, although she shares Mr. Rockefeller's love for horses. She golfs a little and can swim and sail a small boat. She much prefers to read a solid work or an educational topic than to dance or attend a dinner party. She is tall, graceful and a charming talker. Just now she is at Greenwich, R. I., where Senator Aldrich has a summer home. Her social ideas may be summed up in the statement that although she is but a few miles from Newport and its gayeties she never goes there."

The following interesting letters on family history were written by him:

CHICAGO, ILL., JAN. 15, 1892.

MY DEAR TRUMAN:—My grandfather's name was John Truman, who had three sons and two daughters: 1. Nathan Truman. 2. John Truman. 3. Henry Hammond Truman (my father). 4. Sarah Truman. 5. Elizabeth Truman. All were born in Providence. My father was the youngest, born in 1812. I am the oldest of his children: 1. Benjamin Cummings, born Oct. 25, 1835. 2. John, born in 1837; died in 1843. 3. Caroline, born in 1839. 4. Susan, born in 1842; dead. 5. Clara, born in 1845; dead. 6. John Henry, born in 1844, graduated at Brown University, and at the Columbian Law College in Washington, made a fortune, married a Louisiana lady, had three children, one boy and two girls, all living; he died in 1881. 7. Imogen, born in 1858, and the only unmarried one, who still lives with her parents. We were all born in Providence.

Truly,

BEN.

P. S. I had a boy born in San Diego in 1870, who died in Los Angeles in 1871. Georgie was born in Los Angeles in 1873. My wife's great-great-great-grandfather on her father's side was Captain Eugene Maillard of Lafayette's staff, and her great-great-grandfather was a sergeant in the war of 1812, and was killed at the battle of Tippecanoe. He was a Virginian. I would like to know if any of our fathers' fathers were "in it".

The first twelve lines of the following letter refers to a newspaper article written in Los Angeles, Cal., and printed in a New York paper:

LOS ANGELES, NOV. 12, 1897.

MY DEAR JIM:—Yours came safely to hand with enclosure. It wasn't so bad after all, and much of it was true, especially regarding their soldiers and some of the so-called "Castilians". But there were quite a number of very nice people here before those last comers during the boom, of which the writer thinks brought the better classes. He undoubtedly considers himself one of the crème de la crème. On the whole he was a little too severe. I really appreciated your pedigree search, which seems to be complete. Of course during the past thirty-five years a great many persons of our name have come from Ireland and England, but none are of much account. Our family is certainly one of the oldest American families, and although there never has been any criminals or scrubs in it, it has probably improved with every generation up to our own. I see that my name occupies about thirty lines in Appleton's Biographical Encyclopedia, and mention is made of me as an author and soldier in the Brittanica. Here are some of the positions I have occupied, which, as you have taken so much pains to get the records, I will let you know :

Benjamin Cummings Truman. Born in Providence, R. I., Oct. 25, 1835. Graduated in high school studies at age of 13. Went to Shaker School in Canterbury, N. H., until I was 17, then taught school No. 9 of Merrimack Co. for one year. 1854 worked at printing business in Providence. 1855 went to New York, and set type and read proof on N. Y. Times for five years. In Oct., 1859, went to Philadelphia as correspondent of N. Y. Clipper. Soon became editor of the Sunday Mercury, then managing Ed. Forney's Washington Chronicle. On March 6, 1862, was appointed captain and provost marshal on staff of Andrew Johnson, who had been made Brigadier General of Volunteers and Military Governor of Tennessee. Was also war correspondent of New York Times for more than two years at one hundred dollars a week. Staid with Johnson until he was elected vice-president. Returned to him after he became president. In August, 1865, was appointed special commissioner to investigate condition of the South. Returned in March, 1866. Two days afterward was appointed special agent of the Treasury Department and sent to South Carolina and Florida to investigate Direct Tax Commissioners. In August, same year, sent to Paris on a secret service trip by President Johnson. December of same year made special agent of the P. O. department of entire department of entire Pacific Coast from Alaska to Mexico, with jurisdiction of China, Japan and Hawaiian mails at $5000 a year and traveling expenses. This position I held three years, and visited all the countries above named. Dec. 8, 1869, married Augusta Mallard whose paternal grandfather was on the staff of Napoleon, and whose maternal grandfather was a soldier of the Revolution. From 1870 to 1877 owned the Daily Star of Los Angeles. From 1878 to 1879 was again special agent of P. O. D. From Jan. 1, 1879 to Jan..

1890. eleven years, I had charge of literary work of Southern Pacific R. R. Company at salary of $400 a month, and in that time I made thirty-eight trips across the Continent, accompanied by my family. Had executive charge of exhibit of South Pacific Co. at N. O. Exposition in 1884-5. Represented same Co. in London (American Ex.) in 1897 and in Paris in 1889. Had an exhibit in Chicago for 1891 and 1892 for So. Cal. and Santa Fe R. R., and was assistant chief of floriculture of Columbian Exposition. Am author of eight bound books and many others. Belong to Bohemian and Press Clubs of S. F. and Union and Press Clubs of Los Angeles. Belong to Loyal Legion and seven other associations. Of course you would be glad to know that we are not afraid of the wolf at the door. In other words, we are in good circumstances. Am now managing a fine newspaper in Los Angeles. Have one child, a daughter, twenty-four years old. I believe that gives you my record up to date. It is accurate, so far as I can remember, and I think there is no mistake in dates: if there were, though, that would be no disturbing feature.

My brother Johnnie was born in Providence in 1846, studied in college and in Europe, and graduated from the Columbian Law College, and was attorney for the Illinois and Rand & McNally. He made a fortune in Chicago at law in six years. Was the author of two law books and died in 1881 of pneumonia, leaving a wife and four children. His name was John Henry Truman, my only brother. I have three sisters living, all widows, all younger than I.

EBENEZER MACK TREMAN

SEVENTH GENERATION.

his father, in 1900. He was also elected a Director of the Tompkins County National Bank to succeed his father, in 1900. He is also a Director in the Ithaca Trust Company. Aside from his business duties he has found exercise for other talents: being a musician himself, and intensely interested in the subject, he has found ways in which to use his knowledge and wealth, to contribute not only to the gratification of his own artistic tastes but to contribute, through the channels of music, to the value of the work of his church, and to the pleasure of his fellow citizens. He is undisputably the leading musician and patron of music in Ithaca and that part of the State. He was one of the founders of the old Mozart Club, and its successor, the Ithaca Choral Club, taking an active part in its productions and giving it loyal support. He at an early age took entire charge, as choir-master, of the music of St. John's Protestant Episcopal church of Ithaca and the fame of its choir has been treasured as a memory by thousands of students of Cornell in every part of the world. It was through his efforts that the church has had for several years one of the best organs procurable. He was elected a Vestryman in St. John's P. E. church to succeed his father in 1900. He several years ago saw the need of a new Opera House in Ithaca, and while it did not promise, and has not realized, a profit to its promoters, yet prompted by a public spirit, worthy of emulation, he and a few other men of wealth, mostly in his own family, erected one of the finest play-houses in the State, at a cost of over sixty thousand dollars, that the college town might have some attractive place of assembly; of this, the Lyceum Company, he has been President since its organization. Not content in his many activities thus far in the musical line, he determined that Ithaca should have a band—not an ordinary band of the brass variety—but a band that would be the pride of its citizens wherever it should appear. This desire has been more than realized. The Ithaca Band is known favorably all over the country, having taken prizes in numerous contests with other famous bands, and filled an engagement of one week, August 6-11, 1901, at the Pan-American Exposition. Its success is largely due to his judicious advice and firm financial support and knowledge of music and musicians. He has accumulated, with discriminating judgment and at large expense, one of the finest general and musical libraries in the country, and wrote a manuscript History of Music in four volumes which has been beautifully embellished. He early took an interest in his family history and its achievements and spent much time in the collection of data relating to the family, till the pressure of business necessitated that he turn it over to another to complete, and the result is seen in the present volume, which shows an evidence of public spirit and unusual interest in one's family. In "Landmarks of Tompkins County, N. Y.," will be found a well written short history of the family from his pen, which shows much research and is a valuable contribution to both family and local history. He has always taken an active interest in Democratic politics but has invariably declined political office. He is a member of Knights of Pythias, St. Augustine Commandery, Knights Templar, and the Odd Fellows fraternities, and Tornado Hook and Ladder Company.

"Landmarks of Tompkins County" says of him:

"He became associated with the large interests of his father, though not a member of the hardware firm. He is secretary and superintendent of both the Water and Gas Companies, positions which require executive ability of a high order and fully occupy his time. He is also president of the recently (1894) formed Lyceum Company, and the erection of the new theatre in Ithaca is the realization of plans which he has had under consideration for many years. He is a young man of popular social qualities and highly esteemed in the business circles of his native city."

Residence, 1901, Ithaca, N. Y.

4005. JOHN SAYLES WATERMAN. He was born at Smithfield, Providence County, R. I. He graduated at Cornell University, 1877. While in college he was a member of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity. He was a member of the victorious Cornell Varsity crew at Saratoga Lake in 1875. He married Jeannie Mead Treman, 1806. He was engaged for several years in the manufacture of agricultural implements under the firm name of Treman, Waterman & Co. at Ithaca.

At the time of his death the Ithaca Daily Journal said of him:

"He was not only a close student while in the University but a fine athlete as well, and much of the credit of the Cornell crew's famous victories at Saratoga was due to his prowess, he pulling bow oar in those memorable contests. Some of his friends are of the opinion that his early physical decline was attributable to his over-exertion in those races. After finishing his studies, Mr. Waterman became interested in business here as a member of the firm of Treman, Waterman & Co."

He died March 10, 1891, at Pittsford, Vt. She resides, 1901, at Ithaca, N. Y.

Child:

4006. Louisa May. Born May 1, 1887, at Providence, R. I.

4010. JOHN WESTERVELT BUSH. (His father, Myron Philander Bush, was actively interested in all that pertained to the progress of Buffalo, financially, politically and socially. His mother, Margaret Westervelt, was of Dutch descent and her ancestry can be traced back to the early history of New York City. His paternal grandfather was a man of strong convictions, a staunch Baptist, who did much for his church. His paternal great-grandfather who was a soldier in the Revolutionary War, was of German ancestry.) He was born May 22, 1844, at Buffalo, N. Y. He married April 15, 1869, Katherine Corley Treman. 1802. He was a member of the firm of Bush & Howard, manufacturers of leather, 1869-1886, when the firm went out of business. He has been out of active business since 1886. Director in the Marine Bank of Buffalo; 1878-1895. Director in the Ithaca Gas Light Company and the Ithaca Water Works Company for several years. He never engaged actively in politics. He was one of the charter members of the Buffalo Club. She is a member of the Board of Women Managers of the Pan-American Exposition.

At the time of her election the Buffalo Times said of her:

"Mrs. John W. Bush, a member of the Board of Women Managers of the Pan-American Exposition, and on the Committee on Entertainments and Ceremonies and the Committee on Education of the Women's Board, was formerly Kate C. "Professor Beal's boyhood was spent on the farm with one year in the grist mill. "Born a Quaker, Professor Beal has never joined any religious society, while politically he is a Temperance Republican."

The Cyclopedia of American Biographies, by John Howard Brown, says of him:

"William James Beal, botanist, was born at Adrian, Mich., March 11, 1833. He was fitted for college at the Raisin Valley Seminary, and entered the University of Michigan in 1855, graduating in 1859. He then taught school for about three years, and in 1862 entered Harvard University, where he took a post-graduate course under Agassiz and Gray. In 1868 he accepted the professorship of Natural History in the University of Chicago, and in 1870 he was given the chair of Botany and Horticulture in the Michigan Agricultural College, which he held until 1883, when he was transferred to the professorship of Botany and Forestry. He became a member of numerous scientific societies, and contributed many original papers to the American Naturalist, the American Journal of Science, and to the reports of the Michigan Board of Agriculture and the several state societies. In 1875 he made a collection of grasses and woods for the Centennial exhibition at Philadelphia, which received much attention and won two diplomas. He was president of the Michigan State Teachers' Association in 1881, and president of the Society for the Promotion of Agricultural Science in 1880-81. He published "A New Botany" (1881) and "The Grasses of North America," both of which are highly esteemed by scientific men. Speaking of the latter work, Prof. A. J. Cook says: 'He is without doubt the best authority on the Gramineæ in the United States and one of the highest authorities in the world. His work on this family of plants is not only scientific and exhaustive, but is wonderfully accurate, so that the practical man can rely on it as a certain guide.'

He was Brevet Captain and officiated as Colonel during the last year of service. He has held several town offices. County Commissioner of Tioga County, Pa., three years. He died Sept. 7, 1901.

At the time of his death the Westfield Free Press said :

"Seth Tremain was born July 21, 1839, at Lindleytown, Steuben County, N. Y., and died at his home in Westfield, Sept. 7, 1901.

"He was of English stock, his ancestors having emigrated to America in the early part of the seventeenth century. From them he inherited a sturdy frame and those sterling qualities that made him respected as a man and a citizen.

"In 1846, he, with his father's family, moved to Lawrenceville where he resided until the breaking out of the Civil War, when he at once enlisted in Captain Phil Holland's company in the Pennsylvania Reserves, this being one of the first companies to enlist from Tioga County. Later he enlisted in Company F, Captain Harrower's company in the 86th N. Y., for three years. When his term of enlistment expired he again re-enlisted in the same regiment and served until the close of the war in 1865.

"Those, who are familiar with the history of the brave 86th, can form some idea of Mr. Tremain's experience as a soldier, for this regiment took part in nearly all the battles of Virginia, from Bull Run to Appomatox. Mr. Tremain, himself, was in some twenty battles and skirmishes, and was promoted to Second Lieutenant, then to First Lieutenant, and finally Brevetted Captain for meritorious service.

"In the battle of Gettysburg he was wounded, and while in service he contracted inflammatory rheumatism from which he never recovered, and as the result of this disease at last was stricken by death.

"March 3, 1867, he married Amelia King who died in 1888, leaving two daughters, Iva, now Mrs. Thos. Lynch, of Cross Fork, and Thyrsa, now Mrs. B. V. Pritchard, of Corning. A little son had preceded the mother to the land of shadows.

"In 1889, he married for his second wife, Mary F. Beardsley, of Wellsboro, who survives him. A daughter, Doris, is the only child of this union. Four brothers, G. H. Tremain and Orrin Tremain of this borough, Warren Tremain, of Elmira, Munson Tremain, of Franklinville, N. Y., and two sisters, Mrs. Almira Edgcomb and Mrs. Amelia Nealy, of Elmira, live to mourn the sundering of one more family tie.

"Besides Mr. Tremain's services to his country as a soldier, he has served the town and borough as constable and collector, and in 1887 was elected to the responsible office of County Commissioner."

Children :

5441. Col. Frederick Lyman. Born June 13, 1843, at Albany, N. Y. He attended Hobart College, 1860-1. Member of Theta Delta Chi college fraternity. First Lieutenant 7th New York Heavy Artillery, Volunteers. Promoted Adjutant Dec. 11, 1863, to Capt. and A. A. G. Lieutenant Colonel 10th N. Y. Cavalry and Assistant Adjutant General U. S. Vols., New York. Died, Feb. 6 (o. S), 1865, at Hatcher's Run, Va. The History of the Lyman Family says of him : "He went from Hobart College into the army, and rose to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel of the 10th N. Y. Cavalry. Having passed through twenty-five battles and skirmishes, and achieved a brilliant record, he was killed by a rebel sharpshooter while leading his regiment at Hatcher's Run, Virginia, in Feb., 1865. The brief and brilliant career of this youthful warrior, which for heroic daring in action, coolness, consummate skill and generalship has seldom been surpassed, deserves a further record than time and space will now allow. Parental affection has fondly and eloquently said : To the pen of history belongs the noble task of recording the military operations in which he had the honor to participate during the ever memorable campaign of 1864. And yet when we consider the bloody and obstinate nature of the battles that were fought, the glorious and unconquerable resolution which was displayed in conducting the movements of the Union armies, the immense loss of human life, the masterly combinations of those armies, the vast extent of country which constituted the field of their display, the number of those brilliant raids performed by the cavalry alone, through the heart of an enemy's country, each one constituting an interesting history of itself, the toil, the sacrifices, the fatigue, sufferings and perils to which the heroic soldiers in those armies were continually subjected, and to which, with unflinching fortitude and cheerfulness they submitted, when we consider, too, the innumerable deeds of personal bravery, performed both by officers and men, the holy patriotic purposes by which the great body of those armies was prompted, the unselfish willingness they manifested to sacrifice their lives for the preservation of the honor, the integrity, and the unity of their country, and, finally, the glorious and successful results of all these operations, we may well doubt whether history will ever contain more than an outline skeleton of them all. He participated in no less than twenty-five battles and skirmishes in ten months, rose high in rank, and achieved at the age of twenty-one years a reputation for military qualifications and talents which were the admiration of all and might well be the envy of renowned veterans.

The scene of his splendid achievements was the famous battles of the Wilderness and in connection with them the ever memorable raids of Gen. Sheridan, in which he acted a conspicuous and brilliant part until struck down by the deadly aim of a rebel sharpshooter. Col. Tremain went to the field in the fall of 1862, as Adjutant of the Seventh Volunteer Artillery. Not relishing the monotony and inactivity of garrison life, to which duty the regiment was assigned, he sought and obtained a transfer, and was detailed to staff service in the field, with Gen. Gregg, in the cavalry corps of Gen. Sheridan. And there he found abundant opportunity for the display of his high soldierly qualities. He was foremost in every battle in which that corps engaged, and which has rendered it and its heroic leaders famous in the annals of the war. He was in that ever memorable ride from Rapidan to the James, during which a score of battles were fought, millions of the enemy's property destroyed, the outer fortifications of Richmond entered, and prodigies of valor displayed by every member of the heroic band. On the James he joined in most of the cavalry reconnoissances and raids which have passed into history as among the most dramatic of the war, and fell while engaged in driving back the rebel force which attempted to check the resistless progress of our troops. Col. Tremain was a young man to be admired and loved. He combined, with a noble presence, winning manners and attractive social qualities. As a soldier he was prompt and fearless. He was a brave rider, and coveted nothing so much as perilous adventure. He early attracted the attention of his superior officers by his manly bearing and gallant deeds and earned his promotions by his heroic achievements. Educated and chivalrous, he speedily won the confidence of his superiors, and promotion soon followed the development of the soldierly accomplishments which distinguished him in the many battles in which he participated. No better evidence of his merits as a soldier need be cited than the fact that he earned the rank of Lieutenant Colonel at the early age of twenty-one. The history of this war, participated in by so many of the youth of the country, and offering unprecedented opportunities for promotion, affords but few instances of one so young attaining this distinction." Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography says of him: "Frederick Tremain, soldier, b. in Durham, Green Co., N. Y., in June, 1843; d. near Petersburg, Va., 6 Feb., 1865, entered Hobart in 1860 but abandoned his studies in 1862, and entered the National army. He was appointed adjutant of the 7th New York Heavy Artillery, served in the defences of Washington, and was afterwards made Adjutant-General with the rank of Captain, on the staff, in Kilpatrick's division of the Army of the Potomac. In December, 1864, he was commissioned Lieutenant Colonel of the 10th New York Cavalry. He commanded this regiment at the battle of Hatcher's Run, where he received the wound of which he died."

At the time of his death the Sullivan County Republican said :

" 'Like one who wraps the drapery of his couch
 About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams.' "

“The angel, whose summons all must heed, visited one of our oldest and most respected citizens, Israel P. Tremain, on Friday, Sept. 1st, at half-past four in the afternoon, and called him to his rest. So gentle and quiet was the summons that, surrounded by the comforts and love of his home, seated in his favorite chair, the deceased seemed but to slumber peaceful and calmly, to shortly awaken; but the sleep was eternal.

“Mr. Tremain’s health had been poor for the past two years. He had known his days on earth were limited and had often spoken of it, and had truly “ ‘Sustained and soothed

By an unfaltering trust, approached his grave.’

“He suffered with an organic disease of the heart, which trouble for the past few months, necessitated his being very quiet, and avoiding all excitement.

“On the day of his death, he was about the house as usual and did some writing, after which he remarked that he was tired and wished to rest. He sat in his easy rocking chair and as a child drops off to slumber, passed away; spared even the slightest touch of pain.

“Deceased was born May 17th, 1815, in Oak Hill, Durham Township, Greene Co., N. Y. From his boyhood to his majority he worked in his father’s tannery and attended school. His education was begun in the district school at his home and completed at the Durham Academy.

“The scarcity of hemlock bark at his place of business, necessitated a change, therefore in 1836, he came to Monticello and went to Tannersville, south of Bridgeville, where his brother Edwin Tremain, Gideon Howard and himself, purchased the large tannery of Bushnell & VanHorne.

“In August, 1839, he bought out his brother’s interest in the tannery and was thereby a two-thirds owner in the concern which operated under the name of Tremain & VanHorne. This firm continued business until 1866, when they closed up, as the hemlock bark was nearly exhausted. They had used on an average 3,000 cords of bark per annum for the thirty years they had been in business, or 90,000 cords in all. Mr. Tremain resided at Tannersville from 1836 until 1852, when he removed to Monticello where he lived until the time of his death.

"The Union Bank of Sullivan County, was established in the fall and winter of 1851 and 1852, and in 1863 it was reorganized as the National Union Bank. Mr. T. was a director in the bank from 1853 to 1884. Mr. Bennett retired from active duties in 1863, and left the bank in charge of Mr. Tremain, who from that time until 1884, when he resigned, was at times either President or Cashier of the institution.

"Since 1884, Mr. T. has lived a quiet and uneventful life, attending to his own private affairs, taking much interest in his garden and home. On several occasions he was asked to accept the candidacy for legislative offices, but declined. He was elected Supervisor over Captain Hamilton in 1854, and was a trustee of the village of Monticello in 1891.

"Mr. Tremain was married to Miss Harriet Allen, daughter of Samuel Seabury Allen, a merchant, and Harriet Flower, and aunt of Gov. Roswell P. Flower, at the bride's home in Oak Hill, January 1st, 1840, in the Episcopal Church at that place, by Rev. E. K. Fowler, of St. John's Church, of Monticello. Rev. Mr. Fowler was taken by Mr. Tremain from this village to Oak Hill, in a sleigh, which brought the bride and groom of fifty-three years ago, back to Monticello, where the honeymoon was spent.

"A warm friendship existed between the minister and Mr. Tremain, which gives an example of the worth of the first rector of St. John's Church. Mr. Tremain was en route to Bridgeville and was very sick, Mr. Fowler noticed him, and getting in the stage accompanied him to his home, and lovingly nursed the sick man through a dangerous illness, only coming to Monticello on Sundays to preach while the sickness lasted; and from that time no two men loved each other better.

"Mr. and Mrs. Tremain were both confirmed in St. John's Church in 1840. Mr. T. was a vestryman of the Church from 1840 to 1863, and a warden from the latter date until 1883, when he resigned, as the new stone church was completed, ready for occupancy and fully paid for."

President of The People's Bank, 1893-1901. Director in the Iowa Road Improvement Association.

“HUMBOLDT, IOWA, FEB. 24, 1893.

“DEAR SIR—Yours of twenty-first received. I regret to say I am unable to tell you much about the Tremains. My father said but little about his parents or grandparents, largely, I think, because he was left to provide for himself at about ten years of age. We came West in 1845 and while I had then seen but an uncle and cousin, and them but once, I never again saw a relative of my father's. My father, Joseph C. Tremain (the middle name was Collins), was born in Massachusetts about 1788; losing his first wife, he married in Chautauqua County, N. Y., Harriet Turner—my mother—her father was one of the first settlers at Fredonia. One son, Ralph J. Tremain, and two daughters, by my father's first wife, still live. I am the only living member of the family of the second marriage. My father died in Iowa in 1880, my mother in 1861.

“My father early spelled the name Treman, leaving out the i. In 1845, father's brother, Reuben Tremain, then living at Rodman, Jefferson County, N. Y., with his bachelor son, Geo. C., and his son Gaius and his wife visited us just prior to our starting West. I clearly recall incidents of that meeting. My uncle Reuben, it seemed to me, was not a handsome man, but as I heard him talk and discovered the nobility of his mind, I came to think him a noble looking man. I recall a discussion of my uncle and father as to the correct way of spelling the name. Uncle for Tremain, father for Treman. Uncle prevailed and ever afterwards father spelled it Tremain. Uncle Reuben was an ardent Presbyterian, father an ardent Universalist; both were debaters and men of more than ordinary ability and liking to argue.

"My cousin, George C., then a man of about thirty-eight to forty, was a large, fine looking bachelor. A five dollar gold piece he tossed me, a boy of twelve, saying, 'it's because you (meaning me) are called George,' has never been forgotten. I was proud to bear the name of so fine a looking man. I recall, as we went West by team, our visit in Ohio with one, Henry Truman, my father's half-brother,—he, it seems, had without any authority quietly adopted the name Truman—it seemed to me he had hit on the best name of the three—Truman, Treman, Tremain. Since then and up to 1880 I knew a son of his who spelled his name Truman, so it would seem my father's attempt to get this half-brother to adopt the Tremain was fruitless.

"My father was about 5 feet 10, rather stout built, a great reader, an active participant in every current event. First a Democrat and finally a Republican; quite a lawyer, or as we would now say, a good backwoods lawyer; an ardent temperance man and a fair speaker. Money getting was to him the last thing to consider. G. M. Tremain, of Fredonia, N. Y., whom I have visited, has much of the same build and I should think he would be able to give you much information. However, I think he writes his name Tremaine. There lived until recently a family of Tremains in Hamilton Co., Iowa. Ira Tremain, the father, was a tall, spare man. He served in the Iowa Legislature and was, I am told, an excellent man. That family are now living on the Pacific Coast.

"I was born in Chautauqua County, N. Y., June, 1833. I am 6 foot 1, and weigh 210. I have two sons, man grown, both living here. I am very sorry and have for years felt the regret that I did not know more about the family, the name and nativity of our ancestors, but I have treasured up all I ever learned, and my regret must be not that I forgot, but that I did not learn.

"W. H. J. Tremain, of Nora Springs, Iowa, came into my office this morning in a hurry. I know nothing of his family history, but he thinks we must be akin and certainly his physique bears that construction. I am very much interested in your letter and hope to hear farther from you, and here tender you my services in anything you think I can do.

Yours truly,

"G. L. TREMAIN."

“HUMBOLDT, IOWA, APRIL 3, 1893.

“DEAR SIR—On my return home find yours of 15th ult. and give it my best attention. I do not know anything of my father's half-brothers or their families. One, Silas Truman, did a few years ago live at Brush Creek, Iowa. He was a son of my father's half-brother, one that called himself Truman. As I recall it, Reuben was my father's own brother. Henry was a half-brother, and as I see them, Reuben and my father had a strong resemblance while Henry had none of it.

“I do not often see W. H. J. Tremain, of Nora Springs. Perhaps you better not rely on me for news of him or his. I have recently learned that Ira Tremain has moved into Webster City, Iowa. He has a son, H. H., living at Eagle Grove, Iowa, a mail agent on C. & N. W. R. R.

“G. M. Tremaine, of Fredonia, N. Y., would, I think, be able to give you much information. I have met him: he has the earmarks of our tribe and is, I think, a good man.

“It occurs to me you have undertaken a big job; one that leads to much work, no little annoyance, much delay and how much profit. I conclude you have a taste in that especial direction, and work more to gratify that taste with little other reward.

“When you think I can be of service to you command me.

“Yours,

“G. L. TREMAIN.”

“HUMBOLDT, IOWA, FEB. 3, 1901.

“M. E. POOLE, ESQ., ITHACA:

“DEAR SIR—Answering yours of January 26th. Up to 1845 my father wrote his name Treman. Then at the instance of his brother, Reuben Tremain, of Jefferson Co., N. Y., he added the i and ever afterwards wrote Tremain.

“Reuben Tremain came to our house when I was a boy of twelve in 1845. I understand uncle Reuben was a Presbyterian minister. He had a son Gaius and a son George, both of whom I also saw in 1845.

“There is now living at Fredonia, N. Y., a G. M. Tremaine, a descendant of the Jefferson County family who uses an e at end of his name. There is living at Webster City, Iowa, a Doctor Tremaine.

“On our way West in 1845 we called on a half-brother of my father's at or near Wooster, Ohio. He spelled his name Truman. I can't recall his given name but a son of his, Silas Truman, now lives at Strawberry Point, Iowa.

"I have never been able to understand why such a variety of names or spellings came about. I followed my father closely and since 1845 have stuck to Tremain. My full name is George Lafayette. I always sign G. L. Yours,

"G. L. TREMAIN."

“The announcement yesterday afternoon of the death of Cleveland Truman, was as startling as it was heart-breaking and crushing to the friends of the young man and sorely bereaved family. For the past two weeks the deceased has been ill with fever, but at no time was his condition considered dangerous or critical, until yesterday morning, when the fever took a sudden change, and he sank rapidly, passing away about four o'clock, surrounded by the beloved ones who had done all that was possible in human skill to save him. The deceased, who was the son of Hon. J. C. Truman, of this city, was one of the most honorable, manly and popular young gentlemen of the city, and was beloved and respected by the wide circle of admiring friends and acquaintances. He filled the responsible and trusted position of money-order clerk under Postmaster Hull, and was one of his most trusted associates. He was twenty-two years of age, and leaves a wife and little daughter, besides his parents, to mourn his untimely demise.”

The Owego Gazette gave the following account of the accident and tribute to his memory: "Two of Owego's best known society men lost their lives last evening. Frank T. Stanbrough and Alva S. Odell were bathing in the Susquehanna river with two girls, one of whom they were trying to teach to swim. Getting into deep water Odell lost control of the young woman and called to Stanbrough to come to his assistance. In the struggle all three went down, but the girl was rescued by Superintendent Ditmar, of the Owego Gas Company, who was out in a rowboat. She was unconscious but soon revived. When Stanbrough and Odell were finally pulled out of the water there was little evidence of life. Half a dozen physicians worked over them on the river bank for an hour, but with no success. The men were among the best known society people in town. Stanbrough is the younger son of Dr. J. B. Stanbrough. He was about thirty-five years old and was one of the heirs of the large Truman estate. Both of the young men were very popular and held in high esteem in this village. When the news of the terrible calamity spread over the village the river bank was crowded with the friends of the dead men, who hoped the doctors would be successful in restoring them to consciousness and who deeply sympathize with the members of the bereaved families. Mr. Stanbrough was bookkeeper at his father's stove and plumbing store in Front street. He was a member of Defiance Hook and Ladder Company, No. 5, and also a member of Sasana Loft Tribe, I. O. R. M."

N. Y.; Private in Capt. Joseph Wilmarth's Co., Col. Thomas Carpenter's Regt.; enlisted July 28, 1780; marched to Tiverton, R. I., on alarm.) He was born Sept. 7, 1864, at Whitehall, Washington Co., N. Y. He prepared at Glidden's Classical School, Jamestown, N. Y., and graduated at Hamilton College, 1886. He studied law with Judge John D. Teller, of Auburn, N. Y., and was admitted to the Bar in 1888. While in college he was a member of the Chi Psi and Phi Beta Kappa fraternities. Clerk of the Surrogate's Court of Cayuga County, N. Y., 1887-9. He removed in 1891 to Buffalo, N. Y., where he is one of the leading attorneys. He married, April 25, 1895, by Rev. Samuel V. V. Holmes (Pres.), Katherine Tremaine Bush. 4012. Lecturer in the Buffalo Law School. Member of the Society of Sons of the American Revolution, the Buffalo Club, the Liberal Club, the Independent Club of which he was President in 1897, and the New York State Bar Association. Editor of the Purple and Gold, 1886-90. Contributor to the Review of Reviews, Munsey's, Outing and the Buffalo Illustrated Express. He is a Republican in politics, a member of the Republican League of Buffalo and was editor of its organ, The Opinion, for one year.

“Men of New York” says of him:

“William H. Hotchkiss, though still a young man, even if the term be narrowly interpreted, has already made a name for himself, and accomplished much good in a field of usefulness cultivated too little by men of his standing and capacity. He is a type of the young professional men, of liberal education and well-developed talent, who interest themselves in public affairs for the public good. He was prepared for college at Glidden's Classical School in Jamestown, N. Y., going from there to Hamilton College, where he graduated at the age of twenty-two with the degree of A.B. He secured the much coveted Phi Beta Kappa Key, besides honors in literature, oratory, debating, Greek, Latin and mathematics, and delivered the Head prize oration and Latin salutatory. Three years after his graduation, his college conferred on him the degree of A.M.

“Law was the profession that Mr. Hotchkiss had chosen for himself, and with a view to obtaining a practical knowledge of legal procedure as early as possible, he accepted, after completing his college course, the appointment of clerk of the Surrogate's Court of Cayuga County, at Auburn, N. Y. The surrogate at that time was John D. Teller, whose name became familiar throughout the State by his candidacy for judge of the Court of Appeals on the Democratic ticket in 1895. Mr. Hotchkiss served as clerk two years, 1887-9. Meantime, in 1888, he was admitted to the Bar. Judge Teller took him into partnership, and he practiced at Auburn, in the firm of Teller & Hotchkiss, till 1891. He then moved to the larger field of Buffalo, where he entered into partnership with E. L. Parker, and where he has since pursued his profession. The firm of Parker & Hotchkiss has risen rapidly in both influence and volume of business, and now ranks among the leading commercial and banking law firms of Buffalo. Mr. Hotchkiss is a lecturer on the law of personal property in the Buffalo Law School.

“The great problems of municipal government, so long neglected in American cities, were just beginning to receive serious public attention when Mr. Hotchkiss began the real work of his manhood. To the study of these problems he addressed himself with the energy of youth, the earnestness of strong convictions, and an honest desire to serve right purposes. He has contributed articles frequently to the Review of Reviews, Munsey’s, Outing and the Buffalo Illustrated Express, his range of subject including travel as well as municipal problems. In the latter field, however, he has become recognized as an authority. He wrote a pamphlet monograph on Urban Self Government in 1892, and has since delivered numerous lectures on that and kindred subjects. His interest in politics has been in the line of promoting ideas, rather than in the actual work of machines. He took an active part in exposing the ballot frauds in Buffalo in 1892, and has served as Secretary of the Committee on law and legislation of the Buffalo Citizens’ Association for three years. He is also an active member of the Buffalo Republican League, having served two years on the executive committee, and one year as editor of its organ, The Opinion. He is a member of the Chi Psi college fraternity, and served as editor-in-chief of its magazine, Purple and Gold, from 1886 to 1890. He belongs, also, to the Sons of the American Revolution, the Buffalo Club, the Liberal Club, the Independent Club, and the New York State Bar Association. Especially worthy of mention is his work in connection with the drafting of the reform charter of Buffalo.”

He is of an inventive turn of mind and has invented and patented several valuable inventions.

“Landmarks of Tompkins County” says of him :

“As a boy his ambition was to secure a good education, and after exhausting the resources of the district schools he became a student of the Ithaca High School. The year of his majority he taught school in the town of Ulysses, and in 1883 he entered the State Normal School at Cortland, after which he became the principal of the Jacksonville school, where he remained for five successive terms. It was his intention to follow teaching as a profession, but the study of law was too strong an attraction for him to resist, and in 1887 he came to Ithaca, and the following three years we find him in the law office of M. N. Tompkins, Esq. He then spent a year in the office of Jared T. Newman, Esq., and then became law clerk in the office of Almy & Bouton. Bradford Almy was elected County Judge in the fall of 1891, assuming the duties of the office January 1, 1892, and that was the date of Mr. Terry's appointment as Clerk of the Surrogate's Court of Tompkins County, which office he still holds."

He was born April 19, 1845. He was prepared at Dr. Reed's School, Geneva, N. Y., and graduated at Union College, 1866, and the Albany Law School. While in college he was a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity. He studied law with Peckham & Tremaine and after his admission to the Bar became a member of the firm. He married Miss Martin, of Auburn, N. Y. They had five children. He was a lawyer of great ability. He early took an active interest in Republican politics, was a very effective stump speaker and was the Republican candidate for Attorney General of the State of New York in 1877. He was the orator at many historical celebrations.

At the time of his death an Albany newspaper said :

“Perhaps there has never been more general regret expressed and felt in this city, than over the early death of Grenville Tremain. Handsome in person, gifted in intellect, possessed of high powers of eloquence, he was the beau ideal of the young advocate, and exhibited powers that would have placed him yet higher than in the high rank of the profession that he illustrated and adorned. At such a time as this, it is not so much the genius of the man or his ability, the strength or grasp or shrewdness of his intellect, that recurs to the minds of his friends—these things but increase the already intense sense of loss by magnifying its greatness—but those attributes of the deceased that, while they add a new pang, sweeten the bitterness of the calamity, are his perfect manliness, his truthfulness, his high, clear sense of honor, his love of the true and right. No one can recall in all the activity of his life a cruel or an unkind word, a slur or innuendo, or an insinuation that would tend to throw even a shadow upon a rival reputation or wound the tenderest sensibilities. He had all the strength of the strongest man with the sweetest sensibilities of the most delicate woman. There was about him a freshness and naturalness from which the roughest contact never took the bloom. In all his legal and forensic contests he was never accused of taking an undue advantage or of delivering an unfair blow. He was the Bayard of the profession, without fear and without reproach. He was a patriot not only from cool judgment, but with the warm enthusiasm that loved his country even as his mother, and as his elder brother gave his life for fatherland so Grenville would have been ready to have sacrificed his had his country called ; to him patriotism was a belief, and a sentiment, that is stronger sometimes than a belief ; all this crystallized into the golden sentences dropped by his silver tongue in the matchless oration pronounced by him at the laying of the corner stone of the Williams monument, when the great concourse gathered there declared that never did Webster give birth to more fitting discourse—for the audience were moved by the manly beauty and entranced by the noble eloquence of the orator. This effort was perhaps the most complete, scholarly, and rhetorical of the many speeches of his busy life.

“To the advantages that Mr. Tremain possessed in person and voice and intellect, he added an untiring industry that was undoubtedly the cause of his death. Possessed of so fine a physique, he never seemed to think that the keen blade could wear out the strongest scabbard ; he gave himself no rest ; night and day he labored at his professional duties ; and when in his last hours his mind wandered it wandered into those professional paths where had been won his early garlands and his youthful fame. Nominated by a great party for the high office of attorney-general ; nominated without hint or asking from himself, his nomination was received by his own party with glad acclaim ; and hundreds of the opposite party, those who knew him, marked their appreciation of his honesty, his ability, and his fitness for the place, by giving him the votes that carried him ahead of his fellows on the same ticket. He leaves to his family, to his widow and his children, the proud, the blessed memory and inheritance of a name kept unstained and unsullied through the fierce turmoil of professional and political contests, and a faith as clear and simple and as honest as that of a little child,—one of those who shall always see the face of the Father, for of such is the kingdom of heaven.”

Another Albany paper said :

“It is with sorrow unfeigned and deep, that we announce to our readers this morning the death of Mr. Grenville Tremain, which event occurred at his residence in this city yesterday afternoon about two o'clock, after a brief illness. He was the son of Hon. Lyman and Mrs. Helen Tremain, and he inherited many of the talents of his most distinguished father. He was born in the little village of Durham, Greene county, on the 19th day of April, 1845, and was consequently in the thirty-third year of his age. At an early period of his life, his father removed from Durham to this city, and entered into partnership with his old friend, the late Judge Peckham. Grenville was the second son, his brother the late Lieut.-Col. Frederick Tremain, who was killed in the last year of the war, being his senior by two or three years. Young Grenville was educated at the school of Dr. Reed, in Geneva in this State, and from that institution entered Union College, where he graduated with high honors. He then entered as a student the law office of Peckham & Tremain, and also attended the Albany Law school and graduated from that institution ; and then further pursued his studies in the office, until in 1867 he became a partner in the firm of Peckham & Tremain, and from that day until the day of his death he was an active and useful member of that firm. Mr. Tremain early displayed at the bar the qualities of an able, learned, eloquent and accomplished lawyer. He entered at once into the litigations with which his firm was connected, and scarcely a case was tried by either member of the firm at Albany, that was not prepared by him, and that did not receive the benefit of his indefatigable industry and painstaking research. He very early received the confidence of his clients, and he was soon engaged as attorney and counsel in many important litigations. He had the entire respect and confidence of the bench, and no judge ever listened to Mr. Tremain's statement of the facts of a case without an entire trust in the substantial accuracy thereof.

"When Mr. Judson was elected Mayor, no other name than that of Mr. Tremain was thought of for the important and laborious position of Corporation Counsel, and from that day to the time of his death it can be truly said that he knew not a leisure moment. No one who has not occupied that office is aware of the engrossing nature of its duties when properly performed, and no one of his able predecessors ever brought to the discharge of the duties of that office a more conscientious determination to discharge them fully and properly than did Mr. Tremain. No department of the city government hesitated to call upon him for advice and assistance at all times, and no city official ever left him without being satisfied that he had received from Mr. Tremain the counsel which he desired, and which resulted from a most painstaking and exhaustive examination of the subject submitted to him. When his term of office expired, he kept on in the discharge of his professional duties without rest, recreation or interruption.

"The delicate health of his father at this time left the firm to grapple with something of a large practice, and Mr. Tremain took his full share of the labor and responsibility of active professional life. Last year about this time, upon the failure of certain insurance companies in New York, and the appointment of a receiver for them, he was retained as counsel for such receiver, and from that time on he was busy, literally, night and day. The business called him frequently to New York, and he shrank from no labor that the human frame could endure, in order to faithfully and ably discharge the duties of the high trust that had been committed to his care. And it was melancholy in his last illness, when the hand of death was on him, and his mind wandering, to hear from his incoherent speech, how firmly his thoughts were fixed upon the discharge of his professional labors.

“Last fall, at the Republican Rochester Convention, without the suspicion of a request from him to any man, unsought and wholly unsolicited, the high honor and compliment of a nomination, by acclamation, for the office of Attorney General of the State, was accorded to this young man, then standing in the very front rank of his profession among the younger members of the bar. Though suffering the fate of his ticket, it was most gratifying to him and his friends to see the way in which he was appreciated by those in whose midst he had grown up and passed the whole of his professional life.. His vote in Albany county was many hundreds greater than that received by the rest of his ticket.

“Thus he stood but yesterday, as brilliant and eminent a lawyer as any one of his age throughout the length and breadth of the State. To-day he is at rest.

“To those who knew Mr. Tremain socially, his loss will be irreparable. There was a manliness in his carriage, a frankness and tenderness of character about him, that charmed with the irresistible force of a pure, generous and loving heart. He leaves a wife and five small children, and he died on the birthday of his only son, who is, alas! too young to feel the loss of as generous, loving and tender a father as son ever had.

“He rests from his labors, and may he rest in peace. His stricken family have the profound sympathy of this community in this their hour of dire distress, and there is no heart but goes out in pity for the sorrow which this terrible calamity brings upon his suffering father.”

Another Albany paper said :

“The sad announcement in our last edition of yesterday—coming as it did without a warning to any save a very few of the nearest friends—conveyed a shock to this entire community, and carried a deep sense of personal loss to many hearts. There is something peculiarly touching in the sudden death of a young man of robust form and bright promise at the very threshold of a brilliant career. When a man of long years and wide fame passes away, a deeper impress may be left: but in the loss there is also a feeling that his opportunity has been given and his mission well advanced, perhaps altogether accomplished. But when one of rich talents and noble character and honorable ambition is cut down in the very dawn of youth, just as the full radiance of his promise was throwing its light over the pathway of his shining future, it adds the sorrow and the pathos of an opportunity denied and a work unfulfilled. It is like the blight of winter falling upon the early glory of summer.

“Grenville Tremain was only in his thirty-third year. The second son of Lyman Tremain, he inherited much of the ability and many of the characteristics of his honored father. Trained at Geneva, graduating at Union in 1866, and next winning the diploma of the Albany Law school, he engaged at once with ardor and enthusiasm in the profession whose severe tests and worthy prizes stimulated the highest impulses of his nature. He joined the firm to which two of the most eminent members of the Bar had given distinction, and both the names of Peckham and Tremain were well sustained by those who inherited them. Young Tremain leaped immediately to the front. He had great aptitude and admirable qualifications for his profession. He loved the science of the law and faithfully mastered its principles. His mind was acute, penetrating, fertile in resources and ready in action. With these fine intellectual attributes he united rare gifts of speech. He was fluent, graceful and forcible: his bearing was dignified and impressive while at the same time winning and unassuming; and the sense of honor, candor and truth which stamped all that he said and did, added the weight of character to the force and logic. Indeed, he combined in an unusual degree the qualities which adorn and strengthen his profession and mark the possessor for sure distinction.

“With this excellent equipment of natural gifts and acquired accomplishments, Mr. Tremain achieved immediate success. He prepared many important cases and participated prominently in their trial. So early and unmistakably had his abilities been shown, that when Mayor Judson appointed him Corporation Counsel, the fitness of the selection was universally recognized. His administration fully vindicated the public confidence. He reduced expenditures, took the work on his own shoulders, cut off extra counsel, successfully defended the city in many suits and effected a large public saving. Throughout his service he was impelled by a deep and conscientious sense of public duty, and when he retired it was with the sincere and cordial respect of all his fellow-citizens. Less than ten years at the bar, he had yet acquired such a standing that the Republican State Convention last fall unanimously presented him for the high office of Attorney General—a very marked tribute to so young a lawyer. During the progress of that canvass these columns contained a statement of some of the more important work which he had done in the law, and it was a record which few men of his years could equal. Though devoted chiefly to his profession, Mr. Tremain's sympathies and activities were not confined to it. He felt a warm interest in the higher range of politics and public questions, and was a favorite on the political rostrum. Occasionally he turned aside from the exacting demands of law to woo the muse of literature. Perhaps his most notable address of this character was that which he delivered at Schoharie on the dedication of the monument to one of the captors of Major Andre—an address which attracted wide attention.

“Mr. Tremain united the highest personal attractions with intellectual grace and moral strength. There was manly beauty in his form and manly virtue in his character. He was clean, pure, generous and ardent. No unworthy instincts debased the moral symmetry of his being. His manner was kindly and sincere; his words were gentle and persuasive; his whole individuality won the honor and esteem of all who knew him. He had a frankness and nobility of character with which only honorable aspirations could be associated. And with it all there was so much vitality, so much of virile life and strength, that he seemed the very picture of ideal manhood. How closely the blow strikes to those who were identified with him and counted him among themselves! We can hardly realize that he is gone—gone in the very flush of early life—gone within the few days since his hand was grasped. Always thinking of him as he stood before us, we may say of him as Mr. Curtis said of another who also in the morning of life ‘moved forward,’ and who was not unlike our departed in stainless beauty of character and vigorous buoyancy of manhood—the brilliant Theodore Winthrop: ‘Such was the electric vitality of this friend of ours that those of us who followed him could only think of him as approving the funeral pageant, not the object of it. We did not think of him as dead. We never shall. In the bright spring morning, 'he was alert, alive, immortal.' "

Another Albany paper said :

"A sad and most painful duty has devolved upon the editor of this journal,—that of recording the death of Grenville Tremain, which occurred in this city yesterday afternoon about three o'clock. It was only so recently that he was about, apparently in full and vigorous health, attending to his professional duties, and there were so few of his acquaintances and friends aware of the fact that he was ill at all, that the announcement of his death causes an unusual shock, and falls with crushing weight upon those who knew, admired and loved him. Just at the opening of what promised to be a useful and perhaps even a great career, Grenville Tremain has been called away, to plead before a higher tribunal than any in which his voice was accustomed to be heard. In the full vigor of robust manhood, with the most brilliant prospects opening up before him, with everything in life to live for, the grave beckoned to him, and with his form closes in the noble aspirations and ambitions of a manly and generous nature, shrouds more than one household in gloom, and leaves a large circle of friends to shed tears that are idle because they cannot call him back.

"Mr. Tremain was born in this city in 1845, and would have been thirty-three years of age if he had lived till next month. He was the second son of the Honorable Lyman Tremain, and early gave promise of the talents which he developed later in life. He was graduated from Union College in 1866, and from the Albany Law School a year later, subsequently to which he passed a rigid examination before a committee appointed by the Supreme Court, and was admitted to practice as an Attorney and Counsellor-at-Law. The old and well known law firm of Peckham & Tremain, which had for years consisted of Judge Rufus W. Peckham and Lyman Tremain, was continued after the retirement of the former from active practice, the new firm consisting of Rufus W. Peckham, Jr., and Grenville Tremain, with whom Hon. Lyman Tremain was associated as counsel. It speedily became one of the prominent legal firms of the city, and, indeed, of this part of the State. Grenville Tremain took naturally to the profession of the law. He had been properly trained for it. He possessed a logical mind, and that was sustained and reinforced by a remarkably acute and accurate memory. He did not forget things that he had once learned, and his capacity for learning was far above the average. Withal he was a pleasing and graceful speaker, a ready and courteous debater, and a thorough gentleman in his professional as well as in his private life. There are some lawyers who are gentlemen in their domestic and social relations, but not in their professional life. Grenville Tremain was not one of these.

“Possessing these qualities, and besides them a thorough knowledge of the law, a most hearty and kindly manner, and a warm and generous disposition, it is no wonder that Mr. Tremain should have made rapid advances in his profession, and in the confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens. It is not saying too much to remark that, at the time of his death, no man of his years in the city of Albany had more brilliant or more apparently certain prospects of a useful and distinguished career.

“Mr. Tremain, while by no means an office-seeker—which, indeed, he could not afford to be—nevertheless always took a lively interest in politics and political affairs. He was a thorough going Republican, and for that party had done much effective service as a speaker in several important campaigns. He was a forcible and at the same time pleasant and popular speaker, and the announcement of his name was always certain to draw a crowd. Under the administration of Mayor Judson, Mr. Tremain served with great acceptability as Corporation Counsel of this city, and last fall he received the unanimous nomination of the Republican State Convention for the honorable and responsible office of Attorney General of the State. Perhaps we could not speak more eloquently of his popularity among his friends and neighbors than by recalling the fact that in this county, which is supposed to have a legitimate Democratic majority of 2,500, Mr. Tremain last year received a majority of 600.

“In all our municipal affairs, and in everything pertaining to the interests of our city, Mr. Tremain was deeply interested. He was an active member, an officer in and one year President of the Young Men’s Association. We believe he was a life member of that body.

“Mr. Tremain was married several years ago to Miss Martin, of Auburn. His wife, and an interesting family of five young children, survive him.

"The writer of this article had for some years been the associate and intimate personal and political friend of the deceased. Having known him so well, he feels justified in saying that a truer friend, a more generous-hearted gentleman, a more faithful man in the discharge of trusts committed to his care, never lived. Such a man must have made his mark, had his life been spared a few years. Indeed, he had already made it; but in a few years more it would have been carved deeper and broader. The death of such a promising man is not to be considered a personal affliction alone. It is a public loss as well. Our friend has been called away, not, indeed, full of years, nor even yet of honors; but honored, and loved and mourned as one whom we knew to be faithful and true."

Another Albany paper said:

"The announcement of the death of Grenville Tremain, at three o'clock yesterday afternoon, was a painful surprise to the citizens of Albany, and will be received with regret by the public generally. No young man in this city was more widely known or universally respected for his brilliant talents and spotless character; and certainly no member of the Bar in this State had a more promising future. His professional achievements had already won for him an enviable reputation as a lawyer; while his oratorical powers, his acute reasoning faculties, his familiarity with public questions, his persuasive eloquence, and magnetic personal qualities fitted him for political leadership, and justified the expectations of his friends that he would become eminent in public life. These expectations were suddenly crushed by the hand of death; and the sorrow of his hosts of friends is the deeper because the blow was so unexpected. Most of them were unaware that he was ill; for up to a week ago he was in the active discharge of his professional duties, in the apparent enjoyment of vigorous health. Indeed it was only within a day or two that his disease, typhoid fever, exhibited any alarming symptoms.

"Mr. Tremain was a graduate of Union College, and subsequently of the Albany Law School. He became a partner in the distinguished law firm of Peckham & Tremain in 1865; corporation counsel under the administration of Mayor Judson, and last fall received the Republican nomination for attorney-general of the State.

"The deceased was a son of Hon. Lyman Tremaine, who, we regret to learn, is lying seriously ill at his residence in this city. He leaves a wife and five children. To the afflicted family such a bereavement as this can be assuaged only by the consolations of religion, and the reflection that he has been called to higher rewards than this life affords; but it may be some gratification to know that the sympathy of the whole community is extended to them in their overwhelming sorrow."

The following interesting letter on family history was written by him:

"FREDONIA, N. Y., FEB. 18, 1901.

"M. E. POOLE, ESQ.:

"DEAR SIR—YOUR favor of 22nd ult. was received. I made inquiry of Mary Ward, of Naysance, Ont., only surviving child of Reuben Tremaine. She says his father's name was Solomon; that he lived in Oneida County, N. Y. His children were Reuben and Joseph, sons by his first wife, name unknown to me; and Henry, Benjamin, Squire, Polly and Dolly, children by his second wife, whose maiden name was Collins. It is stated that Solomon, the father, died at Watson, Lewis County, N. Y. Reuben Tremaine married Laura Gridley. Their children were David, George C., Gaius, Asahel, sons, and Harriet, who married John Merrill, Mary, who married John Ward, Laura, who married Virgil Mathew, first husband, Buell Fox, second husband, and Sophia, who married Clark Near.

"Reuben Tremaine lived for the greater part of his life in Rodman, Jefferson County, N. Y., but passed his last days and died in Sandy Creek, N. Y. He was an active compatriot with Revs. Finney, Knapp, and more particularly with Rev. Jedediah Burchard in their forays upon the 'hosts of Satan,' holding 'protracted meetings' in northern New York. Reuben was most generally known by his title of Deacon, but was ordained a minister of the Congregational church. As a preacher he would hardly be compared with his compatriots, but in prayer and singing he was very effective. I can in my mind hear him render, 'When I can read my title clear to mansions in the skies' even now. But he departed from this life in 1866 and his chance of reaching his inheritance in the aforesaid mansions was as good as that of any one I ever knew. His son David died many years ago in Wisconsin. George C. was never married and he died in Naysance, Ont. Gaius married Mary Ann Sawyer; her name appears in the book of the Sawyer family. She made the first prayer in the 'Crusade,' and was an earnest worker in religious and temperance affairs. She also has her present residence in one of those 'mansions'. Gaius passed most of his life in the town of Rodman, Jefferson Co., N. Y., where he served several terms as supervisor. He removed to Fredonia, N. Y., in 1864, and died in 1869. Gaius' sons were George R. and Gaius M., daughters, Pamela S., Mary A., Emily J., Harriet N., Helen M., Grace E. and Lucy H. George R. and Harriet N. have died. The sons of George R. are Charles and Edward, who live in Pennsylvania. Gaius M. (myself) has one son, Gaius M., Jr., and one daughter, Anne M., a graduate of Cornell University and of the Women's Medical College of New York City, and now has a position in 'Craigie Colony' at Sonyea, N. Y. She has also been connected with the Board of Regents at Albany, N. Y. Gaius M., Jr., is the present Supervisor of the town of Pomfret, being where Fredonia is located. He has one son, Gaius M., the 3d. Asahel, the son of Reuben, had one son, William, who lives at Sandy Creek, N. Y.

"Referring to the foregoing, I would say that I think the recollection of my aunt, Mary Ward, is dimmed by the years, reaching about ninety. She makes no mention of a Gaius who was an uncle or great-uncle of my father and was a soldier in the Regular Army of the U. S. I also think Reuben was born in Connecticut and that it is so stated on his tombstone at Sandy Creek, N. Y. There was a Solomon Tremaine in Rodman from whom 'Tremaine's Corners' took its name. He was a relative of Reuben and had a son, Tompkins Tremaine, and Warren Tremaine; the last I think lives in Cleveland, Ohio. Joseph Tremaine, brother of Reuben, lived many years at Laona, N. Y., close by Fredonia, and was for a considerable period a justice of the peace and known widely as Squire Treman. It is too bad that he should not have known how to properly spell his own name. The family are from the County of Cornwall, England, where there is a manor held by the family. A book of heraldry published in England shows the name; it was 'Tremayne'. But to return to the subject. The sons of Joseph were Ralph and George L. and perhaps others. George L. is a banker at Humboldt, Iowa, and an inquiry made to him might supply other information of the family beside that of his own father. Dr. William S. Tremaine, a surgeon noted in this region, has died since I wrote before. He used the final 'e' in the last years of his life as his surviving family do now. I supplied the information which caused the correction. Now this has been written in a crude way and I think if the matter is not urgent in the way of time I could dig up some more. A few years ago I could have obtained much more information, but the sources from which I could have obtained it are no more available. In your work you have my best wishes. Get as near to the flood as you can, but as I never heard of the name of Noah in the family records, I conclude that the mists of the ages have obscured it or else the Tremaine family had a boat of their own. Of traditions which might have referred to that occasion, I have only the recollection of a mention of wet seasons when there was a poor outlook for the corn crop. I should be glad to hear from you again, and if I can supply any other material for your work will do so.

"Yours,

"GAIUS M. TREMAINE."

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS.

8000. JOSEPH TRUMAN. 1. ("Early Generations of the Brewster Family" in New England Hist. Gen., Reg., vol. 53, 1899, gives the following information: "William Brewster, father of Elder William Brewster, was appointed by Archbishop Sandys, in Jan. 1575-6, receiver of Scrooby and bailiff of the manor house in that place belonging to the Archbishop, to have life tenure of both offices. Elder William Brewster, his son, matriculated at Peterhouse, Cambridge, Dec. 3, 1580, but it does not appear that he remained there long enough to take his degree. The name of Elder Brewster's wife was Mary. Her maiden name has not yet been discovered. She d. April 17, 1627, at Plymouth, New England. Jonathan Brewster, son of Elder William Brewster, married, April 10, 1624, Lucretia Oldham, of Darby. Their daughter Ruth was born Oct. 3, 1631, at Jones River. She married, March 14, 1651, John Picket, of New London. She died May 1, 1677. He d. Aug. 16, 1667.")

Caulkins' History of New London, Conn., says :

"Jonathan Brewster, died in 1661.

"No probate papers relating to his estate have been found ; but bills of sale are recorded, dated in 1658, conveying all his property in the town plot, and his house and land at Poquetannuck, with his movables, cattle and swine—to-wit 4 oxen, 12 cows, 8 yearlings and 20 swine,' to his son, Benjamin Brewster, and his son-in-law John Picket. Feb. 14th, 1661-2, Mr. Picket relinquishes his interest in the assignment to his brother-in-law, stipulating only 'that my mother-in-law, Mrs. Brewster, the late wife of my father, Mr. Jonathan Brewster, shall have a full and competent means out of his estate during her life, from the said B. B. at her own dispose freely and fully to command at her own pleasure.'

'The same trustees, Brewster and Pickett, also conveyed certain lands to their sisters, Grace and Hannah, but in the settlement of the estate, no allusion is made to other children.

'Mrs. Lucretia Brewster, the wife of Jonathan, was evidently a woman of note and respectability among her compeers. She has always the prefix of honor (Mrs. or Mistress) and is usually presented to view in some useful capacity—an attendant upon the sick and dying as nurse, doctress or midwife—or a witness to wills and other important transactions. She was one of the first band of pilgrims that arrived at Plymouth in the Mayflower, December, 1620, being a member of the family of her father-in-law, elder William Brewster, and having one child, William, with her. Her husband came over in the Fortune, which arrived Nov. 10th, 1621.

'Jonathan Brewster settled first in Duxbury and was several times representative from that place. Subsequently he engaged in the coasting trade, and was master and probably owner of a small vessel plying from Plymouth along the coast to Virginia. In this way he became acquainted with Pequot Harbor, and entered the river to trade with the natives. In the spring of 1649 we find him overwhelmed with pecuniary disasters. Mr. Williams, of Providence, gives this notice of his misfortunes to Mr. Winthrop:

“ ‘Sir (though Mr. Brewster write me not a word of it) yet in private I am bold to tell you that I hear it hath pleased God greatly to afflict him in the thorns of this life. He was intended for Virginia, his creditors in the Bay came to Portsmouth and unhung his rudder, carried him to the Bay where he was forced to make over house, land, cattle and part with all to his chest. Oh how sweet is a dry morsel and an handful, with quietness from earth and heaven.’

“At the time of this misfortune, Mr. Brewster was purposing a change of residence and probably removed to Mr. Winthrop's plantation as soon as he could arrange his affairs with his creditors. He was 'Clarke of the Towne of Pequitt' in Sept., 1649. Part of his family came with him; but several children remained behind. He had two sons, William and Jonathan, on the military roll in Duxbury, in 1643; the latter only sixteen years of age. William was in the Narragansett war of 1645, after which his name is not found on the old colony records. Jonathan disappears from Duxbury about 1649, and it may be assumed that these two sons died without issue. Two daughters are traced in the old colony—Lucretia mentioned at the early date of 1627, and Mary, who married John Turner, of Scituate.

“At New London we find one son and four daughters. Benjamin married, 1659, Anna Dart, and settled at Brewster’s Neck, on the farm of his father. Elizabeth married, first, Peter Bradley, and second, Christopher Christophers. She was aged forty-two in 1680. Ruth married John Picket, probably about 1652. Grace married, August 4th, 1659, Daniel Wetherell. Hannah married, Dec. 25th, 1664, Samuel Starr. She was aged thirty-seven in 1680. Ezekiel Turner, a grandson of Mr. Brewster, from Scituate, settled in New London, about the year 1675.”

“John Picket, died August 16th, 1667.

“It is much to be regretted that a full record of the early marriages, which were undoubtedly by Mr. Winthrop, was not preserved. The marriage of John Picket and Ruth Brewster belongs to the unrecorded list. Their children were: 1. Mary, who married Benjamin Shapley. 2. Ruth who married Mr. Moses Noyes, first minister of Lyme. 3. William, who died about 1690. 4. John, born July 25th, 1656. 5. Adam, born Nov. 15th, 1658. 6. Mercy, born January 16th, 1660-1. Married Samuel Fosdick.

“Mr. Picket’s estate was appraised at £1,140. This was sufficient to rank him, at that period, as one of the wealthiest merchants of the place.

“Ruth, relict of John Picket, married, July 18th, 1668, Charles Hill.

“The three sons of Mr. Picket died young, and at sea; two of them, and perhaps all, in the island of Barbadoes. John and William were unmarried.

“Adam Pickett married May 16th, 1680, Hannah, daughter of Daniel Wetherell. He died in 1691, leaving two sons: Adam, born in 1681; John, in 1685. The former died in 1709, without issue, so that the family genealogy recommences with a unit.

“The Picket house-lot, at the southwestern extremity of the bank, descended nearly integral to the fourth John Picket, among whose children it was divided, and sold by them in small house plots, between 1740 and 1750. Brewer Street was opened on the western border of this lot in 1745, and at first called Picket Street. John Picket, the fifth of the name, removed from New London, and with him, the male branch of the family passed away from the place. Descendants may be traced in the line of Peter Latimer, whose wife was Hannah Picket, and of Richard Christophers, who married Mary Picket, daughters of John Picket the fourth."

"Benjamin Shapley, died Aug. 3d, 1706.

"Benjamin, son of Nicholas Shapleigh of Boston, was born, according to Farmer's Register, in 1645. We find no difficulty in appropriating this birth to Benjamin Shapley, mariner, who about 1670 became an inhabitant of New London. The facts which have been gathered respecting this family are as follows:

"Benjamin, son of Nicholas Shapley, of Charlestown, married Mary, daughter of John Picket, April 10th, 1672. Children: 1. Ruth, b. Dec. 24th, 1672. Married John Morgan of Groton. 2. Benjamin, b. March 20th, 1675. Married Ruth, daughter of Thomas Dymond. 3. Mary, b. March 26th, 1677. Married Joseph Truman. 4. Joseph, b. Aug. 15th, 1681. Died young. 5. Ann, b. Aug. 31st, 1685. Married Thomas Avery of Groton. 6. Daniel, b. Feb. 14th, 1689-90. Married Abigail Pierson of Killingworth. 7. Jane, b. 1696. Married Joshua Appleton. 8. Adam, b. 1698. Died young.

"Mary, relict of Benjamin Shapley, died Jan. 15th, 1734-5. The Shapley house-lot was on Main Street, next north of the Christophers lot, and was originally laid out to Kempo Sybada, a Dutch captain. Shapley Street was opened through it in 1746. Captain Adam Shapley, who received his death wound at Fort Griswold, in 1781, was a descendant of Daniel Shapley."

8020. JOSEPH TRUMAN. 34. Caulkins' History of New London, Conn., says:

"Hallam. John and Nicholas Hallam were the sons of Mrs. Alice Liveen, by a former marriage, and probably born in Barbadoes—John in 1661, and Nicholas in 1664. John married Prudence, daughter of Amos Richardson, in 1682, and fixed his residence in Stonington, where he died in 1790. His possessions were large; a thousand acres of land were leased to him in perpetuity by John Richardson of Newbury in 1692 for the consideration of five shillings and an annual rent of one pepper-corn;' and his inventory gives evidence of a style of dress and housekeeping, more expensive and showy than was common in those days. It contains silver plate, mantle and coat of broadcloth, lined with silk, 'seventeen horse kind,' four negro servants, &c.

"Nicholas Hallam married Sarah, daughter of Alexander Pygan, July 8, 1686. Children: 1. Alexander, born Oct. 22, 1688. 2. Edward, born April 25, 1693. Married Grace Denison. 3. Sarah, born March 29, 1695. Married Joseph Merrills. (Mrs. Sarah Hallam died in the year 1700.) Nicholas Hallam was married Jan. 2, 1700-1 to widow Elizabeth Meades whose maiden name was Gulliver, in Bromley church, on the backside of Bow without Stepney church, in London, Old England. Their daughter Elizabeth was born in the parish of St. John Wapping, near Wapping New Stairs, in London Feb. 22, 1701-2. Married Samuel Latimer. 5. Mary, born in New London, Oct. 11, 1705. Married Nathaniel Hempstead and Joseph Truman. 6. John, born Aug. 3, 1708. Married Mary Johnson.

"Mr. Hallam's gravestone states that he died Sept. 18th, 1714, at the age of forty-nine years, five months and twenty-nine days. His wife survived him twenty-one years.

"At this period, many families in town owned slaves, for domestic service; some but one, others two or three; very few more than four. The inventory of Nicholas Hallam comprises 'a negro man named Lonnon,' valued at £30; his wife disposes of her 'negro woman Flora and girl Judith.' Among the family effects are articles that were probably brought from England, when Hallam returned with his English wife in 1703—such as a clock and secretary. Mrs. Hallam bequeaths to one of her daughters a diamond ring, and a chest made of Bermuda cedar; to another 'the hair-trunk I brought from London, and my gold chaine necklace containing seven chaines and a locket.'

"Alexander Hallam died abroad. The will of his father contains a bequest to him 'if he be living and return home within twenty years.' In 1720 his inventory was presented for probate with the label, supposed to be dead. Edward Hallam was town-clerk from December, 1720, to his death in 1736."

I tell you this as it may be a help with regard to the Tremain connection. I will be much obliged for any information you can give me on the subject. Hoping that you take as much interest in such things as I do, so that then it will not be a trouble to you. I am, “Mentions Major General Truman in the Army of King Charles II. of England.

“We find Major Truman was tried for suffering five Indians to be killed but was cleared by the Assembly.”

11380. CHARLES EDWARD TREMAN. 4025. (Breckenridge, James (Scotch-Irish), born in 1696, came to America in 1727 and settled in Palmer, Mass. James Breckenridge, son of the above, born in Ireland in 1721. Was six years old when his father came to America. Settled in Bennington, Vermont. Was very prominent in New Hampshire grants dispute, taking side with New Hampshire. He was a member of the Provincial Congress in 1775, and was sent to England by the settlers on a mission to the King for redress of grievances. Was chosen on account of his courtly manners and fine bearing. Refused to bear arms against the King, in the Revolution, though he did not take any active part against the movement. He was expelled from the state, with his son-in-law, John McNeil, but was allowed to return, and died in Bennington. Mary, daughter of the above, married John McNeil, of Charlotte, Vermont.

MCNEIL. The McNeils, along with other Scotch clans, were sent to the north of Ireland to act as a buffer against the wild Irish. After several generations, some of them came to this country: among them, Captain Archibald McNeil, in about 1729. He came in his own ship, with a chest of gold at the mast. His wife was Lady Sarah Johnson, from Antrim, Ireland. They were ship-wrecked—some say on the coast of Nova Scotia, others on Massachusetts Bay, The former is probably correct. Captain McNeil went to Brantford, Connecticut, and from there to Litchfield in about 1740. He served in the British Army as captain of a Connecticut company, during the French and Indian War (1756 to 1763). He went with the British Army to Ticonderoga, and also to Havana when that was besieged by the British. Date of death unknown. His son, John McNeil, was born in 1740 and died in 1813. Married Mary Breckenridge and settled in Tinnmouth before the Revolution. When Burgoyne made his invasion of New York, John McNeil asked for the protection of the British Army. For this, he was called a Tory by a certain faction, and his lands confiscated and seized by Ira Allen, brother of Ethan Allen. There is no evidence that he was a Tory, other than the above. He then moved to Charlotte, Vermont, where he was elected as Town Clerk, Representative, was Judge of Probate Court, Judge of County Court and was delegate to both Constitutional Conventions of 1791 and 1793. He is spoken of in the records as General McNeil; but there is no known reason for the use of this title. His daughter, Mary, was born August 30, 1780, and married Ezra Meech. Note: John McNeil had a son, David B. McNeil, who was very prominent in the affairs of northern New York. He held the commission as General, and was at the battle of Plattsburg. He was a brother of the above mentioned Mary McNeil.

MEECH. Henry Wallbridge, and brothers, William and Stephen, from Dorsetshire, England, fought with the Duke of Monmouth in his rebellion against James II., and after the defeat at Edgmore (1685), fled to America. They first settled at Dedham, Massachusetts, then fled to Preston, Connecticut, near Norwich. Stephen changed his name to Meech, taking his mother's maiden name. Daniel Meech, son of Stephen, married Amy Wilcox, a woman of extraordinary beauty. Elisha Meech, son of Daniel, emigrated to Hinesburgh, Vermont, in 1785. Married Faith Satterly and had five sons. Ezra Meech, son of Elisha, was born in Connecticut, in 1773, and married Mary McNeil in 1800.)

He married, April 24 (o. 21), 1774, Mary Talcott (daughter of John and Abigail Talcott). She was born Sept. 21, 1757. He was the subject of the famous tract "The Faithful Steward". He removed to Middlefield, Mass., in 1776. Selectman, 1783-4; 1787-8. Representative, 1811-12.

Professor William S. Tyler's History of Amherst College says of him :

"Col. David Mack was a truly Christian patriarch who left to his numerous descendants and to society the fragrant memory of a life of ninety-four years consecrated to piety and usefulness—was the subject of that well-known and highly instructive tract, entitled 'The Faithful Steward'. No one could see him for once and converse with him on the most casual subject without feeling that he was a genuine descendant and representative of the Pilgrim Fathers of New England. And those who knew him most intimately, knew that he was just what he seemed, a living impersonation of their characteristic virtues. Gen. Mack himself was the worthy son of that worthy sire."

The following is taken from the tract entitled, "Col. David Mack, the Faithful Steward".

"He was of Puritan descent; his ancestors were noble ones, for the blood of the Pilgrims ran in their veins and the love of the Pilgrims' God burned in their hearts.

“Col. Mack and his wife had each fifteen brothers and sisters; and Jabez Ellis his maternal uncle, lived till he was one hundred years and forty days old, and was connected with his wife in marriage seventy-six years.

“In those days, family government had not changed hands; children were subject to their parents. But not so all; there were some who, like the sons of Eli, made themselves vile and were not restrained; and it was among such, that Col. Mack was situated in his youth. But his parents prevented him from running to the same excess of riot.

“They absolutely debarred him from attending the fairs, horse races, dances and other amusements in which his neighbors freely indulged.

“And when David—feeling as he did, that this separating him from all associates, was unreasonable and unjust—ventured to remonstrate with his father, as they were together in the field, the reply of the good man was, ‘My son, I do this to save you from ruin; for mark me, those young men will assuredly come to a bad end.’ This prophetic speech was sadly and literally fulfilled; three of them expiated their crimes on the gallows, others were sent to the state prison, and all came to a lamentable and disgraceful end.

“Not so with him who was trained in the way he should go, and did not depart from it when he was old. He honored his father and mother, and his days were long in the land, which the Lord gave him; and that too, notwithstanding imminent exposure to death.

“As he removed his family from Hebron to Middlefield, in crossing the river at Norwich, the unexpectedly high water swept them rapidly down the current, to the point of being carried over the dam; when looking for death, and the spectators giving them up for lost, Providence, at the moment of despair, ordered a way for their escape safe to land.

“Afterwards, as he was hunting in the deep snow in pursuit of a large deer, the animal suddenly turned on him, pressed its antlers against his breast, and set its fore feet on both his snowshoes, holding him fast; and thus crippled, it was with difficulty that he got in hand his hunting-knife, and with his utmost remaining strength, drew it across the deer’s throat, when the animal struck him with the hind foot a terrible blow upon one of his temples, which completely stunned and almost killed him. As near as he could judge, he lay senseless about an hour. On recovering, his first thought was, 'I am dead!' but rising up, he found that the deer was dead and lying prostrate at his feet.

"Thus was he delivered out of his distresses, that he might serve his generation by the will of God, and that God might fulfill the promise of long life to one who honored his parents, not only while they lived, but long after they had departed this life. And not only did Colonel Mack honor his parents 'he rose up before the hoary head, and honored the face of the old man'. While yet a youth, an aged man of choleric temper had, from some unknown cause, contracted towards him a strong dislike. Meeting him one day, Mr. Mack saluted him respectfully, but received only the unkind reply, 'Don't speak to me.' 'I shall speak to you,' said he, 'for I have always been accustomed to respect age, and I always intend to do it.' This changed his churlishness towards him ever after into civility; thus exemplifying the truth that, 'a soft answer turneth away wrath'. It may be remarked that this respect for his parents and the aged was a result of parental fidelity.

"The son, thus faithfully dealt with, was in his turn faithful in all his house. He, too, ruled well, having his children in subjection. 'My father,' says one of them, 'excelled in government. He never inflicted punishment without fully setting forth the criminality of the offense and its evil consequences, calmly and coolly, without excitement or passion; but he did not desist till there was a perfect yielding, a full confession and promise of amendment; and would often add, 'It is because I love you that I punish.'

" 'We were,' he continues, 'kept in on the Sabbath, and taught the catechism and had other religious instruction, which he faithfully imparted. He never allowed his children to be absent in the evening without his permission, and he required their return by nine o'clock. And not only did he command his children but his household. He had for several years twenty or more in his family in the summer, and in the most hurrying time of business he insisted that all under his care should be present at family devotions, and attend public worship on the Sabbath. If a hired man persisted in using profane language he dismissed him.'

"Such fidelity in the stewardship God crowned with his blessing.

He gave him thirteen children, three sons and ten daughters, all of whom lived to be married, and twelve of them became members of the church of Christ. They are honored of God and their country, and their children in their turn are rising up and calling them blessed. His descendants, living and dead were, at the time of his decease, about two hundred; there were eight or ten of the fifth generation his grandchildren's grandchildren. These, as well as his other relatives, he regarded as a high trust, concerning which God would require an account of his stewardship. For their temporal and spiritual welfare, he labored, prayed and counselled. As evidence of this and of his general Christian character, a few extracts will here be given from letters written in the later period of his life, for he brought forth fruit in old age.

“Writing to a child, December 10, 1824, he says: ‘By the grace of God, I have been carried through the various stages of manhood, and am this day seventy-four years old. I have set apart this day for prayer, and have been reading the forty-second Psalm. I have enjoyed in some measure the light of God’s countenance. O, it is good to draw nigh to God, for he has stiled himself a prayer-hearing God; and never said to the seed of Jacob, seek my face in vain.’

“‘December 12, Lord’s Day. I had great desire to enjoy the light of God’s countenance, for which I attempted to pray; and I think my poor feeble attempts were not in vain. My enjoyment continued through the day and evening. Thanks to Almighty God, that he can subdue the hardest heart and bring such sinful rebels as I am to bow before him. When I look back on my life and see how I have lived, more than forty years since I experienced religion, if indeed I ever did, I have reason to blush and be ashamed and repent in dust and ashes. I feel that I have more reason to be thankful to God, than any of the sinful race. If he should see fit to continue me in life, my prayer to him is, that he would make me more faithful in his service, and that the remainder of my days may be filled up with duty and usefulness to God and man.’

“In 1832 he writes: ‘Alas! my dear children, with shame and confusion of face, I am often confessing before the throne of grace, that when I would do good, evil is present with me; that while I delight in the law after the inner man, I am so drawn aside by my indwelling corruptions, the snares of the world and Satan’s temptations, that were it not for a strong belief, that I have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous, who is the propitiation for our sins, and the sins of the whole world, I could have no confidence towards God, being condemned by my own heart. In short, I can do no other, than allow, that all my best services are defiled with sin, and need to be washed in that fountain, which the Lord has opened for sin and uncleanness.'

"In 1835 he wrote to a brother: 'For many years I have thought much on the importance of being prepared for death; but it appears to me that during the last year, I have grown more in the knowledge of Christ than in any previous year of my life. I can say in my most favored moments, I know him, I love him, I am his and he is mine. No name awakens such tender and interesting feelings in my mind as his; nor is there any being in the universe, whom I so much delight to honor or desire to see. And why should it not be so? We are under greater obligations to him than to all the world besides. We have more to do with him, every day of our lives, than with any other being in the universe. No being in heaven so much beloved as he is; none has manifested such love towards us as he has. No wonder that our heart and flesh should cry out for him.

"My dear brother, if you and I are what we profess to be, we shall be in a short time with him, where he is, to behold his glory, which he had with the Father, before the world was. Although my health is good, my reason tells me, the time I have to stay here is short. I often look over my life, to see if I have done anything on which I could place the least dependence, viewing it as righteous in the sight of a holy God; but comparing my life with his holy word, I am constrained to say that in all things I have come short of my duty. I have nowhere to go but to God through Christ, and plead for mercy in his name.'

"Again he writes Dec. 10, 1835: 'My dear children, I am this day eighty-five years old. I have spent most of the day in calling to mind the numerous blessings of which God, in his holy providence, has made me the unworthy partaker, and in reading and meditating upon the 25th and 29th chapters of Genesis, the 34th chapter of Exodus, 32d of Deuteronomy, and the two last chapters of Joshua. I enjoy good health, and have attended meeting every Sabbath this season. When I call to mind what God has done for me, and what miserable improvement I have made of his numerous mercies, I have great reason to be humbled before him.'

"December 31, 1835. In the good providence of God, I am brought to the close of another year. There is no closing year in eternity. The solemn influence of this season is among the means of grace connected with a probationary state.

"My dear children, it becomes you and me, faithfully to examine the foundation of our hope, and see to it, that we are not deceived; that when God shall call us hence we may be prepared for the summons: our work done, and well done, for which 'the time is short.'

"January 1, 1836. I have been loudly admonished the year past by the deaths of many aged friends. I am the oldest man in town—there is not one living who was here when I came. In one sense I am almost alone; in another, I am not alone. I enjoy the presence and smiles of my Saviour in my room, which is the best of company. I have great enjoyment on the Sabbath, in going to the house of God, in hearing the Gospel, and in visiting my Christian friends on week days. If I am not deceived my evidences for heaven are brighter, and my faith stronger as I advance in life.

"Yet, many times I see myself to be so great a sinner, it seems impossible I should be of that happy number whose sins are forgiven. And yet, I do not despair of mercy on account of the greatness of my sins, for I firmly believe that the atonement which Christ has made is sufficient to atone for my sins and for the sins of the whole world. He 'came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance,' such as feel themselves to be sinners, old sinners.'

"In 1836 he thus addressed his grandchildren: 'My dear and much esteemed grandchildren:—God, in his holy providence, has lengthened out my unprofitable life much longer than I expected. He has bestowed upon me many blessings. My health is as good as it ever was. I can read with spectacles and some without. My hearing is perfect. Although my health is good, my reason tells me I have but a short time to stay in this world of trouble and sin. May I so live, that when God calls me home, to be here no more, I may be found watching, and enabled through grace in Christ Jesus, to give up joyfully my spirit to him who gave it.

"It is uncertain whether you will ever hear from your aged grandfather again in this way; will you therefore, my dear grandchildren, allow me to give you a few words of advice? I have great concern for your temporal and spiritual good; and knowing, as I do from experience, how liable young people are to go astray, from the commands of God, into forbidden paths, I would warn you of your danger. Be careful what company you associate with, for such will be your character.

“Never marry for riches or beauty, for beauty is vain and riches take to themselves wings and fly away. Exercise judgment. Be well acquainted with the temper and disposition of your intended bosom friend before you decide. Lay hand suddenly on no one. When you commence housekeeping, be careful to erect the family altar.

“Let me enjoin it upon you, often to read your Bible, with prayer to God, for a right understanding of what you read. Be always ready to do your part in supporting the Gospel. The man who is not willing to support the Gospel, cannot, with propriety, be called a good member of society.

“Despise not the poor, because he is poor. The great object of our existence is to glorify God, in whom we live and have our being, and who bestows all our comforts. Take heed that you faithfully perform all the duties and business of life, from a regard to his commands and with reference to his glory. We are placed in this world to labor for him, (not to become rich and great), and to do all the good we can. Let it be your aim to have the glory of God as your ultimate end in all you do. I desire to commit you to, and leave you with, the Father of all mercies and God of all grace.

“That you may be directed safely through an evil world to God’s heavenly kingdom, is the sincere prayer of your aged grandfather,

DAVID MACK.’

“By such counsels as these, and a corresponding example, and fervent prayers, he was a faithful steward in the care of the children which God gave him, and also of his children’s children; and this labor was not in vain in the Lord, for most of his grandchildren are hopefully pious.

“Col. Mack’s early advantages were very limited, for previous to his marriage he had been to school but six weeks. He once expostulated with his father because he did not give him more opportunity to attend school. His father replied, ‘David, I never went to school but three weeks in my life; you have been six and ought to be satisfied.' But this did not satisfy him. He afterwards went to the common school of those days with his own children, and spelled in the same class with his son David who was six years old.

"Thus improving his mind, Col. Mack increased in understanding. He kept along with the progress of the times. He was a friend and patron of learning, and gave large sums in aid of public seminaries. He assisted indigent young men in their studies, and offered his three sons a liberal education.

"His life is identified with the entire history of the town in which he lived; in his prime he was prominent in all its public affairs, constantly filling some office of trust and honor, as selectman, assessor, justice of the peace, representative to the legislature, colonel of the militia and deacon of the church. To this last office he was early appointed, and served in it acceptably until he resigned at seventy-five years of age.

"It was principally by his agency that Middlefield was incorporated into a town, the advantages of which were from the first foreseen by him. Having obtained a knowledge of the region while hunting, and defined the boundaries for a new town, he called a meeting of the citizens to consider the matter. They approved the object, but dreaded the expense and the opposition of the interested towns. He told them he would undertake the business; if successful, they should defray the expenses; if he failed, the loss should be his own. They consented, and he succeeded. The act of incorporation was granted March 12, 1783. It was also mainly through his agency, that the meeting house was erected in 1791. Previous to this religious meetings were held in his barn and large chambers of his house, and town meetings in his kitchen. He occupied the pew in which he was first seated. fifty-four years, during which period more than thirty, who were at different times his seat mates, deceased.

"He attended constantly on divine worship. He was not afraid of the snow and vapor, the stormy wind, rain or distance. He was glad to go; he was joyful in God's house; he sat there with great delight, and the preaching seemed better and better. Col. Mack had a heart for it; and for years, until there was a religious society in Middlefield, he went, on foot, to Chester, six miles, during a great portion of the year. And, in the winter's cold on those mountains, he frequently went with an ox sled, carrying his own and his neighbors' families. This occupied him from sunrise to sunset, and frequently longer.

"He had a strong constitution, good health, a keen discernment, sound judgment and untiring industry. Besides the land on which he settled, then a wilderness, he used facetiously to say, that when he removed to Middlefield, his property consisted of a poor horse, an axe and his wife and child.

"Thus it was not much that he had to begin with; but he was industrious, economical and faithful: so prompt in the payment of his debts, that no one, in any instance during his long business life, called for money due from him, without his paying it; a peculiar excellence and worthy of all imitation.

"He was a merchant as well as a farmer; and he established many young men in the mercantile business in the adjacent towns. He also established in business the first blacksmith, the first boot and shoemaker, and first saddle and harness maker who followed their respective trades in Middlefield.

"In those days it was not customary to promote benevolent enterprises, but he was in advance of the times in which he lived. In large sums he bestowed more than eighteen thousand dollars; and his smaller offerings, to promote human welfare, are supposed to have been not less than eighteen thousand dollars more. He was one of the founders of the Hampshire Missionary Society; and he made himself, by his contributions, a life member of twelve benevolent societies; and, at a period when it was regarded as doubtful whether all the missionary societies in the country could support one missionary in a foreign land, he removed that doubt by a donation of one thousand dollars, which, at that time, was an almost unparalleled act of liberality.

"In the year 1814, he presented each of his children with a set of Scott's Family Bible, which cost him three hundred and sixty dollars. He left for the church and society, of which he had so long been a member, a fund of three thousand dollars for the support of the Gospel, in all coming time.

"Col. Mack was not too faithful. He felt that he had done too little for the Savior who died for him. His hope was in Christ and in him alone. He felt himself to be nothing but a sinner saved by grace. He lived till satisfied with long life. Though his hearing was yet perfect, and his eye scarcely dim, and his natural force not much abated, he did not wish to live longer; his days were full, his work was done, he chose to depart, 'and he was not for God took him.'

"The youngest child was twenty-seven years old before there was a death in the family."

LEMUEL SERJANTS.”)

She was born in 1779. He removed to Kinderhook, Columbia Co., N. Y., and from there to Cooperstown, N. Y., and later to Owego, N. Y. He, while a merchant at Cooperstown, had a contract in 1799 with the government to furnish about 100,000 spars, to be delivered at Baltimore. In March of that year a freshet in the Susquehanna river carried away all the timber, which he had purchased and paid for in goods out of his store, and made him a bankrupt. He removed in 1799 to Owego, N. Y. He engaged again in the mercantile business. He purchased, in 1805, the American Farmer printing office, and published the newspaper until his death. He was a prominent and influential citizen. Justice of the Peace. Supervisor, 1807-8, 1811-12. First Judge of Broome County, N. Y., 1812-14. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity, and Aug. 28, 1804, was one of the petitioners for a lodge at Owego. He was a taxable inhabitant of the Town of Tioga, Tioga County, N. Y., in 1802. He died April 14 (o. 16), 1814, at Owego, N. Y. His second wife Mary died Feb. 20, 1862, at the same place.

"Stephen Mack was born in New Marlborough, Mass., March 20th, 1766. He was twice married; first to Mary Chambers, who died while they resided at or near Cooperstown, leaving four children, Elizabeth, Stephen, Phoebe and Ebenezer. Subsequently he married in 1797 at Cooperstown, N. Y., Mary Serjants, daughter of Lemuel Serjants then recently from Bellows Falls, Vt. She survived him nearly half a century and died at Owego February 20th, 1862. By his second wife he had two children, Horace and Maria. Mr. Mack removed to Owego in 1799 and soon became one of the most active and prominent citizens. We find it recorded that in the early settlement of Owego he held the office of Commissioner of Highways, Assessor, Excise Commissioner and Constable and that he represented the town of Owego on the Board of Supervisors in 1807, 1808, 1811, 1812. He also served several years as Justice of the Peace. From Nov. 11, 1812, until his death which occurred at Owego, April 16th, 1814, he held the office of First Judge of Common Pleas of the County of Broome under a commission from Governor Tompkins.

"Sometime previous to 1807 he became the publisher of the American Farmer which he continued until his death, but in the few copies of this paper that time has spared we find little or nothing by way of editorial to give a clue to his cast of mind, political bent or literary ability. His remains now lie in Evergreen cemetery, having been twice removed, first from the old ground on Court Street to the Presbyterian yard on Temple Street and thence, in 1875, to their present resting place.' ”

The following is from Gay's Historical Gazetteer of Tioga County :

“Judge Stephen Mack, the second newspaper publisher in Owego, was born in Massachusetts March 20, 1766. In 1799, while keeping a general country store in Cooperstown, N. Y., he made a contract with the United States government to furnish about 100,000 spars, to be delivered at Baltimore, Md. He purchased the timber in the winter, paying for it in goods from his store. In March, 1799, while about to start it down the river there came a great freshet, carrying away and scattering along the stream all of his timber. He came down the river to Owego in quest of his property, but ascertaining that it would cost him as much to secure it as it would be worth when gathered together again, he abandoned his search. The loss of his timber made him a bankrupt.

“During his sojourn in Owego he had become impressed with the beauty of the Susquehanna valley and its apparent advantages to settlers, and he at once returned here to live. He was a man of great vigor, enterprise and ability, and he at once became an active and prominent citizen. He engaged in the mercantile business, in which he was successful. He was prominent in public affairs and held the offices of commissioner of highways, assessor, excise commissioner and constable, and he represented the town of Owego in the board of supervisors in 1807, 1808, 1811 and 1812. He also served several years as justice of the peace. From 1812 to 1815 he was first judge of the court of common pleas of the county of Tioga. He died in Owego April 16, 1814, in the 49th year of his age. His remains were interred in the old burying ground in Court Street. They were afterward removed to the Presbyterian yard in Temple Street. In 1875 they were again removed to Evergreen cemetery.”

The following is a copy of his commission as County Judge :

“The People of the State of New York by the grace of God free and independent. To all to whom these presents shall come Greeting : Know ye that we reposing especial trust and confidence in the ability and integrity of Stephen Mack of our county of Broome, Esquire, have nominated, constituted and appointed, and by these presents do nominate, constitute and appoint him the said Stephen

“In Testimony whereof We have caused these our Letters to be made patent and the great seal of our said State to be hereunto affixed. Witness our trusty and well beloved Daniel D. “DANIEL D. TOMPKINS.

“Passed the Secretary’s Office the 11th day of November, 1812.

“ARCH. CAMPBELL,

“Dep. Secretary.”

At the time of her death the “Owego Gazette” of Feb’y 27th, 1862, said:

“Departed this life on Thursday, the 20th inst., at the residence of her son-in-law, John Carmichael, Esq., Mrs. Mary Mack, aged 83 years, consort of Hon. Stephen Mack, one of the early residents of this Village. Indeed, he may almost be said to have been a pioneer in this locality, for he settled here as early as 1799. Partaking in a large degree of the elements of personal popularity, and combining talent with conceded integrity and purity of purpose, he was among the most prominent of the public men of this section of our State, and filled many stations of honor and public trust. His family consisted of three sons and three daughters: Stephen, Ebenezer, Horace, Betsey, Phoebe and Maria. The three former resided many years in the Village of Ithaca, Tompkins County, and were among the most useful and respectable of the citizens of that place. The eldest was a lawyer by profession, the second edited for a long period a public paper and subsequently was elected to the Senate of this State, and the third was distinguished for his moral worth and business capacity as a merchant. The eldest daughter, Betsey, married Benjamin Benedict, Esq., for many years a resident of the county of Delaware, some time since deceased. Phoebe, a Mr. Crawford, and Maria, the youngest, was the former wife of Mr. Carmichael. She died at Owego, N. Y., Sept. 22, 1829, 8 P. M., ac. 29 y. 2 m<sup>s</sup>. 22 d. These children are all dead with the exception of Mrs. Benedict. Judge Mack died in 1814, and the subject of this notice has remained his widow from that time down to the period of her death. Blest by nature with a strong constitution, and possessing great physical and mental energy, she seemed admirably calculated for the labors and responsibilities incident to her early life; and, indeed, she retained those qualities until within a short period before its close. In the year 1818, she united herself with the Presbyterian Church in this village, and it may with much truth be said that her daily walk and conversation have been in conformity with her profession. In a conversation with her pastor, a few days before her death, she expressed a full confidence in her religious faith, but seemed to entertain some dread as to the moment of conflict when the soul was to separate from the body. We are happy to learn, however, that before the hour of dissolution came, her mind was at rest upon that point, and that nine o'clock on the evening of the day already announced, she fell quietly asleep, in the arms, as we trust, of her Saviour and Redeemer:—

‘Mild as a saint, whose errors are forgiven;
Calm as a vestal, and composed as Heaven.’ ”

14016. Elizabeth. Born Feb. 6. Married (1st), Benjamin Benedict of Delaware Co., N. Y.; (2nd), a Bartley.
14017. Stephen. Born Dec. 29, 1784, at Kinderhook, N. Y. He graduated at Yale College in the class of 1813. He studied law with Hon. Samuel Sherwood, M. C., of Delhi, N. Y. Admitted as attorney May 16, 1817; counselor, Jan. 15, 1822; solicitor same date. He removed, in 1814, to Owego, N. Y., and about 1816 to Ithaca, N. Y. Master in Chancery. The following letter refers to his appointment as Commissioner of the Supreme Court: “Albany, 19 Dec., 1838. Dear Sir—I have received your letter in relation to your not receiving your Commission of Comr. of the Sup. Court. I am now at the Sug. Office and on examining the Records find that you were appd. on the 18th Apr. last. It appears by the Records here that your commission was duly made out and forwarded to the Clerk of Tompkins Co. It is probable that it is now in that office but if it is not and has miscarried another will be made out and forwarded on my receiving notice that the previous one was not recd. I will return Judge Dana’s resignation if I can lay my hands on it. At all events he may consider it not accepted. It will not be handed over to my successor without his direction. Yours, &c., W. L. MARCY.” At the time of his death the “Tompkins County Democrat” said: “Died, in the Village of Ithaca, on the 7th of January, 1857, of consumption, Stephen Mack, aged 72 years. His funeral will be attended at 10 A. M. of Friday next from the residence of Mrs. E. Mack. Stephen Mack was born December 29th, 1784, at Kinderhook, N. Y., and therefore at the date of his death, was about 72 years of age. He graduated at Yale College almost half a century ago, having belonged to the class of 1813, of which Senator Badger, of North Carolina, is one of the few surviving members. He studied law with Samuel Sherwood, of Delli, N. Y., and, upon the death of his father, moved to Owego, from whence, about the year 1816, he came to Ithaca, and commenced the practice of law, which he continued until the period of his death. He was never married. As a lawyer he was methodical, diligent and learned, and oftentimes in a case requiring great study, care and investigation, a formidable adversary. Quiet and retired in his habits he mingled little with the world, and gave almost his entire time to study and reflection. His illness was brief, originating in a sudden cold, and rapidly advanced to a fatal termination. In his death another of the links binding the present to the past has been rudely sundered. He was a brother of Ebenezer and Horace Mack, who, though younger in years, preceded him to the grave, and whose memories yet linger freshly among us. Now all are gone, and we shall see their familiar and accustomed faces no more among the scenes of life." The same issue of "Tompkins County Democrat" said: "At a meeting of the Bar of Tompkins County, held January 8th, 1857, upon occasion of the decease of Stephen Mack, Caleb B. Drake was appointed chairman, and Amasa Dana, secretary. Upon motion, Messrs. B. G. Ferris, Alfred Welles and F. M. Finch were appointed to draft appropriate resolutions, upon whose report the following were unanimously adopted: Resolved, That in the removal by death of our professional brother, Stephen Mack, we feel called upon to pay that respect to his memory which his character deserves as one of the oldest members of the Tompkins Bar—as a diligent student, a learned lawyer, an honorable practitioner, and an honest man. Resolved, That as a mark of our respect for the memory of the deceased, we attend the funeral in a body. Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished to the press of our village for publication. (Sgd.) CALEB B. DRAKE, Ch'n. AMASA DANA, Sec'y." The following are copies of his licenses to practice law: "By the Honorable Smith Thompson, Esq., Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Judicature of the people of the State of New York, to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting: Know ye, That Stephen Mack having, on examination, in this present term of May been admitted and appointed by the said Court an Attorney at Law, I do hereby authorize and License him to Practice in the said Court as attorney according to the Laws of this State, and the Rules and Orders of this Court. "Hon. David Mack was a member of the Board of Trustees of Amherst College from 1836 to 1854. He was born in Middlefield, Mass., in February, 1778. He fitted for college at Windsor Hill, where Roger Sherman was his fellow-student; but his eyes failed him and he was compelled to relinquish a public education. For twenty years he was a merchant in his native place. In 1834 he removed to Amherst.

"He was several times Representative from Middlefield in the General Court, and once a member of the Massachusetts Senate from Hampshire County. He was also a member of the Governor's Council. In 1812, he commanded for some months the militia of Boston, and thus acquired the title of General, by which he was usually known. For many years he was the senior deacon of the church in Amherst.

Being a resident in town he was always present at the meetings and constantly charged with special duties and responsibilities in relation to the College. And in a note the following : "Mr. Beecher (Henry Ward, who entered Amherst in 1831), is accustomed to speak of Mr. Harrington as almost his spiritual father, to whom he owed more religiously than to any other man in College. Mr. Harrington afterwards married the daughter of Gen. Mack." 15310.

14700. DR. LEWIS HALLOCK. (Jacob.) He was born June 30, 1803, in New York City. His father, Jacob Hallock, of the Southold, L. I. family of that name, was a merchant in New York City until his death in 1813. Lewis prepared at Clinton Academy, E. Hampton, studied medicine with his uncle, Dr. Elisha Hallock of Southold, L. I., N. Y., and with Dr. John W. Francis of New York City, and graduated at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in New York City, 1826. He married (1st), Feb. 7, 1827, Susan Mack. 13086. She died Aug. 11, 1832. He practiced allopathy fifteen years and in 1846 joined the American Homeopathic Institute. He was offered twice a professorship in the Homeopathic Medical College in New York City, was Censor many years and received from that institution the degree of M. D. in 1876.

The National Cyclopaedia of American Biography says :

Hallock, Lewis. He was born June 30, 1803, in New York City, son of Jacob and Sarah (Mather) Hallock. His father, a native of Southold, L. I., was a prominent merchant in New York until his death in 1813. The family descends from Peter Hallock, leader of a colony; the first white settlers on the eastern end of Long Island, where they purchased a large tract of land from the Indians and founded the town of Southold. After the death of his father, Lewis Hallock went to live with his grandmother at Mattituck, L. I., and completed his preparatory education at Clinton Academy, the second incorporated school in the State. He began the study of medicine with his uncle, Dr. Elisha Hallock, of Southold, and at the end of the year returned to New York City to continue his preparation under Dr. James W. Francis and at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, where he was graduated M. D., in 1825. After fifteen years of successful practice, his attention was called to the homeopathic system of medicine, then rapidly gaining strength in America, and after carefully investigating its claims, he announced himself a convert. The same course was pursued by a goodly portion of his classmates. In 1846 he joined the Homeopathic Institute of America, and later also the county and state societies; being President of city and county societies for one year each. For many years he was one of the board of censors of the Homeopathic Medical College, in which he was twice offered and declined a professorship, and in 1876 received from its faculty and trustees the honorary degree of M. D. This honor was conferred on the occasion of the fiftieth anniversary of his graduation, when a dinner was given him at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. He lived to see the seventieth anniversary of the same event, and then received another complimentary dinner at the Savoy Hotel from the New York Medical Club, at which several highly congratulatory speeches and a poem by Dr. William Tod Helmuth were delivered on his nearly unparalleled record as an active practitioner. Although living to the advanced age of ninety-five, he continued in active practice until within a few days of his death. Throughout life he was an earnest advocate of temperance, having as a young man founded the Young Men's Total Abstinence Society, which in 1836 published a weekly paper advocating the cause. To his principle in this regard he attributed his longevity, and indeed his unusual quickness of comprehension and rapidity of judgment was an excellent evidence of faculties well used. His contributions to homeopathic periodicals were numerous and representative, and to his influence is attributed much of the popularization the system has achieved. At the annual meeting of the American Institute of Homeopathy, held in Newport, R. I., in June, 1895, he was greeted with the greatest enthusiasm and made a few appropriate and pleasing remarks. Personally, Dr. Hallock was an exemplar of the most charming, old-fashioned, courtly manners and bearing, and although justly popular with a wide circle of friends and professional associates, was pre-eminently domestic in his tastes, belonging to but one club."

He died March 3, 1897. Residence New York City.

The firm of Mack & Andrus, of which he was a member, were publishers of many books, some of their books, like Cobb's Spelling Book, having a very large sale. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity. An interesting journal kept by him, of a journey taken in 1835 to New York City and Philadelphia, is in the possession of the family. He wrote a Life of Lafayette. He was foreman of the Columbian printing office in New York City and resigned to enter into partnership, June 15, 1815, with Stephen B. Leonard in the publication of the newspaper now known as the Owego Gazette.

The following letter of recommendation given to him at the time has been preserved in the family :

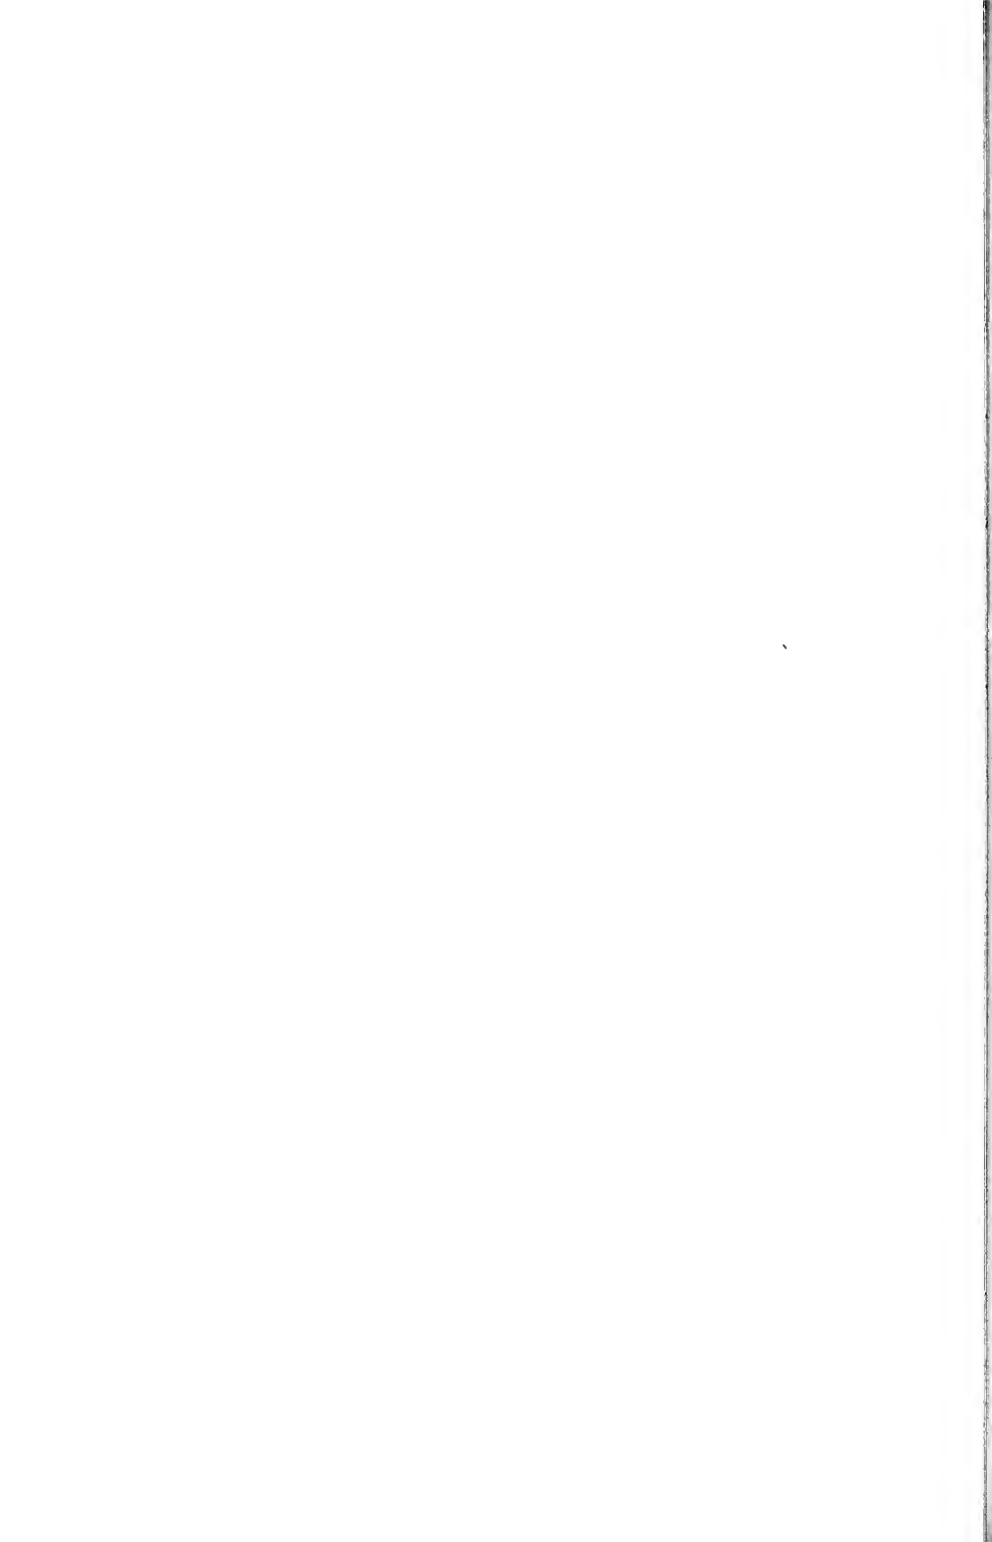

MRS. ELEANOR DEY MACK

SENATOR EBENEZER MACK

“NEW YORK, January 7, 1815.

“The bearer, Mr. Ebenezer Mack, is a young man of genius, intelligence, sobriety and integrity, a good writer (in verse and prose) and correct republican, and a capable and quick workman as a printer; as I have found by the experience of between three and four years past.

“CHARLES HOLT,

“Edit. Columbian.”

The Ithaca Democrat in 1888 published a History of St. John's Protestant Episcopal Church of Ithaca, N. Y., which contained the following reference to him:

“April 8, 1822, a few faithful churchmen held a meeting in the Methodist ‘Meeting House’ and organized an Episcopal Church. Ebenezer Mack was chosen a vestryman.”

At the time of his death “The Flag of Our Union,” said:

“Our village is again called to mourning—and not only the village, but the county and the state at large.

“This morning, at half-past six o'clock the stroke of death passed upon Ebenezer Mack. Mr. Mack was a man of rare endowments; for him nature had done much, and the talent and qualification thus bestowed, was, through the changes of an extended and busy life, improved, for the benefit of society, by the most untiring industry and a never yielding energy.

“Possessed of a strong mind and cultivated intellect, which was always actively engaged for the good of those around him, Mr. Mack laid deeply, in the regard of our whole community, the foundations for that high estimate for character and moral worth, which now, in the realization of his loss, is everywhere manifested. He was a man of the most sterling integrity, none more reliable in friendship than he, none more ready to engage in any work of public importance and utility, and push it to a successful issue. Providence prospered him greatly in his undertakings, and he had the happiness of living to see his family, his friends, and this his cherished village, with all its religious, benevolent, literary and business institutions, eminently prosperous.

“Mr. Mack has filled a large place in the political concerns of our county and state, having been for many years a member of the Assembly and of the Senate, postmaster in the village, and printer to the Senate. In his political as well as in his social connections, his loss will be deeply felt.

“Mr. Mack was born at Kinderhook Landing, now Stuyvesant, in 1791. In early life he came with his father’s family to Owego. There his father purchased the printing establishment of the late Dan Conger, and published a paper called the American Farmer, (if we recollect rightly.) Here Mr. Mack acquired his knowledge of the craft. He aided, and after his father’s death, succeeded as the publisher. This establishment he sold to S. B. Leonard, Esq., from whom, we think, it received the name—the Owego Gazette.

“After some improvement in his qualifications in New York, Mr. Mack came to this village, then in its incipient condition, in 1815, and purchased a press, etc., which had been started here by Ingersoll and Shepherd. This was the origin of the Ithaca Journal which was conducted by him, as editor, for many years. The exertion of his talents and industry resulted in giving to that paper the high character which, under him, it enjoyed at home and abroad.

“About twenty-six years ago William Andrus, Esq., became associated with him in the concern, and the business was gradually but speedily extended from the small beginning of a very limited book and stationery establishment connected with the newspaper, until it has become the largest bookstore, printing office, bindery and paper making establishment in western New York. The interest of Mr. Mack in the Journal ceased many years since, as is well known.

“Mr. Mack was a member of the Episcopal Society in this village. He died of consumption in the fifty-ninth year of his age. His decease occurring this morning just as we were about to put our paper to press, (we stopped for this notice), it is not in our power to do what would be just to the memory of the deceased, and satisfactory to our own feelings.

“To our village the language of Divine Providence, in the removal, within a short time, of many of our most prominent and useful men, is very express. The loss of Frederick M. Camp, Daniel Bishop, Ben Johnson, Timothy S. Williams, Charles F. Woodruff and Ebenezer Mack, would be felt in any city of the Union. There is no exemption from the inevitable decree.

Alike the humble violet’s glide
To that sad wave.
Let us look for light beyond the tomb.”

HON. HORACE MACK

In 1838, Mr. Mack joined John James Speed, Jr., his former colleague in the Legislature, in the purchase of the Fall Creek mill property, from Jeremiah S. Beebe, where, under the title "Mack & Speed," they conducted a wholesale flouring business until April 1, 1840, when Mr. Mack sold his interest to Chauncey Pratt and Chauncey L. Grant. The Ithaca Falls Woolen Manufacturing Co. succeeded to the property in the same or the following year. County Clerk, 1849-52. Member of Assembly, 1832. President of the Village of Ithaca, 1851. Trustee, 1839-40, 1845. Supervisor, 1841. Director in Bank of Ithaca and Tompkins County National Bank. Member of first Fire Company in Ithaca, 1823. He was member of the building committee when the present court house was erected, in 1854.

Goodwin's History of Ithaca says:

"About the year 1822 an almost fatal encounter took place between Horace Mack and a German fencing master. Mr. Mack had expressed some doubts regarding the qualifications of this gentleman, who resented it very highly, and the final result was a challenge by the German to fight a duel. The challenged of course having the choice of weapons, selected pistols. The day and hour were chosen, and the place for the affair of honor appointed on the banks of the Six Mile creek, directly opposite the reservoir of water called the 'Hemp Hole,' which was about ten feet deep. At the appointed time and place for the deadly combat to come off hundreds of people, of all sexes and ages, were found awaiting on the banks, where they soon expected to see the green turf drink the blood of the vanquished. The good sense of Mr. Mack and the seconds proved most valuable. The arrangements and order were perfect. The combatants approached each other, as is usual, to shake hands, when Mr. Mack, taking a rather strong hold of the man of the sword, and with a peculiar look, and a more peculiar trip and jerk, sent the offended German headlong into the 'Hemp Hole' where he was received without a dissenting voice. The roars of laughter which followed the maneuver were loud and hearty and we doubt not are still heard by the man, who failing in subduing his rival foe, took a hasty and precipitate retreat from the county."

At the time of his death "The American Citizen" said:

"Hon. Horace Mack, one of our oldest and most respected citizens, died in this village on Monday afternoon last. Mr. Mack was a merchant among us many years ago, in which capacity he formed an extensive business acquaintance, and won the esteem and respect of all. He was elected to the Assembly of this state from this district some years since, the duties of which station he performed with ability. In 1849 he was elected clerk of this county in which office he acquired the renewed confidence of the entire community. As a private citizen and a neighbor Mr. Mack has ever been beloved, and he leaves behind him a population who are in sorrow at his loss."

The following is from the "Ithaca Journal and Advertiser" of Sept. 12th, 1855 :

"Mr. Horace Mack, an old resident of our village, died on Monday afternoon last, of prevailing disease, dysentery. Mr. Mack was for many years a merchant here, and in that position he won the respect of the entire community. He was elected County Clerk in 1849, and served out his term with honor to himself, and in all the public stations which he has filled, he has ever been esteemed and beloved."

The following notice of Horace Mack appeared in the same paper (Ithaca Journal and Advertiser) of date Sept. 19th, 1855 :

"As our paper of last week was going to press we were suddenly called upon to briefly record the decease of Horace Mack, Esq., one of our oldest and most esteemed citizens. We say oldest, not in years, but as a citizen of Ithaca, having been identified with its business and interests for the space of nearly forty years.

"He was brother of the Hon. Ebenezer Mack, who established the Journal we now continue, and whose decease a few years since we recorded.

"Mr. Mack was born at Cooperstown, Otsego County, January 20th, 1799, and in infancy removed with his father's family to Owego, Tioga County, where he resided until the year 1817, when he made Ithaca his residence and where, with slight exceptions, he resided till his decease.

"Mr. Mack's history is nearly that of the mercantile history of our village. On his coming to Ithaca he entered the mercantile house of Mr. Levi Leonard, then one of the largest operators in our infant place, where he remained till 1820, when Jeremiah S. Beebe, Esq., from New York, made this his home, and Mr. Mack entered his establishment as salesman and acted as such until the year 1825, then commenced business on his own account under the firm of H. Mack & Co., since which time, excepting 1834-5—when on account of ill health he made his residence in Spencer, Tioga County, and gave his attention to farming and milling—his history was that of the mercantile history of our place until 1848, when he retired from active mercantile life.

“Politically, Mr. Mack was a Democrat of the old school, and in that way largely enjoyed the confidence of the public. He represented this county in the Legislature in 1832, during the stormy times of the United States bank question, and aided in sustaining our state institutions against that gigantic monied power. He was a member of the board of directors of the Tompkins County Bank, from its organization in 1836, till his decease. He was Clerk of the County from 1850 to 1853.

“The deep sympathy manifested by the public in view of his demise, is the fruits of a life not alone devoted to his individual interest. He possessed a large and liberal heart, and his freedom from selfishness endeared him to all who were favored by his acquaintance. In him the young man, the mechanic, the laboring man, always found a sympathizing friend, the public a faithful servant, and society one of its most desired ornaments. Of him as a husband, father and neighbor, we need not speak, for to all who thus knew him his loss is irreparable.”

In the same issue also appeared the following :

“At a regular meeting of Ithaca Lodge No. 71, held at their room, on Friday, Sept. 14, 1855, the following resolutions reported by Bros. Selkreg, Buckbee and Wells, were unanimously adopted :

“Whereas, The Almighty Ruler of the Universe has seen fit in his Providence to remove from active life, Horace Mack, a member of this Lodge, who as a merchant commanded the respect and esteem of his fellow tradesmen, whose character as a public officer was above suspicion, and who as a man has left a void which will long remain unfilled, therefore “Resolved, That while the shadow of the grave hides all his faults if any ever existed, and while his virtues grow brighter from the knowledge that we shall see him no more on this earth forever, we mourn the departure of Bro. Mack, one of our most enterprising citizens, and condole with the family of the deceased and his stricken relatives, who knew him more intimately than the world, and loved him more fully and entirely.

“Resolved, That, as a sense of our loss as an order, and our sympathy with the bereaved friends, that a copy of these resolutions be presented them, entered on our minutes and published.

“(Sgd.) M. R. BARNARD, N. G.

At the time of his death the “Owego Gazette” said :

“Again we are called upon to record the death of one of Owego’s oldest and most respected citizens. John Carmichael died at his residence on Church Street at six o’clock yesterday morning in the eighty-third year of his age, after an illness of several months.

“Mr. Carmichael was born at Johnstown, Montgomery (now Fulton) County, August 12, 1795. At the age of sixteen years he went to Albany and commenced an apprenticeship to learn the trade of a jeweller and watchmaker. He came to Owego on the 31st day of October, 1819, and hired a shop in Caldwell Row, a wooden block of stores which occupied the ground on which the western portion of the Ahwaga House now stands, and commenced business as a jeweller. In 1835 he built a store on the ground now occupied by the Tioga National Bank where he continued to conduct a successful jewelry business until his building was destroyed in the great fire of September, 1849. As he was in poor health at that time, he retired permanently from active business, being succeeded by his sons, who continued the business in Lake Street.

"Mr. Carmichael was twice married—first on the 25th of December, 1824, to Maria Mack (daughter of Judge Stephen Mack, deceased) who died Sept. 22, 1829; afterward, June 10, 1835, to Harriet Ely, who survives him.

"Mr. Carmichael was the first Collector of the Village of Owego at the time of its organization in 1827 and was elected every year thereafter to 1834 inclusive. He was also one of the Village Assessors in 1845, 1851, 1852 and 1853.

"Mr. Carmichael has been an active, conscientious and useful citizen. In business affairs he has been scrupulously correct. A man of kind and amiable sentiments and feelings, he was universally esteemed. He was for many years a faithful member of the Presbyterian Church and he lived and died a true Christian. He leaves a wife and one son, Mr. Charles S. Carmichael."

He entered Williams College when quite young, married before he graduated, studied medicine, first practiced in Chester, Mass., then South Williamstown. While there he had a call from Williamstown Center to take pins from the throat of a child, other physicians having failed. He succeeded so well that they invited him to come and settle there, and while there had the appointment of two professorships, Geology and Chemistry. After some years he was appointed to make a geological survey of Ohio, and he was so successful that New York invited him to make a survey of that state. He removed to Albany, and while there, wrote several books on Geology, made the beginning of the best cabinet of minerals in that state. He surveyed North Carolina, found gold, purchased a large tract of land, he and his family spending part of the time in North Carolina and part in Albany. When the war broke out he was not permitted to leave, but was obliged to make powder for the rebels. Jeff. Davis sent for him to go to Richmond, to show them how to make it, but Gov. Vance would not let him leave the state. He graduated at Williams College, A. B., 1818, and Berkshire Medical School, 1830. Lecturer on Chemistry, 1828-34; Professor of Natural History, 1833-59; Professor of Mineralogy and Geology, 1859-63, at Williams College. Professor of Natural History and Obstetrics in Albany Medical College. State Geologist of New York, 1836-51.

The National Cyclopaedia of Biography says of him:

“Ebenezer Emmons, geologist, was born at Middlefield, Hampshire County, Mass., May 16, 1799, son of Ebenezer and Mary (Mack) Emmons, nephew of the celebrated divine, Nathaniel Emmons, D. D., and descendant of an early settler of Connecticut. His father was a farmer, and between home duties and attending school he found a little time, when a boy, to spend in collecting insects and minerals, a taste he developed early. He was sent to Plainfield, Mass., to study under Rev. Moses Hallock, pastor of the Congregational Church there, who was famed as an educator, and had at various times, as members of his family and pupils, William Cullen Bryant, John Brown of Ossowotamie and James Henry Coffin, the meteorologist. From Plainfield he went to Williams College where he had as instructors in science Amos Eaton and Chester Dewey, and was graduated in 1818. He then entered the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, N. Y., and was graduated in 1826. In the same year he published a ‘Manual of Mineralogy and Geology’ for use as a text-book in the Institute. He now studied medicine at the Berkshire Medical School, and settled as a practitioner in Chester, Mass.; but in 1828 removed to Williamstown, Mass., and in the same year was appointed lecturer on Chemistry in the college. In 1833 his department was broadened, a chair of Natural History being founded, but he was retained at its head and remained professor of Mineralogy and Geology after the department was divided in 1859, serving until his death. From 1830 until 1839 he held the additional position of junior professor in the Rensselaer Institute. Dr. Emmons carried on, at the same time, an extensive practice and rose to the head of his profession in Berkshire County. In 1836 he became connected with the geological survey of New York State, having been appointed by Gov. Marcy. He chose the second district, which included the Adirondack mountains, partly because that region abounded in minerals; partly because it gave him an opportunity to verify certain conclusions propounded by Professor Eaton in his lectures at Williams College. These related to a system of stratified rocks, constituting a subordinate range of the Appalachian system, and including the Berkshire, Mass., and Vermont limestones. Professor Emmons, in his geological report published in 1842, claimed that this system of rocks, which he named the Taconic, after the range to which belong Mt. Washington and Greylock, in Massachusetts, underlaid and was older than the Silurian system. This opened a controversy with other geologists that continued up to the time of his death, and he was denounced and ridiculed unmercifully; but his conclusions were strengthened by later discoveries and are now accepted, in part at least, by nearly all American geologists. In the latter part of 1842, by appointment of Gov. Seward, Prof. Emmons became custodian of the collections made by the survey, which had been arranged by Prof. Vanuxen and Prof. Hall at Albany, and aided the latter in completing the work in agriculture and paleontology. In 1843 he gave up paleontology to devote himself, by appointment, to an investigation of the agricultural resources of New York State, and published five reports (1846-54) treating of the geology, climate, soils, agricultural products, insects injurious to vegetation, and allied subjects. He resigned his custodianship in 1848, and about the year 1851 was appointed State Geologist of North Carolina, and, besides 'determining the probable age of the red sandstone belt that stretches from the Connecticut valley to North Carolina,' made important discoveries of fossils in the coal measures of the Deep and Dan rivers. Three volumes of reports were published (1856-60), one of these relating to the geology of the midland counties; the other two to the agriculture of the eastern counties and to the science of agriculture in general. His published writings not already mentioned are: 'Poology of Massachusetts' (1840), dealing with the quadrupeds; 'American Geology' (1855); 'Manual of Geology' (1859). His name is borne by one of the Adirondack peaks and by the highest summit of East mountain in the Berkshire hills. He remained in North Carolina after the Civil War broke out, and died in Brunswick County in that state."

He died Oct. 1, 1863. His widow resided, in 1878, with her son, Ebenezer, in Albany, N. Y.

15550. DR. LEVI H. FENNER. He was born at Delaware Water Gap, Pa. He married, April 8, 1841, Arvilla Myers. 14616. He was one of the "Forty Niners" who went to California and accumulated a moderate fortune after a five years' stay. He returned home and studied medicine and graduated at the Cleveland Medical College. Homeopathic physician. Captain in the New York State militia.

At the time of his death a Norwalk, Ohio, newspaper said of him :

"The many friends of Dr. L. H. Fenner will receive the intelligence of his death with deep regret. He died in Cleveland last Wednesday night. He had been in poor health about two months, and a short time previous to his death he took up his abode at the Cleveland Water-Cure, hoping to be benefited by Hydropathic treatment. But all efforts were unavailing, and he has been cut down in the full vigor of manhood.

"Dr. Fenner came to Norwalk a little more than a year ago and became associated with Dr. Tiffit in the practice of medicine. His correct and gentlemanly deportment, together with the strict attention which he paid to the practice of his profession, caused him to be highly esteemed by our citizens generally. In his death, we feel that our town has lost one of its best inhabitants."

When he and his companions started from New York City they purchased the ship Comorro in which they made the journey around Cape Horn to San Francisco. He engaged in business there and bought the interests of his partners in the ship. He loaded the ship with hides and started it for New York City, under Capt. Nathaniel Gordon. The Captain threw the hides overboard and sailed for the coast of Africa and engaged in the slave trade. Mrs. Fenner corresponded with the American Consul at Rio Janeiro, Brazil, and the Captain was arrested, tried, convicted and executed. She was chiefly instrumental in securing his conviction.

The following is a copy of a document in connection with the affair which proves the value of her testimony at the trial :

"U. S. Marshal's Office,
"Southern District of New York.
"NEW YORK, July 3rd, 1866.

"I certify that previous to the Execution of Nathaniel Gordon, the African Slave Trader, in this City, in February, 1862, I delivered to President Lincoln certain papers furnished me by Mrs. Fenner, disclosing the fact, that Gordon had stolen the Brig 'Camargo,' belonging to her husband, and proceeded with her to the coast of Africa, and after taking on board a cargo of negroes, thence proceeded to the coast of Brazil. After discharging the negroes and selling them, he burned the vessel, and made his escape in women's clothes. These papers were delivered to the President by me, about a week previous to Gordon's Execution, in order to prevent a commutation of his sentence.

"ROBT. MURRAY,
U. S. Marshal."

"Seal.

The New York Tribune of Dec. 17, 1868, said :

"A writer in The Atlantic Monthly, referring to the execution of Gordon, the slave trader, says: 'Whatever Gordon's life may have been worth to him or to his friends, I think this country put it to a very good use when she hanged him. A storm of protests was made against his death. Twenty-five thousand people petitioned Abraham Lincoln to spare that man's life, and Abraham Lincoln refused. Gordon was hanged. All through the little ports and big ports of the United States it was known that a slave trader had been hanged. And when that was known, the American slave trade ended. All up and down little African rivers that you never heard the names of it was known that an American slave trader had been hanged, and cowardly pirates trembled, and brave seamen cheered when they heard it. Mothers of children thanked such gods as they knew how to thank, and slaves shut up in barracoons, waiting for their voyage, got signal that something had happened which was to give them freedom. That something was that Gordon was hanged. So far that little candle threw its beams.'”

Dr. Fenner died April 28, 1858, at Cleveland, Ohio. Residence Ludlowville, N. Y., and Norwalk, Ohio.

The History of Four Counties, so-called, says of him :

“Prominent among the members of the Tompkins County bar, in days past, and the pioneer of that respectable body, in fact, is Samuel Love, who for upwards of half a century practiced law in Ithaca. Samuel Love was born in Kingsbury, Washington County, N. Y., July 28, 1797, and is consequently now (1878) in the eighty-second year of his age. His father, John Love, was born in Rhode Island, in June, 1764, and his mother, Annar Burnett Love, was also a native of that state. In January, 1813, the family removed from Washington County to the town of Groton (then Locke) where Samuel received the rudiments of his education at the public schools. His father died in 1823, and his mother in 1842, and the only surviving members of his family direct are one brother, Isaac Love, of Ithaca, and a sister, Esther, now the wife of John D. Fuller of Moravia, N. Y. Mr. Love commenced the study of law with Lewis Tooker, and completed his legal studies in the office of Alpha H. Shaw. He was admitted to the bar of Tompkins County in 1824, and two years later was made a practitioner in the Supreme Court of the State. He entered upon the duties of his profession with a commendable determination to succeed, and after a long and successful practice has nominally retired on a well-earned competency. In 1828, Mr. Love was elected Clerk of Tompkins County, and such was the satisfaction he gave in that responsible office that he was re-elected in 1831, serving in all six years. In 1835 he was appointed District Attorney, which position he retained six years, performing its duties impartially and well. The main characteristics in the career of Samuel Love has been a desire to discharge all public and private duties in a conscientious and upright manner, to maintain a reputation for individual rectitude and integrity, and, in short, to make a personal application of the Golden Rule, believing that the basic fabric of moral and civil law is founded upon that grand old principle."

"MESSRS. BEEBE & KINGMAN:

"The dates of the file of the old American Farmer in my possession are from August 29th, 1810, to July 2d, 1811,—vol. 8, Nos. 8 to 47 inclusive—whole Nos. 367 to 411. All have the cut of an eagle in the heading, such as described by you. The legend borne in the beak of the bird I have deciphered to be 'Pleuribus Unum.' E seems to have gone astray. As mention was made in your article of 23d of my father's apprenticeship to the printing business, and its abrupt termination at his father's death in 1814, I would merely add that he (Horace) was again apprenticed, but to the mercantile, not printing, business, to Horatio Ross, for five years from Jan. 20, 1815. This service was performed for a yearly salary, increasing from eighty dollars for the first year to two hundred for the fifth. In addition Mr. Ross agreed, in the language of the 'Indenture' (now before me,) 'to find and allow the said Horace Mack, meat, drink, washing and lodging during the said term fit and convenient for the said apprentice.' On the other hand, as to the apprentice, it reads, 'at cards, dice, or any unlawful games, he shall not play. Taverns or ale houses he shall not frequent. Matrimony he shall not contract.

HORACE MACK

From the service of his master he shall not depart, etc.' This document is witnessed by Stephen Mack and Wm. Platt. By the commission to Stephen Mack, Esq., which I have, dated Nov. 11th, 1812, and signed by Daniel D. Tompkins, the said Mack was made first Judge of the Court of Common Pleas in and for the county of Broome. Emanuel Coryell was appointed first Judge of Tioga County March 31, 1810, and was succeeded by Judge Gamaliel H. Barstow, June 22, 1818. It appears, therefore, that Owego was then in the county of Broome.

"H. MACK."

Landmarks of Tompkins County says of him :

"The first of the Hibbards to come to this county was Henry Hibbard, a native of Winham, Conn., who came here in 1812, and in partnership with Julius Ackley established the first hat manufactory in Ithaca, later adding a store in the same line. In 1816 he married Rhoda Ackley, who died without issue, and he married second, Nancy Tillotson, in 1819, by whom he had two children : Mary, who married Thomas St. John ; and Henry Fitch Hibbard. Timothy, the father of Henry, first mentioned, came to this county about 1818, and settled on a farm in the northeastern portion of this town, which settlement has ever since born the name of Hibbard's Corners. He died in 1837. Henry Hibbard was one of the most prominent business men in the early history of this city (Ithaca), taking an important part in all enterprises for the public good. He was heavily interested in real estate, and in 1828, in connection with Ackley & Beebe built the Clinton House which still stands as a landmark of the county. He died in 1863. Henry F. Hibbard was for a number of years the teller in the old Ithaca Bank, and later conducted a general store. In 1853, in company with Thomas P. St. John, he established a factory for the manufacture of sewing silks, which until 1861 was one of the leading industries of this section, at that year, however, he returned to the mercantile business. He was at one time greatly interested in speculation, but during his later years withdrew from all active business with the exception of his connection with the Savings Bank of which he was a founder. He was a Democrat and served as Supervisor at one time."

At the time of his death the Ithaca Journal said of him :

"In his death Ithaca loses one of its foremost leaders in all thought and action regarding public projects and its best advocate in all things looking to its weal. A man of sympathy, kindly impulses and untiring energy—his loss will prove a greater one than many of its citizens endowed with greater wealth. The organizer of a yet young manufacturing business, daily increasing in importance, and in its demands upon his moments and energies, he never refused public demand upon either his time or purse. He was truly a warm hearted friend, a man of rare abilities, a companionable man and a public spirited citizen in all that the term implies. To those who know him best his memory will remain dearest."

Director in Weekly Underwriter Co. Member of Reform Club, American Geographical Society, Metropolitan Museum of Art and American Museum of Natural History.

At the time of his death the Weekly Underwriter said editorially:

"The life-record of our friend and associate, who died this week, appears on another page. It is full of the evidences of high principle, noble endeavor and the achievement of purpose. Mr. Mack's methods were quiet, but what he aimed to do he followed with persistence, and generally accomplished. We believe that no man in our vocation was more liked and respected by those whom he had to meet in business. The letters which have spontaneously come to us from prominent underwriters, deploring Mr. Mack's untimely death, show that he was indeed to them, as he must have been to all, persona grata. Further, no man could ever justly say that he had done him wrong; very many could say, as did the citizens of the town whose good order and clean politics he defended, as an editor, with his life at stake, that his career was a benefaction. To those who were nearer his service was a long blessing. Measured by these standards Mr. Mack's life was a success and an example. It can be summed up—the life of an earnest, manly, Christian gentleman."

The same paper in another column said:

"John Warren Mack died at his home, 471 Lenox avenue, in this city, early on Sunday morning, after an illness from typhoid fever of nearly seven weeks. His last appearance in this office was on Wednesday, October 10, when he attended to his usual duties, although he was already suffering from the first effects of his malady. It was a serious case from the beginning, and its progress was watched with much anxiety by his family and friends, and when the fever had run its course it left him too weak to rally. All that the best medical skill and the attentions of a devoted wife and children could do were of no avail.

"Mr. Mack came from sturdy old New England stock, and was born at Bath, Steuben County, N. Y., March 11, 1848. His boyhood education was principally obtained at the Haverling Union School, at Bath, where he was prepared for college. He entered Cornell University in his twentieth year and was graduated with the class of 1872, taking the degree of Bachelor of Science. Although his natural bent was for journalism, and his first venture in that direction was a brief experience at the case, the early years of his life after leaving the university were devoted to education. He had a taste for the acquirement of languages and became a proficient French, German and Italian scholar. These languages and the higher mathematics he taught at the Ithaca Academy and subsequently at the Delaware Literary Institute. He was also for some time principal of the North Cohocton public school.

"The entry of Mr. Mack into the vocation of his choice was as editor of the Bayonne, N. J., Herald. This was about the year 1881. In 1883 he removed to Hornellsville, N. Y., to accept the post of business manager of the Herald, and, with a short incursion into life insurance as the local agent of the New York Life insurance company, he continued with that paper until 1889, being the last two years its editor. While he was occupying that position it became his duty to attack the political rascalities then rife at Hornellsville, and his fearless course so exasperated the gang in power that his editorial room was entered one evening when he was at work and he was brutally beaten and injured severely. The indignation of the community over the assault and its approval of his conduct as a conscientious journalist more than compensated him for his suffering in its behalf. He never failed to put into practice his conception of what was right, no matter what might be the possible consequences that threatened.

“His public career and his reputation as a careful and intelligent statistician led to his call to the service of the Government in the taking of the census of 1890. He was appointed to the division of insurance statistics, acting as chief under the direction of Special Agent Charles A. Jenney. In 1894, when the census work was completed, Mr. Mack accepted an offer to join the staff of The Weekly Underwriter, and became its outside business representative. In that capacity he was known to and highly respected by underwriters throughout the United States. He was a director and the secretary of the corporation by which the paper is published.

“Mr. Mack was an unobtrusive professor of religion, and was from early manhood a member of the Presbyterian communion. On becoming a resident of the city of New York, in 1894, he connected himself with the Harlem Presbyterian Church, and at the time of his death was its senior elder. His strong business sense was of great value in the management of its secular affairs. In this beautiful church edifice the funeral services were held on last Tuesday evening. They were opened by the present pastor, and the funeral sermon was preached by his old pastor and friend, who was in charge when he became a member, and who paid a just and eloquent tribute to Mr. Mack's qualities as a man and a Christian.”

From the numerous tributes to Mr. Mack by his brethren of the insurance press, the following have been selected as expressive of their sense of the loss which has fallen on the profession and the community by his death :

From the Insurance Age :

“As we go to press we learn of the death, after a lingering illness, of John W. Mack, of The Weekly Underwriter. In this brief space we can only add our small tribute to the testimonials which all who knew him are ready to pay to the splendid character and substantial worth of this Nature's nobleman who has just passed on. As we lay him to rest, let it not be only with brimming eye and breaking heart, but also with joy at the remembrance of an upright and spotless life, over which the King of Terrors can never wholly triumph."

From The Chronicle :

"He was a gentleman, was John W. Mack, a Christian gentleman, and a newspaper man of thorough training, rare attainments and highest class. He was one of those men whose presence commanded respect and consideration, because those whom he met in social or business intercourse recognized instinctively a nature of fine instincts and high ideals coupled with good taste and common sense. His death leaves a distinct gap in this profession, which needs just such men as he. Aside from our sense of personal loss at the death of a friend, we join with the fraternity in mourning the loss of a sterling character."

From The Record :

"He was a man of high character and fine attainments, a graduate of Cornell University ; and although of a retiring disposition he made and kept a host of warm friends among insurance men and his journalistic associates."

From the Philadelphia Intelligencer :

"John W. Mack was a true gentleman. He was also a trained and capable newspaper man who understood his work well and did it quietly but effectively. The one thing, however, that always impressed you when you met Mr. Mack for the first time, and which grew on you the more times you met him, was that he was a gentleman. Clean cut, positive as to his convictions, but kindly and courteous in his expression of his views and in his relations to those about him."

From Thrift :

"The news of the death of Mr. John W. Mack, the secretary of the Underwriter Printing and Publishing Company, on the 25th inst., was received with general regret by his co-workers in insurance journalism, and has called forth many tributes to Mr. Mack's memory from prominent life and fire underwriters."

From the Insurance Advocate :

"A scholarly and high minded gentleman, Mr. Mack was a credit to insurance journalism and gained the high respect of all with whom he had dealings."

From The Surveyor :

"While the deceased was, perhaps, not as widely known as some others, because of his retiring disposition, he was in his personal character one of the shining lights of the business of insurance journalism. His death came as a shock to many who esteemed him greatly for his gentle sincerity and the abilities that his modesty could not conceal."

From Views :

"The death of Mr. John Warren Mack, secretary of the Underwriter Printing and Publishing Company, New York, who succumbed to typhoid fever the morning of the 25th ult., is deeply deplored in insurance circles. The practice of uniform courtesy and nicety to his colleagues, his unobtrusive nature and gentle manner, won their esteem and friendship. The Weekly Underwriter has, indeed, lost a good staff, and insurance journalism a conscientious and talented co-laborer."

From the Insurance Monitor :

"Insurance journalism lost an honored representative in Mr. J. W. Mack, who died on November 25 at his home in New York. Mr. Mack became connected with The Weekly Underwriter in 1894. Prior to that connection, he had been engaged in journalism for many years. He was an expert statistician, and was employed by the Government in the taking of the census of 1890, under Mr. Charles A. Jenny. Mr. Mack had the respect and esteem of all with whom he came in contact, and his untimely death is mourned by many friends."

From the Insurance Herald :

"Mr. Mack had been with The Weekly Underwriter since 1894 and has contributed to some of the most important features of its work. He was a graduate of Cornell University and had been successively printer, teacher and principal of schools, life insurance agent, editor and business manager of journals in Bayonne, N. J., and Hornellsville, N. Y., and special insurance census supervisor of the Government from 1890 to 1894, previous to his connection with The Weekly Underwriter. Mr. Mack was in the prime of life, aged fifty-two, and will be greatly missed and deeply mourned."

From The Vigilant :

"Mr. Mack was able and conscientious ; everything he undertook to do he did well. He was always a gentleman, a good citizen and a loyal endeavorer for righteousness."

From The Standard :

"Few men will be more genuinely missed from the ranks of insurance journalism than John Warren Mack, of The Weekly Underwriter, New York, who died on Sunday of typhoid fever. A man of wide information, a skilled linguist, a gentleman always, and an enthusiast in his profession, of which he was a modest and yet conspicuous ornament, his loss in the midst of a successful and honorable career will be deeply deplored in journalistic and insurance circles, in which he was highly and deservedly esteemed. * * Mr. Mack's journalistic work was of the highest order—accurate, polished, and always honest. His loss will be felt especially by his colleagues on The Weekly Underwriter, who were greatly attached to him for his solid and endearing qualities. The funeral services were held in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York, on Tuesday evening, and were attended by a large number of insurance journalists and insurance men. At a meeting of insurance journalists in the office of C. J. Smith, Mutual Life Building, on Tuesday, appropriate resolutions were adopted."

"HON. MURRAY E. POOLE:

"DEAR SIR—

"I know nothing of the McDougals in connection with the Macks; was in hopes you had discovered something. I only saw a mention of it in some little town history. 'Gilsum,' N. H., I believe. My grandmother (step-grandmother), Elizabeth, always insisted that we could go right back to 'Rob Roy,' and seemed to know much about the family, but not one of us paid much attention to it. I have endeavored to recall who my grandfather's sister, Wealthy, married, but I cannot.

"Very sincerely,

"FRANCES ROE.

"November twenty-ninth, 1901."

"FORT SNELLING, Minn.

"January twenty-sixth.

"MY DEAR MR. MACK:—

"Did your father, in his accounts of the family, ever intimate that our name was not Mack, but McDougal in Scotland? My cousin, George Mack, writes me that our grandmother said it was McGregor and that we were direct descendants of Rob Roy

McGregor, but no documentary evidence to this effect was found among her papers. I have found once in the Historical library that our name was probably McDougal from the fact that the early Macks used the same crest as the McDougals of Scotland, a bear's head erased. I am

"Your cousin,

"FRANCES M. A. ROE."

S., 1878. He married Mary Wand of Buffalo, N. Y. Principal of High School and Superintendent of Schools, Bedford, Iowa, 1881—4. Lawyer. Director in the Bank of Niagara, Bank of Suspension Bridge, Power City Bank and Niagara County Savings Bank of Niagara Falls, N. Y.

Men of New York (1898) says of him :

“Eugene Cary, prominent in the legal and political circles of Niagara Falls, was born in Dunkirk, N. Y., somewhat less than forty years ago. After attending the public schools of his native place, he obtained higher instruction at Cornell University, graduating thence in 1878 with the degree of B. S. He then devoted a year to business in his father’s hardware store at Dunkirk, and the winter of 1879—80 he passed as principal of a school at Sinclairville, Chautauqua County, N. Y.

“By this time Mr. Cary had decided to make the practice of law his life-work. Entering the office of Judge Thomas P. Grosvenor, therefore, at Dunkirk, he applied himself with characteristic zeal to the task of mastering legal science. He continued his reading until August, 1881, when the position of Superintendent of Schools at Bedford, Iowa, was offered to him. He accepted this opportunity, and managed the public schools of Bedford with marked efficiency for the next three years. He found a little time for his law studies during these years in the West, and had no difficulty in passing the bar examinations at Buffalo in June, 1884.

"From November, 1884, until October of the next year, Mr. Cary practiced law at Forestville, near Dunkirk, in partnership with Daniel Sherman. Niagara Falls was already beginning to give promise of its later industrial supremacy, and Mr. Cary resolved to settle there. Associating himself, accordingly, with Henry C. Tucker, he practiced at the Falls in the firm of Tucker & Cary from October, 1885, until May, 1887. For the next six years he carried on a large practice without partnership assistance. Since May 1, 1893, he has been associated with William C. Wallace in the well-known firm of Cary & Wallace. He has become a familiar figure in the Courts of Niagara County, and is widely known as an able and trustworthy attorney.

"Outside of his professional work Mr. Cary has been especially interested in politics. He was a member of the executive committee of the Chautauqua County Republican Committee in 1884. In the fall of that year he edited the political columns of a Dunkirk newspaper. Since going to Niagara Falls he has been on the Republican City Committee several times, and in the important campaign of 1896 he was chairman of that committee. He was one of the Alternate Delegates to the Republican National Convention at St. Louis in the same year. He has been a delegate to every Republican judiciary convention in his district for the last ten years, and was chairman of the convention in 1895. Notwithstanding his activity and importance in the counsels of the Republican party, he has never cared to hold public office. He has, however, been a member of the Niagara Falls Board of Education since March, 1896.

"Mr. Cary has been somewhat active in the business life of Niagara Falls as well as in law and politics. He holds directorates in Power City Bank, and in the Bank of Niagara; and acts as attorney for these institutions, and for the Bank of Suspension Bridge. He is a Trustee of the Niagara County Savings Bank, and President of the Niagara Falls Memorial Hospital."

From Spencer (Iowa) News, Feb. 8, 1894:

"A biographical sketch of Mrs. E. B. Higley read at the Farmers' Institute last week.

"It seems fitting that we turn aside, for a few moments, from the regular business of the day and give our attention for the intervals to a review of the life and works of one whom every person here must remember with deepest respect as well as with gratitude for the work done in this institution, especially in advancing the work of the special department now under discussion.

"Miss Julia M. Clark was a native of Windham, Ohio. Born on a midsummer day when the world was at its loveliest, her infant eyes opened on a world of flowers and all her life she has held no task sweeter than the cultivation and study of these beautiful gifts from an all-wise and good Creator. She was educated at the academy of her native town and took the preparatory course of Oberlin College, but owing to financial reverses in her father's family she was compelled to give up her cherished dream of college life and bravely took up the task of teaching to assist in educating the young brothers and sisters, of which there were six, she being the eldest.

"Always a close and thorough student, her studies did not end with her school days but have continued through all her useful and busy life. In later years she took up the Chautauqua work and completed the four years' course of reading in 1882, just before removing to Iowa, but ever since the organization of a C. L. S. & C. circle in Spencer she has been an active and useful member, and held a place of honor in the hearts of all her associates.

"In 1853 she was married to Edward B. Higley, and for forty years she has shared all his joys and sorrows. She was always ready to give her influence in the cause of temperance. In the dark days of our republic when war and bloodshed were over the land, her time, work and influence were given to aid the national cause, and being the possessor of a remarkably rich contralto voice she was the leading member of a musical club which gave from time to time excellent concerts for the purpose of raising funds to supply the necessary help to soldiers in field and hospital. She was a devoted Christian and a member of the Congregational church at Windham, from which she took letters to the same church in this place. She first came to Spencer in 1882 but went to Mason City the following year and remained until 1886, since which time her home has been in Spencer.

“Active in charities both in public and private, her hand was ready and quick to aid any one in distress. Practical in all things if she had work to do she gave it where the remuneration would supply the greatest need.

“She gave her aid to every good cause for the advancement of her fellow beings intellectually, financially or socially, and was quick to see and advocate any measure to raise the standard of life in those around her. Many will remember the effort put forth some years ago for purchasing and beautifying a portion of land for a city park. Her efforts were not crowned with success as they deserved, but no doubt did some good as no good work is ever entirely lost.

“With eyes to see and an intellect to appreciate the beautiful in nature and art her most enthusiastic work was given in the line of horticulture and floriculture. She spared no pains to make successful any movement for their advancement. She was a member of the Portage county horticultural society in Ohio, and did efficient service in that body for years before coming to Iowa. She has been a member of the State horticultural society of Iowa since 1884, and her name has been held in honor as one of the capable workers. Being a learned and skillful botanist she was at one time employed to make a sectional report of the flora of northwestern Iowa by the state organization. You all know what her work in this society has been. From its earliest organization she has been its most faithful advocate. With characteristic independence she attended the first session with no other woman to support her, and from that time until she was called away she has been on the most important committees in the society.

“With all her services in public life she was a devoted wife, a

FIRST GENERATION.

18500. JOHN MACK. 11800. He did not marry a second time. It is thought that this family dropped their original names, retaining the prefix only, thereby being better able to escape persecution on account of their religious belief. It is said that part of their coat-of-arms was a boar's head. The Scotch families of McDougal and McTavish have as parts of their coats-of-arms a boar's head erased. One branch of the family thinks that the original name was McDermion. He was the original and only early settler of that name in Conn. and the ancestor of all the early Macks of that state.

For information in regard to Mack family see: 1. American Ancestry. Vols. I and II. 2. Bedford, N. H. Centennial. 3. Hayward's History of Gilsum, N. H. 4. Lancaster's History of Gilman- ton, N. H. 5. In 1765 his parents sold two pieces of land which they owned in Lyme and moved to Hartland, Conn., where they bought a farm. Theophilus Lord Gates was never a strong man physically, but both he and his wife inherited land from their grandfather Theophilus Lord, of Lyme, and this with their farm in Hartland, inherited from Jesse Gates, brought them enough to live comfortably. Their children were all well educated for those days and several of them taught school before marrying. Their daughter Polly married Solomon Payne, of Amenia, N. Y., about 1815 and they moved to Trumbull Co., Ohio, settling in the extreme eastern part of the state in a place which was called "Payne's Corners". They built a large house which for many years was the meeting place for all the families. Lydia Gates, the oldest daughter of Theophilus Lord Gates, married Roger Eno (or Enos) of Amenia before 1804. The other three daughters soon joined Mrs. Payne in Ohio. About 1822 Solomon Payne went back to Amenia and there met Mrs. Gates whom he took to Ohio with him for a visit. They drove west in a wagon. A lustre teapot and a small chest brought with them are still shown at Payne's Corners. Mr. and Mrs. Eno went to Hartland and took charge of the farm for their father. Theophilus Lord Gates died suddenly in March and his wife never returned to Connecticut, but lived with Polly Payne until her death on Jan. 7, 1855, at the advanced age of ninety-six years. 21050. COL. DAVID MACK. (Elisha<sup>3</sup>, Josiah<sup>3</sup>, John<sup>4</sup>.) 13015. Prof. Edward Payson Smith in his Historical Discourse at the Middlefield, Mass., Centennial Celebration, 1883, says of him :

“After Deacon Mack for several years had on Sunday gone on foot six miles to Chester meeting-house, or, in the winter, with ox-sled had carried the members of his own and other families thither and back, a Sabbath day’s journey indeed; and after he had many times travelled down into the valley of the western branch of the Westfield River and out of it, climbing a series of hills to reach the place of town-meeting in Becket; and after his neighbors in the south part of Peru, the northeast corner of Becket, the north of Chester, and the southwest corner of Worthington, had labored under similar difficulties and inconveniences in reaching their religious and business centres, it was natural that their thoughts should be directed to some more excellent way of satisfying their needs. In the midst of these people so seriously incommoded were some even more destitute of privileges than they. The residents upon Prescott’s Grant had no political centre, for that Grant did not as yet form a part of any existing town. The necessities of the case, therefore, gave birth to the scheme of forming a new town, with Prescott’s Grant as its nucleus, with such additions as the surrounding towns might give, and of securing its incorporation by the authority of the General Court. David Mack was the leader in the enterprise of organization. He undertook the work of a survey and of an application to the Legislature, with the agreement to pay his own expenses if the project should fail. The plan was successful; and on the 12th of March, 1783, the act of incorporation was passed.

"The same year (1773) is also given as the date when David Mack purchased his place. In 1774 he came to the town, cleared two acres, sowed them to wheat, and built a log cabin preparatory to bringing his family. While thus engaged, he boarded with Mr. Taylor, worked for him two days in the week for his board, and the other four days upon his own land. In 1775, he removed with his family from Hebron, Conn.

"Foremost among the men of Middlefield stands David Mack, whose Christian character has been set forth in the tract 'The Faithful Steward,' and is fresh in the memories of many who hear my voice. I shall enter upon no eulogy of Deacon Mack. His record is before you, and it is beyond my power to add to or detract from it. His prominence in the first half century of the town's history was due to his business, his wealth, his religion, and, above all, to his native force of character. He could not, of course, have accomplished what he did without the aid of others who were his peers in business talent, and perhaps his superiors in intelligence. Some things which did happen would never have occurred but for him. It was the Nemesis of his fate that some of his most strenuous efforts contributed to the success of enterprises he sought to stifle. He was undoubtedly more facile in conviction than in conciliation, but no sketch of Middlefield would be at all complete that should not assign him a conspicuous place. The man whose only property, on coming to Middlefield, was his farm, a poor horse, his axe, his wife and child, and who in his career as farmer and merchant amassed a fortune, and was, moreover, the cause that certain other men became wealthy, was a successful business man. He paid his debts promptly, and expected others to do the same. He showed his knowledge of the value of wealth by his use of it, and his great good sense by entirely settling his estate before his death. The man whose townsmen constantly elected him to offices of trust and honor was a public-spirited man. As has been said, he was the leader in organizing and incorporating the town. He was not less active in securing preaching and schooling. These blessings he did not desire for others alone, but for himself as well. The man who in 1784 went to school with his own children and spelled in the same class with his six-year-old son was a wise man, for he understood at least his own ignorance. This is an amount of knowledge some never attain. The man of but six weeks' schooling previous to his marriage, whose mind so expanded that he became the friend and patron of learning, who gave Mary Lyon $500 for Mt. Holyoke Female Seminary at a time when it was not generally conceded that women could and should be educated, that they would be more womanly, more everything desirable, if they had education,—this man was a man of progress. The man in whose barn, kitchen, and large chambers town and church meetings were held for several years; who was constant in his attendance on worship, and sat for fifty-four years in the same pew in that meeting-house he had done so much to erect; who gave more than $18,000 in large sums to benevolent enterprises, and as much more in smaller offerings; who by his contributions made himself a life-member of twelve benevolent societies, and at one time gave $1,000 to foreign missions; who left to the church and society he loved a fund of $3,000 for the support of the gospel in all coming time; whose interest and zeal in the religious welfare of his children and children's children were constant and successful,—this man was surely a religious man.

“That he was patriotic, his conduct at the time of Shay's insurrection shows. Middlefield's incorporation nearly coincided with the close of the Revolutionary War. The return of peace found the nation burdened with heavy taxation, industry paralyzed, and trade, in the absence of aught that could with justice be called a currency, even more depressed. The people of Western Massachusetts, writhing under the pressure of public and private debts for which no means of payment existed, attributed to the government the evils from which they suffered, clamored for issues of paper money, and sought to stay the courts from granting writs to which they could not respond. Middlefield's sympathy with these unfortunate debtors is evident from this language in a call for a town meeting in November, 1786, to choose delegates to a county convention in Hadley for the following very necessary purposes: ‘To choose a committee to confer with committees from other counties on the pressing distressful condition of our public affairs. Secondly, to choose a committee to prepare a nervis petition to the Honorable General Assembly, with such justness, perspicuity, and suitable address as may not fail to be effective of our public relief.'

"The grievances, though greatly magnified, were real. This conference and petition were entirely lawful. When, however, under the lead of Day and Shays, insurgent plans were formed, and the attempt made to disperse the courts and arrest the enforcement of legal process altogether, insurrection had begun.

"In this state of affairs, a requisition was sent to Captain David Mack to appear with a certain number of his men at Springfield, and join the state forces. He drafted his men, gave orders for their appearance at his house the next morning, prepared to march. During the night, the company appointed new officers, declared for Shays, and in the morning surrounded and entered Captain Mack's house, and declared him prisoner. The loyal captain clearly saw the peril of the step that had been taken. To his utmost, he exhorted his men to abandon their course of folly and treason. His plea was in vain. As a prisoner, he requested a furlough of three days, which was granted. At their request, he wrote the furlough; and, having procured the signatures of the newly appointed officers, among whom were Samuel Jones, Eliakim Wardwell, and Mr. Meacham, he put the document in his pocket, hastened to Springfield, at once reported himself to General Shepard, to whom he exhibited his furlough. After examining it, General Shepard said: 'Well, Captain Mack, as you have no men to fight with you, you may go home. We shall immediately attend to the men who have signed this paper.' At that exciting period, the house of Samuel Jones, now owned by George Bell, was the headquarters of the Shays men in this vicinity. There the Shays leaders were arrested, after Captain Mack's visit to Springfield, and lodged in Northampton jail. In their distress, they humbly and earnestly besought Captain Mack to use his influence in securing their release. He magnanimously exerted himself in their behalf, and secured their pardon.

"So great was the divergence in views that in November, 1787, the town chose Major David Mack, Lieutenant James Dickson and Ensign Matthew Smith as a committee to apply to the General Court for a committee to fix the place for the meeting-house."

22100. REV. JOSEPH SMITH. (Joseph<sup>2</sup>, Asael<sup>1</sup>.) 20874. He was born Dec. 23, 1805, at Sharon, Vt. He married, Jan. 18, 1827, by Squire Tarbell, at South Bainbridge, N. Y., Emma Hale (daughter of Isaac Hale of Harmony, Pa.). Founder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints (Mormon). Appleton's American Encyclopedia says of him :

"Joseph Smith, founder of the Mormon church, or church of Latter Day Saints, born at Sharon, Vt., Dec. 23, 1805, died at Carthage, Ill., June 27, 1844. His parents, of Scotch descent, early removed to Palmyra, N. Y. Joseph's education was very defective. With the aid of Sidney Rigdon he brought forth the 'Book of Mormon' which he claimed to have discovered under angelic guidance, written on plates and hidden in the earth: and on this he founded and organized his church in Manchester, N. Y., April 6, 1831. In 1831 he went with his disciples to Kirtland, Ohio, and erected a costly but very singular temple. He removed in 1838 to Far West, Mo., and there his disciples gathered. They soon removed to Hancock County, Ill., where they built a city called Nauvoo, and constructed another costly temple. Here Smith combined in his own person the chief military, municipal and ecclesiastical offices.

"According to his own account, Smith at about the age of 15, while living with his father, who was a farmer in Ontario (now Wayne) Co., N. Y., began to have visions. On the night of Sept. 21, 1823, the angel Moroni appeared to him three times, informing him that God had a work for him to do, and that a record written upon gold plates, and giving an account of the ancient inhabitants of America and the dealings of God with them, was deposited in a particular place in the earth (a hill in Manchester, Ontario Co., N. Y.), and, with the record, two transparent stones in silver bows like spectacles, which were anciently called the Urim and Thummim, on looking through which the golden plates would become intelligible. On Sept. 22, 1827, the angel of the Lord placed in Smith's hands the plates and the Urim and Thummim. The plates were nearly 8 in. long by 7 in. wide, and a little thinner than ordinary tin, and were bound together by three rings running through the whole. Altogether they were about 6 in. thick, and were neatly engraved on each side with hieroglyphics in a language called the reformed Egyptian, not then known on the earth. From these plates Smith, sitting behind a blanket hung across the room to keep the sacred records from profane eyes, read off, with the aid of the stone spectacles, the 'Book of Mormon,' or Golden Bible as he sometimes called it, to Oliver Cowdery, who wrote it down as Smith read it. It was printed in 1830, in a volume of several hundred pages. Appended to it was a statement signed by Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris, who had become professed believers in Smith's supernatural pretensions, and are called by the Mormons 'the three witnesses'. They said: 'We declare with words of soberness that an angel of God came down from heaven, and he brought and laid before our eyes that we beheld and saw the plates and the engravings thereon.'

"Smith and Rigdon seem at first to have had vague and confused ideas as to the nature and design of the church they were about to establish. They were both inclined to teach millenarianism, which at that time was beginning to attract attention in western New York; and they accordingly settled into the doctrine that the millennium was close at hand, that the Indians were to be speedily converted, and that America was to be the final gathering place of the saints, who were to assemble at New Zion or New Jerusalem, somewhere in the interior of the continent. With the 'Book of Mormon' as their text and authority, they began to preach this new gospel; and Smith's family and a few of his associates, together with some of Rigdon's previous followers, were soon numerous enough to constitute the Mormon church, as it was styled by the people around them, or the church of Latter Day Saints, as they presently began to call themselves. The church was first regularly organized at Manchester, N. Y., April 6, 1830, and the first conference was held at Fayette, N. Y., in June, at which time the number of believers had increased to 30. Smith, directed as he said by revelation, in January, 1831, led the whole body of believers to Kirtland, Ohio, which was to be the seat of the New Jerusalem. Here converts were rapidly made, and soon, desiring a wider field for the growth of the church, Smith and Rigdon travelled westward, looking for a suitable location, which was found in Independence, Jackson Co., Mo., where in August Smith dedicated a site for the temple to be erected by the saints, and named the place New Jerusalem. On their return to Kirtland, where they proposed to remain for five years 'and make money,' Smith and Rigdon established a mill and a store, and set up a bank without a charter, of which Smith appointed himself president, and made Rigdon cashier.

"About a year afterward a government for the church was instituted, consisting of three presidents, Smith, Rigdon and Frederick G. Williams, who together were styled the first presidency, a revelation from the Lord having declared that the sins of Rigdon and Williams were forgiven, and that they were henceforth to be accounted as equal with Joseph Smith, Jr., in holding the keys of his last kingdom.'

"The Mormons were kindly received in Illinois, and Dr. Isaac

Galland, who owned a large tract of land at Commerce, in Hancock Co., gave Smith a considerable portion of it in order to enhance the value of the rest by the settlement of the Mormons there. Smith accordingly received a revelation commanding the saints to establish themselves at Commerce, and build a city to be called Nauvoo on the land presented to him, which he divided into house lots and sold to his followers at high prices. By this transaction, and by other equally successful speculations, the prophet in a few years amassed a considerable fortune. Nauvoo soon grew to be a city of several thousand inhabitants, the saints being summoned by a new revelation to assemble there from all quarters of the world, and to build a temple for the Lord, and a hotel in which Smith and his family should 'have place from generation to generation, forever and ever'. The legislature of Illinois granted a charter for the city of Nauvoo, conferring upon it extraordinary privileges, which enabled Smith, Rigdon and the other leaders to exercise almost unlimited civil power. They were authorized by charter to organize a military body, which was accordingly formed under the name of the Nauvoo legion, and comprised nearly all the Mormons capable of bearing arms. Smith was commander of this force with the rank of lieutenant general. Besides this office, he held those of mayor of the city and first president of the church. By a revelation given April 6, 1830, he had been appointed 'seer, translator, prophet, apostle of Jesus Christ, and elder of the church:' and the Lord had said to him: 'The church shall give heed to all his words and commandments which he shall give unto you; for his word shall ye receive as if from my own mouth, in all patience and faith.' The civil and military offices which he conferred upon himself at Nauvoo and the legion at his command gave him supreme power within the city, whose charter had been purposely so framed that the state authorities were almost excluded 'from jurisdiction within its limits. On April 6, 1841, the foundation of the temple was laid at Nauvoo, by Lieut. Gen. Smith, who appeared at the head of the legion, surrounded by a numerous military staff; and the saints being commanded by revelation not only to contribute to its erection, but to labor personally upon the work every tenth day, its walls rapidly arose.

"A portion of the Mormons reject polygamy, and do not approve of the political schemes of Brigham Young and the leaders of the church in Utah. Joseph Smith, the son of the prophet, is regarded by them as the true living head of the church, and under his direction they have established themselves at Nauvoo. Their number is inconsiderable."

The National Cyclopedia of Biography says of him :

"Joseph Smith has been conceded one of the most remarkable figures of the nineteenth century. Starting in life without education or worldly advantage, he became a recognized leader of thousands of enthusiastic converts, who passionately shared his conviction that he was a veritable prophet of God. Of magnificent physique and commanding presence, he was eminently fitted for this role, and, on the whole, it must be confessed, maintained it with dignity. For strength and perfection the hierarchy founded upon his teachings is confessed as at least equal to that of Catholicism."

23500. JOSEPH SMITH. 22100. (Descendant of Robert Smith of New Hampshire, 1631.) The National Cyclopedia of Biography says of him :

“Joseph Smith, Mormon prophet, was born at Sharon, Vt., Dec.
 23, 1805, son of Joseph and Lucy (Mack) Smith. In 1815 his parents removed to Palmyra, N. Y., where they resided for about four years, then settling in the town of Manchester. Joseph worked as a farm hand, could merely read and write, and had a very limited knowledge of arithmetic. These were his highest and only attainments. In the spring of 1820, in the midst of a religious revival, in which four of the family joined the Presbyterian church, his attention was seriously drawn to the subject of religion and the future state, and his mind, perplexed by the conflicting claims of the various sects, sought a solution in the Scriptures. He was particularly impressed with the text, 'If any lack wisdom, let him ask of God,' and following the admonition, he later announced that he had had a vision while praying in the woods. Two glorious personages had appeared, who informed him that his sins were forgiven; also that all religious denominations believed incorrect doctrines. He was expressly commanded not to go after them, but was told that at a future day the true doctrine, the fullness of the Gospel, should be made known to him. He further stated that on the night of Sept. 21, 1823, when he had retired to rest, a light like that of day, only of a purer and far more glorious appearance, burst into the room. In a moment a personage appeared before him, his countenance like lightning, and renewed the assurances, and further indicated that the covenant which God made with ancient Israel was at hand to be fulfilled, and that he was to be a chosen instrument in God's hands to bring about some of his marvelous purposes. The American Indians, he was told, were a remnant of Israel, whose sacred records had been taken away from them by command of God, and safely deposited for preservation. These contained many revelations pertaining to the Gospel of the Kingdom, and prophecies, relating to the last day. Before morning the vision was twice renewed, and further instructions were given by the visitant. During the four following years he frequently had instructions from the heavenly messenger, and on Sept. 22, 1827, the angel delivered the sacred records into his hands. They were engraved on plates which had the appearance of gold. Each plate was not far from seven by eight inches in measurement, and not quite as thick as common tin. They were filled on both sides with engravings in some unknown characters, since declared to be a 'revision of Egyptian hieroglyphics,' and were bound together as a book, fastened at one edge with three rings. The volume was about six inches in thickness, a part of which was sealed. The characters or letters upon the unsealed part were small and beautifully engraved. The whole book exhibited many marks of antiquity in its construction, as well as much skill in the art of engraving. With the records was found the urim and thummim, two transparent stones, let into the two rims of a bow. By this the ancients received, it was said, their revelations. The noise of Smith's visions and rumors of his discoveries had gone abroad, and on his return homewards, after the receipt of the records, he was attacked by two ruffians, but beat them off, and reached his dwelling. Shortly after, being in danger of his life from his neighbors, he departed from New York for Pennsylvania, putting the sacred plates into a barrel of beans in his wagon. Having provided himself with a home in the new region, Smith proceeded to the translation of the plates, as he tells us, 'by the gift and power of God, through the means of urim and thummim'. He did not look upon the plates directly, but through urim and thummim, and from behind a curtain. The unsealed portion, being completed, made the 'Book of Mormon,' with nearly as much reading in it as in the Old Testament. It purports to be a compilation from numerous records by a prophet named Mormon of a history of ancient America, from its earliest settlement by a colony who came from the tower of Babel, at the confusion of languages, down to the beginning of the fifteenth century of the Christian era. The original colony, having been utterly annihilated, was followed by another, which came from Jerusalem during the captivity of Jedediah, King of Judah. To all this, Oliver Cowdrey, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris, Smith's associates and earliest converts, attested when the translation was finished. In the year 1829, Smith and Cowdrey, who now craved baptism, were ordained priests of the order of Aaron by a holy messenger, who announced himself as John the Baptist, and who commanded them to baptize each other. The order of apostleship was subsequently restored, it is reported, by visits from Peter, James and John. The next year a large edition of the 'Book of Mormon' was printed, and some adherents to its author and its doctrines being found, on April 6, 1830, the 'Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints' was organized at Fayette, N. Y. The prophet's ideas seem to have been, at this time, vague and confused as to his church, and 'numerous revelations were required to shape the church as it was finally established'. The church at Fayette began to gather disciples. On June 1, 1830, at a conference in that town, thirty members were present. Missionaries were now set apart and every member was utilized; and among these were Brigham Young, the two brothers Pratt and Sidney Rigdon, a converted Campbellite preacher. Churches were formed in Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and even in Indiana and Illinois. Then came persecution, and the Saints looked out for a permanent home. Kirtland, Ohio, being selected for their first headquarters, Smith advised his disciples to gather there, and pray for a revelation from the Lord, 'as to the place where the New Jerusalem should be built,' and 'where the Saints should eventually be gathered in one'. The prophet's eyes turned westward for this heavenly city. In the fall of 1831 a revelation was made known that it was to be located in Jackson County, in Missouri. Soon 1,200 people had gathered in that place. Land was bought, a printing press established, and a monthly and a weekly newspaper published. In 1838 unsuccessful financial speculations obliged Smith to withdraw from Ohio, but long before this the Missouri settlement had encountered serious opposition. Societies had been organized to expel them from the region; their printing plant had been seized, their ministers tarred and feathered, and other outrages had been inflicted on them. Smith himself was dragged from his bed one night in Hiram, Ohio, and, after being tarred and feathered and otherwise outraged, was left for dead. In 1833 the Saints were compelled to fly across the Missouri river to the open wilderness on a winter's night. Subsequently they settled in Clay County, Missouri. Smith reached his persecuted followers with the utmost expedition, having, in February, 1834, when he heard of their distresses, assumed, by revelation, in addition to his previous functions, the role of 'military leader of the people'. The band with which he reached the borders of Missouri numbered 205, but the citizens of that state intercepted his cohort, and sadly defeated them in their schemes. The prophet returned to Kirtland, Ohio, then the headquarters of the church, and forthwith determined on a more thorough organization of his disciples. He, therefore, instituted the hierarchial order, to which the Mormons have since owed, in large measure, their success and perpetuity. Keeping his own superiority as 'president,' he selected a 'high council' of twelve men, and delegated them his 'apostles' to go 'into all nations, kindreds, tongues and people, and preach the gospel of the new covenant'. They departed into the eastern states, and in 1837 to England, where the first conference of converts was held at Preston, Lancashire, Dec. 25th of that year. Everywhere the church gained new adherents, and the year 1837 was an auspicious one for them, although they lost the confidence of the Ohio people (gentiles) by some mismanagement of mercantile affairs. The spread of their doctrines, and the reach of their organization in England and elsewhere, more than compensated for all else. In 1838 Kirtland was abandoned, and repairing to Missouri, in obedience to a new revelation, Smith declared he would yet trample on the necks of his enemies, and the citizens of that state saw reason to fear his growing strength. A band (the Danites) had been secretly formed to defend him in any extremity and by any means necessary. Quarrelling and fighting between Saints and gentiles was constant, and the interference of state authority was invoked by the latter. The militia was called out, and, after much loss and suffering, especially at a place called Haun's Mill, where many of them were massacred, the Saints were driven in the depth of winter, across the Mississippi river, and into Illinois. The prophet, with his brother, Hyrum, and other leading Mormons, were seized and sentenced by court-martial to be shot, without opportunity for defense, but Brig. Gen. Doniphan, recognizing the injustice of the proceeding, refused to carry out the command. Smith and his associates were subsequently released, and by April, 1839, the Saints had all escaped to Illinois, where, mustering 15,000 strong, they were given a grant of land on the east bank of the Mississippi, forty miles above Quincy, and twenty miles below Burlington, Iowa. There they established their new home on a bend of the river upon rising ground, with a noble view of the river for many miles. The city which they founded was called Nauvoo, or the 'City of Beauty'. The foundations of its first house were laid in 1839, and in two years more than 2,000 dwellings, with school houses and public edifices were erected. The Illinois legislature gave a charter to Nauvoo, a body of Mormon militia was formed, under the leadership of the prophet, and he assumed such civil office as gave him entire control of the place. On April 6, 1841, at the head of his 'military legion,' he laid the corner-stone of a grand temple, being spoken of in the newspapers in his military capacity alone. He shortly found himself absolute ruler over 20,000 persons, his revelations being multiplied as the occasion seemed to demand. In 1841, and again in 1842, attempts were made to arrest Smith and return him to the jurisdiction of Missouri, but on both occasions the courts decided that this could not be done. In 1844 he offered himself as a candidate for President of the United States, but was widely attacked by the newspapers. When, in 1843, he announced the revelation of 'celestial marriage,' authorizing the practice of polygamy, certain malcontents established the 'Expositor', an opposition paper, and printed in its first number the affidavit of sixteen women, who alleged that Smith, Young, Rigdon and others had invited them to enter into a secret and illicit connection, under the title of 'spiritual marriage'. Smith at once put down the paper by physical force, and its proprietors fleeing to Carthage, Ill., sued out a writ against him and his brother, Hyrum, as the abettors of a riot. The Mormons at Nauvoo resisted its service, and the state militia was called out by the governor of Illinois. The two Smiths, then surrendering themselves, were imprisoned at Carthage. After a time it was rumored that the governor had acknowledged that as there was no case against them, they would speedily be released. This precipitated the denouement, and on June 27, 1844, the prophet and his brother were shot to death by some of a party of 200 men, who had taken the law into their own hands."

The National Cyclopaedia of American Biography says of him :

"Joseph Fielding Smith, second counselor in the presidency of the Mormon church was born at Far West, Caldwell County, Missouri, Nov. 13, 1838, son of Hyrum and Mary (Fielding) Smith. His mother, with her infant son, were driven from home in the winter following his birth, while her husband, with Joseph Smith and others, was held in prison on account of his religion. In the Mormon exodus from Nauvoo he drove an ox-team most of the way from the Mississippi to the Missouri river, and reached winter quarters in the fall of 1846. In the summer of 1848 he crossed the great plains to Salt Lake, where he followed the occupation of a herd boy until 1854, working occasionally in the harvest field and in the mountains hauling wood. In April, 1854, he was called on a mission to the Sandwich Islands, and during a residence of nearly three years and a half he was president of Mani, Kohala, Hilo and Molaki conferences, and, although so young, one of the most active men in the party. Within six weeks after his arrival he was able to preach and pray and administer the Gospel ordinances in the native language, displaying in his study unusual aptitude and a wholesome devotion to duty as a missionary. On his return to Salt Lake City he at once enlisted in the legion to defend the people from the expected attack of the Federal army, and until peace was proclaimed was almost constantly in the saddle between Salt Lake and Fort Bridges. During the winter of 1858-9 he was sergeant-at-arms of the territorial legislature. On March 20, 1858, he was ordained to one of the seventies, and on Oct. 16th, a high priest, being also appointed a member of the high council. He was called on a mission to Great Britain in April, 1860, and proceeded to New York by way of Nauvoo, where he visited some of his kindred, and arrived in Liverpool July 27th. He presided over the Leeds, Sheffield, Hull and Lincolnshire conferences, and in the fall of 1862 he visited Denmark and afterward went to Paris. In March, 1864, he started on another mission to the Sandwich Islands being there placed in charge of the mission, and visited all the islands with a view of establishing permanent headquarters. After his return he was engaged in the church historians' office, and also in home missionary work. He was elected a member of the city council of Salt Lake City, and of the territorial legislature and on July 1, 1866, was ordained an apostle by Pres. Young, and appointed to fill a vacancy in the council of the twelve, Oct. 8, 1867. In 1868 he removed to Provo, Utah Co., where he served on the city council one term, but later, returning to Salt Lake City he resumed his work in the historians' office. In February, 1874, he started on a second mission to Great Britain, and as director of all the branches of the church in Europe, he visited Scandinavia, Germany, Switzerland and France. In the spring of 1877 he was again sent to preside over the European mission, and after attending the dedication of the temple at St. George, he took his departure for Liverpool, where he arrived May 27, 1877. Pres. Young's death occasioned his recall, and sailing from Liverpool he reached Salt Lake City on Sept. 27th. He went on a brief mission to the eastern states, in company with Elder Orson Pratt, and after his return in October was placed in charge of the endowment house, continuing to manage its affairs until the summer of 1884 when it was closed. In October, 1880, when John Taylor succeeded to the presidency, Elder Smith was chosen his second counsellor. He was elected a member and president of the council of the Utah legislature for the session of 1882, and in the same year was president of the Utah Constitutional Convention. After the death of President Taylor, Elder Smith resumed his position in the council of twelve apostles, but on April 7, 1889, when Wilford Woodruff succeeded to the presidency, he was chosen as his second counsellor. Pres. Smith is regarded with much affection and entire confidence by the Mormon people and the church authorities, and is considered one of the most stalwart defenders of the faith. His public addresses are characterized by extraordinary vigor and fervor, and he is looked upon as a tower of strength in all the affairs and councils of the Mormon church."

Appleton's Cyclopedia of American Biography says of him :

"Spencer Houghton Cone was born April 30, 1785, at Princeton, N. J. His father was a native of East Haddam, Conn., where for several generations the family had lived, and his mother was the daughter of Joab Houghton of New Jersey, who was active in the War of the Revolution. The son attended the College of New Jersey, 1797-9, and after teaching school he removed to Philadelphia, Pa., where he became an instructor in an academy. A natural talent for acting led him to adopt that profession. He made his first appearance in July, 1805, at the Chestnut Street theatre, Philadelphia, as Achmet in 'Mahomet'. At that time he was almost the only American on the stage, and he attained great popularity, playing principally in Philadelphia. His intense dislike for stage life induced him to seek other employment. He obtained a position as clerk in the office of the Baltimore American in 1812 and in 1813 purchased an interest in the Whig. He was then enabled to leave the stage and for some months published with success the Whig. He was married in 1810 to Sally Wallace of Philadelphia. In 1814 he moved to Washington, D. C., where he occupied a government position. He was licensed a Baptist minister and in 1815-16 was Chaplain of the House of Representatives. He preached at Alexandria, 1817-24 and in New York City from 1824 until his death. His granddaughter Kate Claxton, daughter of Spencer W. Cone, became a well-known actress. He died Aug. 28, 1855."

“MARSHFIELD, January 2, 1896.

“SIR:—I received a letter from you last eve, with a request to inform you of the dates and traditions of the Macks. I have no record of dates. Will give you what information I can according to my recollection of what I learned from my parents, Richard Kendrick and Polly (Mack) Kendrick, and grandparents, Nehemiah Mack and Caroline (Niles) Mack. The Macks came from Connecticut; I think from the town of Lyme. There were four brothers: their names were David Mack, Benjamin Mack, John Mack and Nehemiah Mack. My mother, Polly Mack, and Sally Mack were sisters, daughters of Nehemiah Mack and Caroline (Niles) Mack. Sally became the second wife of George Ayres. My grandparents, Nehemiah Mack and Caroline (Niles) Mack, came from Conn. soon after the War of the Revolution, to Woodstock, Vermont. The brothers all followed or preceded him to Woodstock, Vt. My grandfather, Nehemiah Mack, served nine months in the War of the Revolution. I do not remember of hearing of his brothers being in the service but it is quite probable some of them were. I knew your grandparents; also remember some of their children, Laura, Daniel A., which was the Rev. D. A. Mack, and another son I think was named George. Your grandfather, Daniel Miner Mack, was the son of David Mack, my grandfather, Nehemiah Mack's, brother, whose wife's name was Sarah Rogers. They also had a son Samuel Mack. The family, all but your grandfather, Daniel Miner Mack, left Plainfield, Vt., when I was quite young; I do not recollect but little about them. Grandfather, Nehemiah Mack's, other brothers lived and died in Woodstock, Vt.

“I will give you the names and address of two cousins which it is possible can help you to dates and perhaps other items: Henry R. Mack, Hardwick, Vt., and Miss Mary M. Mack, 16 Key St., Amesbury, Mass.

“Sir, please excuse this document, written by one that has passed her 80th milestone. I should be pleased to learn of your success.

“Respectfully, HARRIET WILLIS.”

“January 17, 1896.

“DEAR SIR:—Your letter of Jan. 6th was received the 11th. I was glad to receive it and thank you for it and the information you gave. It opened to my memory more plain your grandfather's family, especially your dear mother, Cordelia Rebecca Mack, and her brother, Rufus Simonds Mack: when quite young think they lived a few years with some of their relatives or friends in Plainfield. I do not know the maiden names of the wives of any of the four brothers Mack, except my grandmother's which was Niles, Caroline Niles. Benjamin's wife's given name was Abigail. David Mack's wife's name was Sarah. John Mack's wife's name I do not recollect. Grandmother, Caroline (Niles) Mack, was born Oct. 14, 1760; died Oct. 16, 1839. My grandparents, Nehemiah Mack and Caroline Niles, I think were married about the year 1780 in Conn.: came to Woodstock, Vt., soon after: in 1795 or 1796 moved to Plainfield, Vt., then a wild wilderness, with a family of six children, four sons and two daughters. Will give their names according to birth: Elisha Mack, Polly Mack, who was my mother, William Mack, Zebulon Mack, Nehemiah Mack and Sally Mack, then a babe: they also had two sons born in Plainfield, Enos Mack and John Mack. All married but Enos; he lived and died single.

"The Macks were a people of steady habits, strictly honest and religious. My grandparents, Nehemiah Mack and Caroline (Niles) Mack were converted and united with the Congregational church in Lyme, I think, Conn. Their pastor's name I think was Rev. Daniel Miner. I write this from my best recollection as I received it from grandmother, Caroline (Niles) Mack.

"January 28, 1896.

"Grandfather, Nehemiah Mack, died Jan. 3, 1828, aged 74 years. Perhaps your mother will recollect my father's family. My father's name was Richard Kendrick. If able I will later write some more items and incidents which may be of interest to you. I would be glad to hear from you when you receive this.

"Respectfully,                      "HARRIET WILLIS.

"P. S. Grandmother has been quite poorly since she began this and she wished me to finish it for her.

"MAY L. HEATH."

"PLAINFIELD, VT., May 5, 1896.

"DEAR SIR:—My last letter to you which I think was written in January was not able to finish. As my health by the blessing of God is improved, I will write a few more items. Grandfather, Nehemiah

Mack, was deacon in the first church organized in Plainfield, beloved by his church and respected by all good people: the reading of the word of God and prayer daily ascended from the family altar: and being dead he yet speaketh. When he came to Plainfield there were but very few families in town. He made his pitch in the center of the town, although then the end of the road and one mile and a half from a neighbor.

“The third winter after moving to Plainfield my mother, Polly Mack’s, parents, Nehemiah Mack and Caroline (Niles) Mack, with their youngest child, Sally Mack, who became the second wife of Edgar V. Wilson’s mother’s grandfather George Ayers, went to Woodstock to visit relatives. They rode on a sled drawn by oxen. A great contrast from that and the present speed of travel and comfort. It took four weeks for the journey and visit. My mother, Polly Mack, at the time was fourteen. She was left in charge of the home with three brothers younger than herself. Elisha Mack the oldest brother being from home.

“My mother’s brother, Nehemiah Mack, died at Saratoga Springs where he went for his health in 1821, leaving a wife and three small children. My mother’s brother, John Mack, the youngest of the family, married Irena Wilson, daughter of Daniel Wilson of Plainfield. They had four children. Only one is living, a daughter not married. She has a nice home at Dery Depot, N. H., that her father left at his death. Not able to live alone she rents her place and boards in Henry Wilson’s family, a cousin living in Amesbury, Mass. Name Mary M. Mack. I gave you her address in a former letter I think.

“You thought the record of my father, Richard Kendrick’s, family, also that of my family, might be of some use in writing a history of the Mack family. My father, Richard Kendrick, was born in Hanover, N. H., in 1780; his father died when he was seven years: he then went to Bethel, Vt., lived with an uncle. When fourteen he came with his uncle to reside in Plainfield, Vt. My mother, Polly Mack, born 1783, Woodstock, Vt. My parents were married in 1808. Had nine children, four sons and five daughters: three sons and two daughters died in infancy. My brother, the oldest of our family, married: settled in Maine; he died in 1854, I think. My oldest sister married Joseph Scott: they had three children, all have families. Sister Scott and husband died in 1882; both died in the same year. My other sister, Caroline M. Kendrick, died in 1881; not married.

"I come now to speak of my family. My husband, Asa Willis, and myself were married 1844; we had three children, daughters: Martha C., Mary A. and Hattie P. Martha married Gardner L. Heath, of Plainfield. He died in 1883, leaving her with two small children, May L. and Harley W. Heath. Mary A. Willis married F. B. Cahill, with whom is my home. Hattie P. Willis, the youngest, married Edwin Bond; had two children: only one living. I live on the farm my husband bought before our marriage. He died in March, 1860. All my children are living near.

"I come now to speak of your, Edgar V. Wilson's, mother's grandfather, George Ayers, and give some few items which I heard from him; his father followed the sea; died at sea when he, uncle, was a little lad. After his father's death he lived with an uncle seven years; he said in that time the sun never rose on him in bed. He was of a mild even temper, kind husband and father, and neighbor, deacon of the Congregational church many years, had a taste for reading and a great memory; I would give the date of my uncle and aunt Ayers' birth and death, if able to visit the cemetery where they rest; it is some seven miles away. Did not Rev. Daniel A. Mack establish a home for orphans in Winchendon, Mass? Will you please to inform respecting it? Remember me to your mother, as we are related in two ways. Pardon all errors in this lengthy writing. Will you inform me if you received letter No. 2 from me? Also your success in the undertaking? Excuse pencil writing; my hand is not steady.

With respect,

"HARRIET WILLIS."

KATE CLAXTON

stage name is "Kate Claxton". Appleton's Cyclopedia of American Biography says of her: "Kate Claxton, actress, b. in New York City in 1848. She first appeared with Lotta in Chicago, soon afterwards became a member of Daly's Fifth Avenue Company, and then of the Union Square Company, but attracted no attention till the production of 'Led Astray' in 1873, in which she won great popularity as Mathilde. Soon afterwards she made a reputation in the character of Louise in 'The Two Orphans,' with which she has become identified. She played it first at the Union Square Theatre, and was acting the part at the Brooklyn Theatre when that building was destroyed by fire Dec. 5, 1876. She became widely known for her coolness on that occasion, and by her efforts to calm the audience and prevent the rush for the doors, in which so many were killed. Soon afterwards Miss Claxton was in the Southern Hotel in St. Louis when it burned, and again displayed great coolness and energy, saving her own and her brother's life, and escaping by a burning stairway, that fell just after her foot had left the last step. After this many superstitious people, regarding her as specially unlucky, avoided the theatres where she played. She has more recently played in Charles Reade's 'Double Marriage' and in the 'Sea of Ice'. Miss Claxton married Isidor Lyon, a New York merchant, but was subsequently divorced, and in 1876 married Charles Stevenson, a member of her company."

He was the First Presiding Patriarch of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Joseph Smith, Sr., the husband of Lucy Mack, owned a handsome farm in Tunbridge, which he rented in 1802, and engaged in the mercantile business. By the dishonesty of a trusted agent he became involved in debt and was obliged to sell his farm to clear himself. In 1816 he moved to Palmyra, Wayne Co., New York, and later to Manchester in the same state, where he again tilled the soil. He was a man six feet two inches high, very straight and well proportioned; in his young days he was strong and active and was famed as a wrestler. He was hospitable and benevolent, his home being always open for the entertainment of the stranger. When his son, Joseph Smith, Jr., organized the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints he was ordained as Patriarch.

36890. REV. THOMAS LAMB ELIOT, D.D. The History of the First Unitarian Church, by Rev. Earl Morse Wilbur, says :

“Thomas Lamb Eliot, pastor of the First Unitarian Church of Portland for the twenty-five years from its organization, was born in St. Louis, Missouri, October 13, 1841. He is the eldest son of Rev. William Greenleaf Eliot, D.D., LL.D., and Abigail Adams Eliot, and comes from a family in the various branches of which there have been many ministers. His father was the pastor of the Church of the Messiah (Unitarian) in St. Louis, from which he resigned in 1871, after a pastorate of nearly forty years, that he might devote his whole time to the duties which he had already long performed as Chancellor of Washington University, in St. Louis, of which he had been one of the founders. He was not only one of the leaders in the Unitarian denomination, but a man of great influence in the development of the city of St. Louis, an inspirer of its educational and philanthropic interests no less than pastor of one of its oldest and largest churches.

“Mr. Eliot received his preparatory and collegiate education at Washington University, from which he graduated in its first class in 1862, and from which he also received the degree of Master of Arts in 1865. His studies were interrupted midway of the course by failing eyesight; and in the hope of receiving benefit he undertook, in 1860, a voyage in a sailing vessel around Cape Horn to China. He experienced no improvement from the trip, however, and after a few weeks in California returned home from there, to continue his studies with eyesight so impaired that for months, while in college and Divinity School, he had to have his books read to him. After graduating from college, he was engaged for two years in the ministry-at-large in St. Louis, in charge of the mission house connected with his father's church, doing much work in its large Sunday school, and among the poor. During the same period he spent a part of his time as tutor in Latin and Greek in Washington University. In the early part of this period, also, he enlisted in the First Missouri Volunteers, was mustered in, and was in active service for some months, though never called out of the State.

“Even before entering college he had resolved to enter the Christian ministry, and though, on account of his weakened eyesight, he was discouraged from this purpose by all except Dr. Eliot, his father, he adhered to it, and after graduating from college studied more or less under his father’s direction. In further pursuance of his purpose he went, in the fall of 1864, to the Harvard Divinity School, where he completed the course the next year, having done two years’ work in one. Among his fellow-students there were Joseph May, now of Philadelphia; S. C. Beach, of Bangor, Maine; James Vila Blake, of Chicago; W. E. Copeland, of Salem, Oregon; H. G. Spaulding, of Newton, Mass.; and Charles C. Salter, since deceased. Having left the Divinity School in the summer of 1865, he supplied the pulpit of Rev. John H. Heywood, in Louisville, Ky., for several weeks, and then returned to St. Louis, where he was elected associate pastor of his father’s church. He was ordained there November 19, 1865. Rev. C. A. Staples, of Milwaukee, Wis., preached the sermon from the text, ‘Who is sufficient for these things?’ Rev. Dr. Eliot offered the ordaining prayer and gave the charge; and Rev. A. D. Mayo of Cincinnati, Ohio, gave the right hand of fellowship.

“He was married Nov. 28, 1865, to Henrietta Robins Mack, who has ever since shared with him the labors and honors of his work, and the love of the people to whom he has ministered. Soon after his marriage he spent several weeks in New Orleans, where he supplied the pulpit of the Unitarian church, as also again for two months in the spring of 1867. He retained his connection as associate pastor of the St. Louis church, however, until November, 1867, when he resigned to accept a call to the church then just organized in Portland, Oregon, with which he has ever since been connected. At about the same time he had received a formal call from the New Orleans church, and the very mail which brought him the call to the church in Portland, Oregon, also brought him a letter (practically equivalent to a call) inviting him to preach for six months in Portland, Maine, in the pulpit left vacant by the coming of Rev. Horatio Stebbins to San Francisco. It was not difficult for him to make the choice. Ever since his visit to the Pacific Coast, he had hoped that Portland, Oregon, might be the field of his life work. Starr King had said to him then, 'The Pacific Coast claims every man who has ever seen it.' and had pointed to Oregon and Washington Territory as the 'coming country' of Northwest America. The impression which he then received of the great opportunities for work which the Pacific Coast offered, he had never lost, and this determined him to accept the call to the western Portland. There would seem to have been almost a special providence in the events which finally led, though through devious ways, to the coming together of the newly formed church and its pastor, as there has surely been a continuous providence in the twenty-five years of uninterrupted harmony which has marked their relations with each other.

"Mr. Eliot, with his wife and infant son, left St. Louis in November, 1867, and came to Portland by way of New York and Panama. They arrived at their destination early on Tuesday morning, December 24, after a journey of forty days and forty nights, having rested for a few days with Rev. Mr. Stebbins in San Francisco. Mr. Eliot was at that time quite youthful in appearance, and was known for some years as 'the boy preacher'. But in the severe labor and bitter opposition that he and his church had to encounter during the next few years, he showed that he possessed the full powers of a man.

"His life, since the day of his arrival, is written on the history of the Portland church, which has constantly prospered and grown under his ministry. To his own character and influence is due very much of the influence and standing that his church has gained in the community. His work has never been narrowly confined to his particular parish or to his denomination. He has done more or less missionary preaching at various places in the Pacific Northwest, in which his church was for the most of the time during twenty years the solitary pioneer of Liberal Christianity.

"Besides strictly religious interests, he inherited from his father, and has bequeathed to his church, an earnest devotion to philanthropic and educational work of every kind. He has been the inspirer of several of Portland's most prominent institutions of philanthropy, and an earnest worker in behalf of almost all of them. His connection with the Children's Home, the Boys' and Girls' Aid Society of Oregon, and the Oregon Humane Society, of which he has been President for ten years, deserves especial mention. He rendered important service in securing for Oregon legislation establishing a State Board of Charities and Corrections, the first of its kind on the Pacific Coast. He seemed for many years almost the only person in Oregon enough interested in the reform of its disgraceful jails to do any active work for them. He has always been an earnest supporter of the temperance movement, and of Woman's Suffrage. After the great fire in Portland, on August 2, 1873, he was appointed one of the committee of five to distribute the citizens' fund of relief, and served in that capacity for several months. Being put forward by both political parties, he held the office of Superintendent of Schools in Multnomah County for two terms, from 1872 to 1875, and did much to bring order out of chaos in the public school system. For one who has never enjoyed robust health, the amount of work he has performed in his church, and outside of it, is remarkable. Ill health has thrice compelled him to leave his parish, once for more than a year, but the resignations which he tendered were not accepted.

"Dr. Eliot is an easy and polished speaker. He has little liking for religious controversy, but rather has a strong feeling of the essential unity of the Church Universal. He has been accustomed in his preaching to dwell most upon the positive virtues of Christian character, and has striven to develop the deepest religious life in his hearers. Churches and ministers who are farthest removed from his theology, respect and love him as a man. He has several times been invited to preach baccalaureate or other sermons in colleges under the control of Evangelical churches, and has been frequently offered exchanges by ministers of other denominations.

"Personally, he is scholarly in his tastes, and of a poetic temperament. He is uniformly courteous and kind to both friends and strangers, and though of a somewhat modest and retiring disposition, he never hesitates to assert his convictions when there is occasion to do so in any cause of humanity, good morals or pure government. During his long residence in Portland he has won the love of all people, and to no minister in the city are the poor, the outcast or the unchurched so likely to go for the offices of a minister, or for comfort or personal counsel, as to him. He has a wide reputation and influence throughout the Pacific Northwest among men of all ranks and classes, the weight of which has more than once been felt in legislative halls, in behalf of philanthropy and good government.

"In 1889, Harvard University, recognizing Mr. Eliot's long and valuable work in the Northwest, honored him with the degree of Doctor of Divinity, which was conferred (an unusual distinction) in his absence.

“Dr. Eliot’s family life has been singularly blessed. Of eight children, seven are living. The eldest is Rev. William G. Eliot, Jr., pastor of the Unitarian Church in Seattle, Washington.

“Having completed the honorable term of twenty-five years as pastor of one church, Dr. Eliot resigned his pastorate in January, 1893, desiring on account of uncertain health, to be free from the heavy obligations it imposed. He has been elected Pastor Emeritus, however, and purposes still to remain with the church, devoting to it as much of his time and strength as may seem desirable, while he will also feel more free to engage in philanthropic work, of which so much still remains to be done, and in which he feels so deep an interest.”

Mr. Smith during his recent trip suffered all sorts of hardships, including starvation, small-pox exposure, and a South American revolution.

"It reports that the present revolution interfered greatly with his work. It collected, however, 235 cases which he sent to the Carnegie museum of Pittsburg, for which institution he took the trip and where he will resume work. Mr. Smith states that his taste for tropical wandering has been entirely satiated. This may be doubted as Mr. Smith got his liking for this work on the famous Hart expedition which went to Brazil in the early years of the University."

"General John E. Mulford, who for a long time has been desirous of being relieved from the presidency and the active management of the Elmira & Seneca Lake railway, says the Free Press, has finally succeeded, his Philadelphia partners having reluctantly consented to his wishes. At a recent meeting his successor was elected and he was made vice-president and director. The general never had a desire to assume the active duties devolved in the management of the road. He was bound to build it, and build it he did. After this was accomplished he wished to resign. but those interested with him would not listen to it. However, his health made it imperative. His many friends are pleased to see him take the much needed rest. It was a long pull and a hard pull, but the general was equal to the occasion. He expects to leave for a sojourn in Florida shortly, in company with Mrs. Mulford."

48840. NORMAN EDWARD MACK. He was born July 24, 1854, in West Williams, Ontario, Canada. He married, Dec. 22, 1891, Harriet B. Taggart, of Buffalo, N. Y. He engaged in business pursuits in the West. Editor and publisher. He established the Sunday Times in Buffalo, 1879, and the Daily Times, 1883. Delegate to National Democratic Conventions, 1892, 1896, 1900. Member of Democratic State Committee. Member National Democratic Committee and of the Executive Committee, 1900.

“Men of New York” says of him :

“Norman E. Mack, editor and proprietor of the Buffalo Times, and widely known in western New York from his prominence in political life, was born in West Williams, Ontario, in 1856. His family left Canada when he was still a child, and took up their residence in Pontiac, Mich., in 1868. There Mr. Mack became a clerk in a business house. Both the mercantile knowledge and disciplinary training thus obtained were of great value in his important business undertakings later in life. After remaining in Pontiac four years, he availed himself of the greater opportunities of a large city by embarking in the advertising business in Detroit and Chicago. This was his first experience in newspaper work, and gave him an insight into a most important part of the publishing business.

“In 1874 Mr. Mack established himself in Buffalo. He had then been engaged in the advertising business two years and was well acquainted with many branches of the difficult subject. He continued, therefore, for several years to conduct various advertising enterprises in Buffalo. Many of these ventures had to do with the press, and gave him considerable experience in actual newspaper making, and by the year 1878 he felt able to enter the journalistic world as a publisher. Establishing the Chautauqua Lake Gazette, accordingly, at Jamestown, N. Y., he conducted the enterprise with fair success for some months; but in 1879 he received a favorable offer for the paper, and disposed of the property.

"In September of the same year Mr. Mack began his long career in Buffalo journalism by founding the Sunday Times. For a while the printing was done outside the office, and not until 1881 was the first press purchased for the new paper; while the first number of the Daily Times was issued Dec. 13, 1883. Since the latter date the paper has made marked progress in both circulation and advertising patronage. In 1886 additional space became necessary for dispatching the enlarged volume of business; and the Times building was secured and occupied. In June, 1887, a Hoe perfecting press was placed in operation; in 1892 another Hoe press, a counterpart of the first, was installed, and in 1895 a Goss 'three-decker' was added to the plant. In 1893 ten Mergenthaler lineotype machines were set up, in the composing room, superseding the old system of setting type by hand.

"Until 1884 the Times was independent in politics, but in the presidential campaign of that year it came out strongly for Cleveland, and has ever since supported the regular Democratic nominees. Mr. Mack has been very active in political affairs personally as well as journalistically, and has had an important part in the counsels of the Democratic leaders. He has been a delegate to various local and state conventions. He was one of the alternates to the Democratic National Convention of 1892, and was the New York member of the notification committee in that year. He represented his congressional district on the Democratic State Committee for two terms, declining a third term. Dear Sir—I have your letter of Dec. 11th, in relation to the Mack family. I notice the circular you send traces the Mack family to Scotland. The family with which I am connected descended from Alexander Mack, who came from Germany and was the founder of the Dunkards. You can find this by referring to the head of Dunkards in Encyclopædia Britannica. His son was Wm. Mack. His son, that is the son of Wm. Mack, was Alexander Mack, who died in this county in the '50's. The son of the last Alexander Mack was David Mack, my father, who died recently. If this family has any connection with what you are looking up and it will be of any service to you I can, by reference to an old family Bible, not here but which I can get at, give you more information. Yours respectfully,

---

The first ancestor of the Dey family of whom we have knowledge was Count Isarn de Die, Grand Maître De L'Ordre Teutonique, Seigneurs in France, Premiere Croisade, 1096, whose descendants left France, after the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and settled in Scotland, England and Holland. The will of Ralph Goodwyn of Northerlyngham, dated April 12, 1518, proved April 24, 1518, makes a bequest to his daughter, Margaret Dey, and her sons, Thomas and William Dey.

FIRST GENERATION.

RICHARD DEY OF NEW YORK CITY. (1641.)

62000. DIRCK JANSEN DEY. Dirck Janszen alias Siecken (Sichen, Sicken, Sycan, Zieken), alias Dirck Janse Dey, came from Amsterdam at an early date and settled in New Amsterdam, where he married, Dec. 2, 1641, Jannetje Theunis, who came from Amsterdam. He and John Reiger were soldiers in the service of the West India Company, and for insolent behavior towards citizens on the Heeren Street, and striking their superior officers were sentenced to be shot Feb. 21, 1647. He afterwards was pardoned and obtained from Gov. Stuyvesant, June 16, 1654, a patent for a plantation at Mingackqua, near Communipaw, N. J., which he sold Feb. 13, 1679, to Enoch Vreeland; and a patent for two parcels of land lying at Pembrepogh. He was admitted April 26, 1657, to the rights of a small burgher and was living in 1665 by the land gate. In 1677 Gov. Andross leased to him for thirty years the Duke's Bowery or farm, now belonging to Trinity Church, and after that date he lived upon the premises, and probably died there. He married (2nd),

Oct. 18, 1659, Geertje Jans (alias Langendyck) from St. Martens in North Holland. The will of Richard Dey, "living just without the city," is dated Dec. 5, 1683; proven July 11, 1693, some six or seven years after his decease: names his wife, Gertrude Johnson, and his two children. "The will of Dirck Jansen Dey being proved, Letters of Administration are granted to his widow, Geetie Jansen, July 11, 1693. Dirck Jansen Dey.—In the name of God, Amen. Know all men by these presents, that on the 5 of December, 1683, before me, Wm. Bogardus, Public Notary, in the presence of the underwritten witnesses, Dirck Jansen Dey, living just without this city, known to me, being sick abed." Leaves to his wife, Geetie Jansen, "All that land which at present lyeth to the south side of the house where the testator is dwelling; the rest of the premises are left, one-half to his wife, the other to his children, Teunis and Jeannettie. Letters of Administration granted to the widow, Geetie Jansen Dey, July 11, 1693." By his first wife he had John and Tunis and by his second wife Jane and Henry. He established a mill and ferry at the foot of Dey street in New York City which was named after the family. He resided on Broadway at the head of Dey street. His widow married, Nov. 11, 1687, Tunis Gisbertse, for his second wife. (See New York Historical and Genealogical Records. Vol. VIII. 1876-7. Pages 57 and 58.)

His widow married, Aug. 11, 1691, Joris Ryerson of the Wallabout, who removed to Acquackanonk, N. J. Teunis Dey owned at his death the fee of a lot of land lying without the city land gate, on the west side of the highway having to the north the farm of his Royal Highness, afterwards called the King's farm; on the south the land of Olof Stevenson (Van Courtlandt), containing five and a half acres, 309 feet front on Broadway and 800 feet deep to the Hudson River. In 1750 Dey Street was laid out through these premises.

New York Historical Society's Abstracts and Wills Collection, 1892, gives his will, and the granting of letters of administration, as follows:

FOURTH GENERATION.

62600. COL. THEUNIS DEY. (Dirck, Theunis, Dirck<sup>t</sup>.) 62201. He was born in 1725 (o. 1726), near Preakness, N. J. Colonel of the Bergen County Regiment, 1776. He built some years before the Dey house at Preakness, N. J., which house was for three months during 1780, the headquarters of Gen. Washington. He married, in 1751, Hester Schuyler (daughter of Philip Schuyler and Hester Kingsland [daughter of Hon. Isaac Kingsland, member of the Council, and Elizabeth Kingsland, of New Barbadoes Neck, N. J.], son of Arent Schuyler and Johanna Schuyler or Swan VanDuykhusen or Maria Schuyler, son of Philip Pieterse Schuyler, born 1628, the first of the name in this country, who married, Dec. 12, 1650, Margaret, daughter of Herr Brandt Arent VanSchlectenhorst, of Nieuw Kerk in Gelderland.) She was born April 12, 1725. Records at Trenton, N. J., say: Theunis Dey, (heir-at-law of Dirck Dey, deceased, of Bergen County), gives deed Nov. 19, 1770, to Peter Romer and others, trustees of the Low Dutch Reformed Church at Pompton. Witness, Ester Dey, Junior. Charter Trustee of Rutgers College." His will is dated Nov. 30, 1786; proved July 30, 1787. It is on record in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton, N. J. Colonel, Bergen County, New Jersey Militia, February 28, 1776; served to close of war; member of New Jersey Assembly, 1777-84; Member of Bergen County Committee of Correspondence during the Revolutionary War.

The New York Times, Illustrated Magazine, for Aug. 6, 1899, contained the following account of the Dey House, Washington's headquarters:

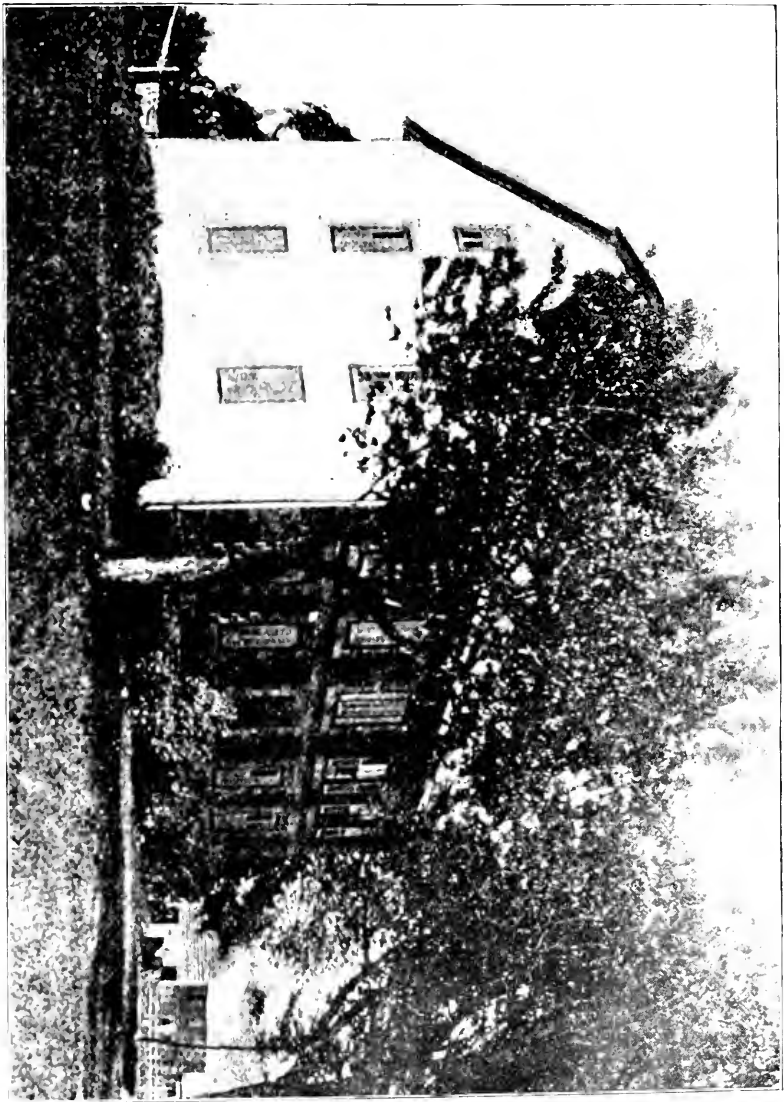

"About two miles from the bustling, modern town of Paterson, N. J., stands a house, which during the year 1780 was for three months the headquarters of Gen. Washington. It is beautifully situated in the midst of an undulating plain, bounded by the Preakness Mountain, the Passaic River, and First Mountain. Through the clefts in the hill lovely vistas of the far-reaching mountains may be seen.

“During the month of July, 1780, the American Army was encamped along the Totowa Heights near the Great Falls of the Passaic River. The camp extended for nearly seven miles from Wagraw on the left wing to Singack or Lower Preakness on the right. The advanced guard was below the Passaic and some miles from the headquarters. The grand parade ground was near the falls on the spot over which the Second Ward of the City of Paterson has been built. Among the officers who were with the army in camp were Lafayette, St. Clair, Lord Stirling, Knox and Lee. The house in which Lafayette had his headquarters was the residence of Samuel VanSaun, and was about one mile from the Dey House. When Lafayette revisited America in 1824-5 he passed the camp and saw that his soldiers had put up a board sign to designate the spot which had been his headquarters. For many years the remains of this camp could still be seen. The ovens which the soldiers had built for their baking were visible as late as forty years ago. Mr. William Nelson, writing in The Magazine of American History, mentions a tradition to the effect that Washington erected a look-out on the summit of a peak, from which he could obtain a clear view of the country for twenty miles, including New York, Newark, Elizabethtown, Haverstraw and Hackensack. Still another tradition asserts that he had ordered great masses of stone to be piled up on this hill to be rolled down upon the enemy if they attempted to force a way up the gap.

“The house used by Gen. Washington for headquarters belonged to Col. Theunis Dey of Saddle River. It is two stories in height with a gambrel roof, and is about 52 feet long and 30 broad. The front is of brick and brown sandstone. The sides and rear are of rubble-work, trimmed with brick. The walls are laid in yellow clay pointed with mortar, and even today are in perfect condition. All the timbers are of oak, of immense size and strength, and all fastened together by huge wooden pins. A large hall 12 feet wide runs through the middle of the building. On each side of this there are two rooms with fire-places faced with brown sandstone in each. The ceilings are 10 feet high, but in the second story they are only 8 feet. Our chief source of information as to what part of the dwelling was occupied by Gen. Washington, is the account left by a French nobleman, the Marquis de Chastellux, who visited the General while at Preakness. The Marquis traveled extensively in the United States during the years 1780-82, and published his recollections of his journeys some years later. (Voyages de M. Le Marquis de Chastellux dans l'Amérique Septentrionale dans les Années 1780, 1781, et 1782. Paris, 1786.) In November, 1780, he arrived at Preakness and soon after met Gen. Washington.

"It may be of interest to reproduce here his narrative of his reception by Washington and of what he saw while a guest at headquarters. On arriving at the house he recognized it as headquarters by 'a large tent in front and many carriages drawn up around'. He continues thus: 'M. de la Fayette was conversing in the courtyard with a large man of 5 feet 9 inches, of a pleasant and noble figure; it was the General himself. I had soon dismounted and was close to him. The compliments were short: the sentiment which animated me and the good will which he exhibited were not equivocal. He led me into the house, where I found some people still at table, although dinner had long been finished. He presented me to Gens. Knox, Wayne, Howe, &c., and to his 'family,' composed then of Cols. Hamilton and Tilghman, his secretary and aides de camp, and Major Gibbs, Commandant of his Guards: because in England and America the aides de camp, adjutants, and other officers attached to the General form what is called his family. A new dinner was brought to us and the former one was prolonged to keep me company. A few glasses of claret and Madeira quickened the acquaintances which I had to make, and I soon found myself at ease near the greatest and best of men. The goodness and kindness which characterize him are to be perceived in everything which surrounds him; but the confidence which he gives is never familiar, because the sentiment which he inspires has in all individuals the same origin—a profound esteem for his virtues and a high opinion of his talents. About 9 o'clock in the evening the general officers retired and went to their quarters, which were all far away; but as the General had wished that I should stay with him, I remained some time longer, after which he conducted me to a chamber, which formed a quarter of the lodging that he occupied. He made excuses on the little space of which he could dispose, but always with a noble politeness which was neither annoying nor complimentary.

“The next morning at 9 o'clock I was told that his Excellency had entered the parlor; this room served both for audience chamber and dining room, (for Washington only; the staff dined in the large hall). While we were breakfasting Gen. Washington ordered his horses to be brought up and the army to prepare for a parade.' After that they returned to headquarters for dinner. 'The repast was served in the English fashion, with eight or ten large dishes of meat and game, accompanied by several kinds of vegetables, and followed by a second course of pastry, comprised under the name of 'Pyes & Powding'. After these were served apples and many nuts, which the General usually eats for two hours, (in the words of the Marquis himself), tout en tostant et en faisant la conversation'. At 8 o'clock in the evening supper was served. In fact, it seems as if much of Washington's time must have been spent in eating. This meal consisted of 'three or four light dishes, some fruit and a great abundance of nuts, which were no worse received in the evening than in the morning.'”

“According to de Chastellux, Washington occupied four rooms in the Dey house. It is said that he had them papered at his own expense, and that the paper then put on remained until about twenty years ago.

“Col. Theunis Dey, the owner of the house, was the descendant of an old Dutch family of New York. In the records of the Reformed Dutch Church in New Amsterdam under the date of Dec. 28, 1641, is the marriage of 'Dirck Janszen, van Amsterdam en Jannetje Theunis'. Their son Theunis was baptized Sept. 24, 1656. In 1685 he married Anneke Schouten. He owned a farm of five and a half acres, 309 feet front on Broadway and 800 feet deep to the Hudson River, the farm being now intersected by Dey Street. His son was Dirck, who was 'of the County of Bergen,' and who bought in 1717 a tract of 600 acres in Singack Brook (near Preakness).

“His son Theunis was the proprietor of the house which he had probably built some years before. He was Colonel of the Bergen County Regiment in 1776, his son Richard (Dirck) Dey being Major in the same regiment. This Richard later became Sheriff of Bergen County and Major General of militia. In 1801 he sold the homestead, with 355 acres of land, for £3,000. Richard's son Anthony was one of the founders of Jersey City, and was for many years a prominent citizen of that place. The name of Dey has now disappeared from Preakness except for a solitary inscription on a crumbling stone in the family burying ground back of the house, which states that 'Here lies buried the body of Ann Dey, daughter of Theunis Dey and Hester Dey. She died Jan. 7, 1774, in the eighteenth year of her age'.

"The wife of Col. Theunis Dey was Hester Schuyler, daughter of Philip Schuyler and Hester Kingsland. This Philip Schuyler was the eldest son of Arent, son of Philip Pieterse Schuyler, the first of the name in this country.

"The large estate of the Deys at Preakness has been slowly reduced in size during the last hundred years, and hardly anything is left of the wide acres of field and wood which the family originally held. But the old house still stands in as good condition as when it was built, and is pointed to with pride by the antiquarians of the neighborhood as the house which was for months Washington's headquarters.

"MONTGOMERY SCHUYLER, JR."

The Magazine of American History for August, 1879, contains the following account of the same house:

"During the first three weeks of July, 1780, Washington had his headquarters at Preakness, New Jersey, lodging at the house of Colonel Theunis Dey. The main body of the army was encamped along the Totowa Heights, near the Great Falls of the Passaic river, Colonel Moyland's Pennsylvania Dragoons occupying an advanced position at the Little Falls, on the opposite side of the river, while the Marquis de la Fayette had his headquarters at the residence of Samuel VanSaun, near Sandford's race track, and about a mile from the Dey house.

"From October 9 until November 27, 1780, the army was again encamped at Totowa, evidently on the same site as during the preceding July; but as there was a greater array of troops at this time.

they covered a more extended area. Lafayette now held the left, his Light Infantry corps, formed in August, with Major Lee's Virginia Troop of Light Horse, occupying a small elevation on the extreme east, along the eastern bank of the Goffle stream, where it flows into the Passaic river, not far from the present suburb of Paterson, known as Hawthorne. He had his headquarters near the Ryerson homestead, Mr. Richard Degray's barn now occupying almost the precise site. On his left stretched a fine plain, for a mile, to the Wagraw neighborhood. When he revisited the United States in 1824-5, he passed through this locality and was amused to see that some of his former soldiers had remembered the old camp, and had put up a rough board sign to designate it, on the Goffle brook.

"The main army was encamped on a broad plateau stretching from the Passaic river perhaps half a mile, to the base of the Preakness mountain, and at an elevation of from fifty to one hundred and fifty feet above the river, so that it was admirably situated for defence. Several ample fields afforded fine opportunities for exercising the troops in military evolutions. The Grand Parade ground was near the Falls, the spot being now built over by the second ward of the city of Paterson, then undreamed of. The army was stretched along the base of the Preakness hills for a distance of six or seven miles, from Wagraw on the left wing to Lower Preakness, or Singack, as it is generally called, on the right. The advanced guard, consisting of Moyland's Dragoons and Major Parr's Rifle Corps, were stationed south of the Passaic river, the former near the Little Falls, to protect the approach from Newark and Elizabethtown from the west side of the First Mountain, as well as the road through the Great Notch, while the Rifle Corps occupied a broad ravine northeast of the Notch, in a position to command it, and also to patrol the roads leading into it from Acquackanonk and Newark. Although Major Parr's corps held this post less than two weeks, being then removed a mile or two further west, where he could protect the Cranetown Gap and the Notch at the same time, his former position is to this day known by the people in the neighborhood as 'The Rifle Camp'. Thirty or forty years ago, the remains were still plainly visible of the ovens built by the riflemen for their meagre baking. It is said that Washington caused a lookout to be erected on the summit of the peak on the east side of the Notch, whence he could obtain a clear view of the whole country for twenty miles or more, including New York, Newark, Elizabethtown, Haverstraw, Hackensack, etc. Tradition also asserts that he caused great masses of stones to be piled up on this hill, to be rolled down upon any troops that might undertake to force a passage through the gap.

“The General doubtless had pleasant recollections of his first stay at the Dey mansion, and therefore occupied it in October and November, when the army was again in the vicinity. It certainly was not at all convenient to the army: so remote, indeed, that he felt constrained to relieve the officers of the day from attending at headquarters ‘when there was nothing more than common to report’. General Knox, with his artillery, may have been within a mile or two of headquarters; the main body of the army was at least three or four miles distant, while Lafayette was seven or eight miles from Washington; Moyland’s Dragoons and Parr’s Riflemen were from two to four miles to the southwest. It is a common tradition in the neighborhood, and one borne out by contemporaneous records, that Washington had reason at this time to anticipate attempts to effect his capture; consequently, there was excellent cause for his keeping himself out of the reach of possible raids by Simcoe’s daring cavalry, or any other party that might seek to secure his person. His selection of camp ground and headquarters was well calculated to prevent surprise. The First Mountain formed a natural defence for his army; the Passaic river another; back of that arose a steep bluff, surmounted by the plateau already mentioned; then came the Preakness hill; over this range, in one of the most beautiful valleys, stood the dwelling of Colonel Dey. Charming vistas extended for many miles through the openings in the mountains in almost every direction, and the plain was traversed by roads leading to Newark, Elizabethtown, Springfield, Middletown and Southern New Jersey; to Totowa, Acquackanonk and Hackensack on the southeast, and Paramus, Pompton and Ringwood toward the northeast.

“A century ago, the building must have been one of the finest in New Jersey, for it is yet remarkable for its architectural symmetry and the artistic finish of the masonry. It is about one hundred yards from the main road, facing south; it is two stories in height, with a double pitch roof, through which a recent owner has pierced some windows, giving it the appearance of a mansard. The building is about fifty-two feet long, and about thirty feet deep. The front is of brick, the doorway and windows trimmed with polished brown sandstone, squared and set in the most accurate manner; the sides and rear are of rubble work, the windows and doors trimmed with brick, the sides above the eaves being carried up in brick. All the masonry is laid up in yellow clay, pointed on the outside with mortar, yet the walls are perfectly firm, and are apparently good for another hundred years. The timbers, where exposed, in the cellar and attic, are of hewn oak, of the most massive description, and all morticed and pinned with wooden pins. Through the centre, from south to north, runs a hall, twelve feet wide, on either side of which are two rooms, a fireplace faced with rubbed brown sandstone in each. The ceilings on the first floor are about nine feet, and on the second floor eight feet high. Nearly all the rooms are decorated with quaint old wooden cornices, grooved in a peculiar manner. According to the Marquis de Chastellux, Washington occupied four of the rooms—probably two on each floor. Tradition has mainly preserved reminiscences of one room—in the southeast corner of the first floor: this is pointed out as ‘Washington’s room’. It was his audience chamber and dining room; the family dined in the great hall. The space above the fireplace in the General’s office is ornamented with elaborate paneling and grooved woodwork, to correspond with the cornices. The walls, Washington is said to have had papered at his own expense, and the paper was not removed until about ten years ago. The account given by de Chastellux of his stay at this house in November, 1780, is one of the most entertaining passages in his exceedingly interesting ‘Travels,’ and the glimpse it gives of Washington at the table is charming.

“So far as is known, the British never attempted to molest the American troops at Totowa but once. Then a party of the Continentals who had been on a foray toward Acquackanonk, were chased by Hessians. They retreated successfully across the Totowa bridge, which they destroyed. The British followed, and in their eager haste attempted to wade through the river, here quite shallow, the officers mounted on the backs of the privates! A few volleys from the Americans on the opposite Heights checked their ardor, and they hastily retired.

“A few words may not be out of place regarding the Dey family.

In the records of the Reformed Dutch Church of New York we find the marriage on December 28, 1641, of 'Dirck Janszen, j. m. Van Amsterd, en Jannetje Theunis, j. d. als Voren'. The bachelor and spinster were both from Amsterdam. According to the Dutch custom, their first son was named Jan, after his paternal grandfather, and the second, baptized September 24, 1656, received the name of his maternal grandfather, Teunis. Among the same records we find, January 16, 1685, 'Teunis Deij, j. M., Van N. Yorck, en Anneken Schouten, j. d. als boven, beijde wonende alhier'. Teunis owned a farm of five and a half acres, 309 feet front on Broadway, and 800 feet deep to the Hudson River, the farm being now intersected by Dey street. He had a son Dirck, baptized in New York March 27, 1687. In 1717 (October 9), Dirrick Dey, 'of the County of Bergen in the Province of East New Jersey, yeoman,' bought for £120 of the heirs of Thomas Hart, one of the original Twelve Proprietors of East Jersey, a tract of land on the 'Singhack Brook,' containing 600 acres, 'besides ten in the hundred allowance for Barrens and highways'. In 1730, 'Dirick Dey of Pachgannick, yeoman,' for £50 bought of Peter Sonmans a triangular plot of 200 acres in the same neighborhood. He left a son Theunis, who probably erected the dwelling which Washington made his headquarters. He was a Colonel of the Bergen County Regiment of Militia in the early part of 1776, his son Richard (Derrick) being Captain in the same regiment, and afterwards Major. Theunis was in the New Jersey Assembly in 1776, and in 1779, 1780 and 1781 represented Bergen County in the Council, returning to the Assembly in 1783. In 1780, Mrs. Colonel (Theunis) Dey and Mrs. Major (Richard) Dey were appointed on the Committee of Bergen County Ladies to raise funds for the relief of the American troops. Soon after the war, Richard Dey was Sheriff of Bergen County, County Collector, General of Militia, and held other offices. In 1801 he sold his homestead, with 355 acres of land, to Garret Neafie and John Neafie, of New York City, for £3,000. The Deys have utterly disappeared from Preakness for nearly three-quarters of a century, and the very name of this once wealthy and powerful family is scarcely remembered in the region they once controlled. A son of Richard, Anthony Dey, was one of the founders of Jersey City, and for many years wielded great influence there. Others of the family removed early in the present century to Onondaga County, N. Y. Their once proud estate at Singack has passed through many hands during the last seventy years, and now the homestead, sadly shorn of its princely area, is owned by Dr. John M. Howe, of Passaic, N. J., but is only occupied by his farmer, more than half the house being vacant.

The same magazine for Sept., 1879, contains the following letter :

“The Dey house was built by Dirck Dey, father of Col. Theunis, in 1720. The children of Col. Theunis were all born there as well as those of his eldest son, Richard Dey, my grandfather, Anthony Dey, being his eldest child and recording the fact in the family Bible. At the death of Richard Dey, in 1811, his widow and family, with the exception of his eldest son, my grandfather, Anthony Dey, who resided in this city, removed to Seneca Co.—not Onondaga as Wm. Nelson says (Mag. III., 495) in his sketch of headquarters.

for the Erie Canal. President of the Society of the Cincinnati over thirty years. President of the American Bible Society at the time of his death. He died July 30, 1831, at Jersey City, N. J. He was one of the three founders of Jersey City.

Lossing's Field Book of the Revolution, says of him :

“Richard Varick was born at Hackensack, N. J., March 25, 1753; died in Jersey City, July 30, 1831. He was a lawyer in the City of New York when the war for independence began, and he entered the service as Captain in McDougall's Regiment. Soon afterwards he became General Schuyler's military secretary, and remained so until that officer was superceded by Gates in the summer of 1777, continuing with the army, with the rank of Colonel, until the capture of Burgoyne. Varick was Inspector-General at West Point until after Arnold's treason, when he became a member of Washington's military family, acting as his recording secretary, until near the close of the Revolution. When the British evacuated the City of New York (Nov. 25, 1783), Colonel Varick was made Recorder there, and held the office until 1789, when he became Attorney General of the state. Afterwards he was elected Mayor of New York, and held that office until 1801. He and Samuel Jones were appointed (1786) to revise the laws of the State of New York, and in 1787 he was speaker of the Assembly. Colonel Varick was one of the founders of the American Bible Society. In person he was over six feet in height, and of imposing presence.”

John Schuyler's History of the Society of the Cincinnati in New York, says of him :

“At the time of his birth his parents were living at Hackensack, N. J. When the Revolution broke out, he having been practicing his profession, the law, in New York City, joined the army in 1775, and was appointed a Captain in the 1st New York Continental Infantry, under Colonel McDougall. On the 10th of April, 1777, being at that time the Military Secretary of Gen. Schuyler, Congress conferred upon him the position of Deputy Muster-Master General of the Northern Department, with the rank of Lieutenant Colonel, and he was on duty organizing and keeping up the quotas as far as possible to their full standard, and preparing the requirements necessary to impede the advance of Gen. John Burgoyne, who had already made such a formidable entrance to the state by way of Lake Champlain. He was present at his final total defeat and surrender at Gen. Schuyler's headquarters at the confluence of the Fish-Creek and the Hudson, near where the aqueduct of the Champlain Canal now stands. In the following year the office having been abolished, he acted as Inspector-General at West Point on the staff of Gen. Arnold, until after the discovery of his meditated treason, when Washington took him into his 'military family' as Recording Secretary of his official and private correspondence, which position he held during the war. He accepted the office of Recorder of the City of New York in 1783, and in the next year was elected a member of the State Legislature, when, with Samuel Jones, he was appointed to revise the Statutes of the State, issued in 1789. He presided as Speaker of the Assembly in 1787 and 1788. Appointed Attorney General in May, 1789, and the following September elected Mayor of New York, which office he retained until Edward Livingston succeeded him in 1801. He was President of the New York Society of the Cincinnati from 1806 until his decease, which occurred at his residence in Jersey City, upon which occasion the society issued the general order to attend his funeral from the Dutch Church, corner of Cedar and Nassau Streets, wearing the usual badge of mourning for thirty days, at the same time expressing the following sentiments: 'That his courtesy and kindness to the members, his liberality to such of the descendants of deceased members as needed it, and his attachment to this Institution, can never be forgotten.'"

63550. HON. SIMEON DEWITT. (Dr. Andrew DeWitt.) He was born Dec. 25, 1756, in Ulster County, N. Y. He married (1st), Jane Varick. 62620. He was one of the foremost public men of his time in the State of New York. He owned at one time all the land where the City of Ithaca, N. Y., now stands.

John Schuyler's History of the Society of the Cincinnati in the State of New York, says of him :

"He was born Christmas, 1756, in Ulster County, N. Y. He with fourteen others signed the articles of Association at Rochester, Ulster Co., N. Y., July 6, 1775, his father being chairman. While at Queen's College, New Brunswick, N. J., he enrolled in a company composed of its students, and when it was broken up by the capture, he went to reside with his uncle, Gen. James Clinton. He joined the line of the Continental Army as a volunteer and was present at the surrender of Burgoyne. Washington selected him as Assistant Geographer of the army from 1778 to 1780, when he was appointed by Congress, Dec. 4, 1780, its Geographer. He continued in that capacity and as Chief of Typographical Engineers, in the place of Col. Erskin, who resigned and returned to Europe, till the close of the war. He was present at Yorktown, giving effective service both there and on the march. His military maps and surveys were of great assistance to Washington. Honorably discharged the service on the 3d of November, 1783. The next year he was appointed Surveyor-General of the State of New York, and served as such till his decease. He surveyed public lands in that state, a work of great labor and importance, and compiled them in 1804 in his valuable State map. It is claimed that he did not avail himself of his knowledge of these lands by the purchase of an acre when they were sold. He also superintended the survey of the Erie Canal. He was one of the Commissioners to settle the position of the State line between New York and Pennsylvania. He was Regent of the University from 1798, Vice Chancellor from 1817, and Chancellor from 1829. The 'Elements of Perspective,' published at Albany in 1813, was one of his many useful and ingenious essays. He was accepted to be what Dr. T. Romeyn Beck, his eulogist, described him, 'A patriot, a soldier and a Christian'."

C. F. Mulks in the Ithaca Journal of Dec. 26, 1896, says of him :

"Gen. Simeon DeWitt, the proprietor and founder of the village, now the city of Ithaca, was of both Dutch and Huguenot ancestry. He was a descendant of the fourth generation of a Dutch emigrant from Holland who settled on Manhattan Island during the administration of Peter Stuyvesant, the last of Dutch governors of New York. His name was Tjerck Claussen DeWitt. A brother and sister also emigrated from Holland at or about the same time, the brother dying within a few years unmarried. Emigrant DeWitt was married at New Amsterdam (now New York City) in 1656, and five years after had left there and settled at Kingston, on the Hudson river, and from him have descended the numerous and well-known DeWitt family of Ulster county. As a family clan they were staunch patriots in the American Revolution on both civil and military lines. Seventeen of them signed the Association pledge in the town of Rochester, Ulster county alone and many others in the towns of the county. This was a pledge to support the measures of the Continental Congress and of the provincial legislature of New York in opposition to the acts of the British ministry until a reconciliation could be effected between the colonies and the British parliament on constitutional principles. It antedated the Declaration of Independence a year. Similar pledges were circulated and signed in all the towns of this state and of the thirteen original states. The signers were called 'associators' and five of the seventeen in Rochester were Dr. Andries DeWitt and his four sons, one being Simeon, then about nineteen years of age.

"There are to be found the names of twenty DeWitts on the Revolutionary army rolls of this state, and in all ranks from privates to captain and major. They were one of the most patriotic families all through the Revolution. Two of Gen. DeWitt's uncles were commissioned officers: Jacob Rutzen DeWitt, who was a captain of the company of rangers which bore his name and formed part of Clinton's brigade, and Thomas DeWitt, a major who was with his regiment in the famous Sullivan expedition as the town-destroyers of the Six Nations of Indians of New York in 1779. He was also an officer in the winter expedition and campaign to Canada to attempt the capture of the fortress of Quebec, a campaign of great fatigue, suffering and of ultimate disaster and failure.

"The father of General DeWitt was Dr. Andries DeWitt, who was chairman of the provincial town committee of Rochester in the Revolution, and was for fifty years a practicing physician of his native county of Ulster. He died at New York in 1799 at the age of seventy-two. His mother was Jannetje Vernooy, which is the name of one of the Huguenot families of Ulster county, numbers of whom settled through the central and southern portion of that county about the time of the English succession in New York.

"Simeon was the sixth in a family of fourteen children, but large families were quite fashionable in those times. He was born in 1756. He was educated at Rutgers College, New Jersey, and everything about him would seem to indicate an early taste and predilection for the mathematical and exact sciences. His aunt was the wife of General James Clinton and this relationship undoubtedly gave him in younger years and in middle life the influential assistance and aid of one of the most powerful and dominant families in the state of New York for half a century. The Clinton family numbered in its ranks, two generals, two governors, a vice-president of the United States, senators, mayors, etc. He was a private in the army which captured Burgoyne at Saratoga, the most important battle of the Revolution, and which Creasy classes as one of the 15 decisive battles of the world, because had the result been different the American cause would have been lost irretrievably and the history of this country for all time would have been different from what it has been. Gen. DeWitt was in the Southern campaign, which captured Cornwallis, as an officer on Washington's staff. He was thus an eye-witness to the surrender of two British armies in the War of the Revolution, the one at Saratoga and the other at Yorktown, Va.

"He was first appointed Surveyor General in May, 1784, when he was in his 28th year, by the council of appointment, consisting of the governor and four senators; and held the office by virtue of this appointment till February, 1823. The new constitution made this and other high offices of the state elective by the legislature and in compliance with its requirements a new election became necessary. Party politics ran very high at the time between the Clintonian and Bucktail parties, the latter being the adherents of Daniel D. Tompkins. Hammond in his Political History of New York thus speaks of this election:

"The legislature on the 13th of February, nearly unanimously appointed Jno. V. N. Yates, secretary of state, Wm. L. Marcy, comptroller, Simeon DeWitt, surveyor general and Alex. M. Muir, commissary general. The selection of these gentlemen had been before made in caucus. At no period before or since, has caucus law been more acquiesced in, and more promptly enforced than the present. Whatever were the bickerings and heat manifested before, or at the caucus, after that potent assembly had decided, no man dared scarce whisper a complaint, no 'dog moved his tongue'. But in truth the dominant party experienced very little difficulty in agreeing to support these gentlemen. There was no controversy except in relation to the offices of surveyor general and comptroller.

"Mr. DeWitt venerated for his learning and age, and beloved for his quiet deportment and unostentatious benevolence, was a Clintonian. Under the various revolutions of parties he had held the office of surveyor general about forty years, and such was the respect felt for his character, that even Judge Skinner's council [of appointment] had not ventured to disturb him. On this occasion, however, his re-appointment was opposed in caucus and an opposition candidate named. But a very considerable majority of the Democratic members present, much to their credit, refused to sanction the claims of the opposing candidate. Mr. DeWitt was therefore re-appointed but his salary was reduced."

"He continued to hold the office till his death, a period of fifty and a half years. The duties were not those of a practical surveyor in the field but were executive, directory and supervisory, and during the early years of his incumbency related largely to the two military tracts, one in the central and the other in the northern part of the state: and to the sale of such remnants of these as by operation of law reverted to the state and the proceeds became a part of the common school fund.

"On the first of November, 1789, Abraham Bloodgood, then a merchant of Albany, filed in the secretary of state's office a certificate of location for 1,400 acres of land lying near the south end of Cayuga Lake. His patent for it was issued on the 17th of the same month. This land includes the City of Ithaca lying west of Tioga street. There are evidences in the earliest title deeds of this vicinity that although Bloodgood was the legal claimant and patentee he was not the original locator of the tract. In these it is described as 'Zeelie's location of 1,400' and the location of Martinus Zeelie, and there are references to trees marked 'M. Z.' Three years after the issuance of the patent (which is a state deed) to Bloodgood, the latter on December 1, 1792, for 500 pounds of New York currency sold to Simeon DeWitt by lease and release, an old form for transferring uses in possession, the whole 1,400 acre tract or location. The land in the Bloodgood-DeWitt transfer is described as 'situated in the county of Tioga near the south end of Cayuga Lake' and the initial point of which was 'at an elm tree marked M Z standing at the side of a brook that empties in the said lake,' and was in a square form as all locations by law had to be. The date of the Bloodgood claim and patent was about five years after his son-in-law, Mr. DeWitt, had become surveyor general and was about nine months after the title of Cayuga tribe of Indians had been extinguished.

"Mr. DeWitt, at a later date, sold off from the south end of the tract, four hundred acres to his brother-in-law, Francis A. Bloodgood, being that part lying south of Clinton street.

"This was the beginning of Mr. DeWitt's proprietary interest in this valley. At a somewhat later date he obtained tax-titles to several small parcels of land lying along the east side of East Hill and which now form a portion of the campus, perhaps nearly or quite all of it. He also in time became the owner of the Markle and Johnson farms on the flat and with these he was, at the beginning of the century, the owner of this valley almost from hill top to hill top east and west across the flat.

"As the founder of the village, now city, of Ithaca, probably all has been written already that would be of interest to this generation. His home was at Albany, but for a great many years before his death he made annual visits here prolonging his stay for months at a time, but returning to the capitol city with the approach of winter. The winter of 1834 he staid and occupied apartments at the Clinton House, where his death occurred early in December in the northeast corner room of the third floor, being in his 79th year. During his stay at the Clinton about the last weeks of his life, in reply to a question by a young friend as to why he selected Ithaca in his earlier life, he said: 'The place looked to me so charming that I could not select a better place for a home; the view from the hills interested me. The gravel site was a spot that could be made good and I like it.'

"In referring to the death of Gen. DeWitt, Hammond in his history of New York, pays the following splendid tribute to his noble and useful life:

"In December (1834) Simeon DeWitt, surveyor general, at an advanced age departed this life. He had held the office of surveyor general uninterruptedly for the space of fifty years. His merits as a citizen, a philanthropist, a friend and a patron of the arts and sciences and as an able and faithful officer, I need not mention. They are known and universally acknowledged. What is most singular, and what indeed is the highest evidence of his personal worth and official merit, is that, although he always openly and frankly avowed his political opinions, and although he frequently belonged to the party which was in the minority no party during the lapse of half a century ventured to remove him.'

"Gen. DeWitt was three times married. His first wife was Elizabeth Lynnot, a step-daughter of Abraham Bloodgood of Albany, and half-sister of Judge F. A. Bloodgood of Ithaca. His second was a widow Hardenburg, whose maiden name had been Varick. She was very likely a near relative of Colonel Richard Varick, an early mayor of New York City, as Gen. DeWitt named one of his sons after that gentleman, an old custom with Dutch families. His third and last wife was a sister of Wm. Linn so well known in Ithaca a generation ago and whose father was a distinguished clergyman and is said to have been a chaplain in the Revolutionary army. He survived her also several years.

"Gen. DeWitt's will was made during his last stay in Ithaca and about three months before his death. It was probably written by Judge Amasa Dana, who with Dr. Samuel P. Bishop and Dr. Austin Church were the attesting witnesses. His friend, Charles Broadhead, of Albany, and his son, Richard Varick DeWitt, were the executors, the latter being made guardian of the younger children during their minority.

"Among the mementoes given his children three portraits of himself are specifically mentioned, one by Ames and one by Inman and a miniature portrait by Dickerson. Also a Cincinnati badge of which society he was a member and to which his descendants are eligible to membership for all time. Would not one of these portraits of the founder and sponsor of this city be of historic interest to Ithaca?"

Winfield's History of Hudson County, N. J., says of him :

“He was a lineal descendant of one Derrick Dey, who came to New York City from Holland in 1640, and established a mill and ferry at the foot of Dey street in that city. At the age of sixteen years Anthony came to the city and studied law in the office of his cousin, Colonel Richard Varick, to whose influence and connection he probably owed his early success in the practice of his profession, for he became a very successful and wealthy lawyer. He was also a very energetic, industrious and persevering man. He made it a rule through life to ignore political preferment, and never held any office, but was nevertheless, foremost in everything that could be called a public improvement, especially in Bergen County, or that part of it now called Hudson County. He was the owner of large tracts of meadow land lying between Hackensack and Passaic rivers, and during a long life made their improvement his particular interest and hobby. He was a director for many years of the New Jersey railroad, the owner, at one time, of the entire tract of land now known as East Newark, and for many years expended large sums of money in the introduction and improvement of blooded stock, both horses and cattle. He died in 1859 at his residence in what is now a part of Jersey City, at a good old age."

He was born June 20, 1783, at Haverhill, N. H. He married, Nov. 20, 1817, Jane Dey. 63070. Lawyer. District Attorney of Tompkins County, N. Y. Supervisor of the Town of Ithaca, 1826. President of the Village of Ithaca, 1825. Director in the Newburgh Branch Bank at Ithaca.

The History of Four Counties, so-called, says of him:

“His early education was chiefly derived from the common schools, and was supplemented by a little academic training. He had a decided inclination to the law, and as a preparation for that profession entered as a student the law office of Foote & Rumsey of Troy, N. Y., where he and John A. Collier, who was then a student in the same office, pursued their studies together. The two subsequently, at Binghamton, N. Y., formed a law partnership, which was, however, of short duration. For a while thereafter Mr. Johnson resided in Hector, Schuyler Co. (then Cayuga), with the Richard Smith who became first judge of common pleas for Tompkins County, upon its erection in 1817, and held sessions alternately at his residence in Hector and at the Columbian Inn at Ithaca. Mr. Johnson came to Ithaca some years before his marriage, and opened a law office on Aurora Street, where he pursued his profession single-handed until near the year 1819, when he became associated with Charles Humphrey, and continued that connection for a number of years. He was a partner of Henry S. Walbridge, and later of Anthony Schuyler. Mr. Johnson was one of the staunchest members of the Ithaca bar. Erudite, of logical mind, and possessed of rare powers in debate, his efforts before the courts where he practiced always challenged attention and often admiration. Dry humor and sarcasm were allies always at his command, and, upon occasion, used. An indefatigable worker, he kept scrupulously within the bounds of his vocation, concentrating his mental and physical strength upon the cases in hand, from which the temptations of office could not lure him. His intellect, cool and penetrating, sped its shafts straight to the mark, undiverted by the false and immaterial. His nature was social, genial, though quiet and undemonstrative, revealing at times a slight eccentricity of manner, the habit of a mind preoccupied by engrossing subjects connected with his practice."

The Ithaca Daily Journal of March 26th, 1900, contained the following reminiscence of him from the pen of a noted local historian :

"The Tompkins bar of 1835 numbered twenty-five members, counsellors and attorneys-at-law. That of 1900 has seventy-five, though a few of the latter are not now in active practice as lawyers.

"In looking through the list of sixty-five years ago as printed in the N. Y. Law Register of 1835 two well remembered names are both prominent and conspicuous. They are Ben Johnson and Charles Humphrey. They both came here at about the same period which was the decade which witnessed the beginning and close of the War of 1812-15. It was at this period that Ithaca first began to be a stirring and thriving village and young men of the professions and mechanic and mercantile pursuits would be attracted to it. Ten years before or about 1800, it had been a hamlet of a dozen or more log houses scattered over the flats and along the sides of East and South hills, a sort of back woods settlement.

“Ben Johnson came from New Hampshire, but may have located briefly at Troy, N. Y., before coming here to locate permanently and grow up with the place in the practice of his profession. He was here as early as 1818 and had an office on north Aurora Street about where McGaugh's liquor store now is. He bought of General DeWitt a lot on Seneca Street and built a home, still standing and but little changed. His brother-in-law, Ebenezer Mack, built next adjoining, they had married sisters by the name of Dey. Mr. Johnson continued in active practice of the law till his death a period of near thirty years. He is said to have been a tall, not very stout man with a slow reserved manner. He was unquestionably as reliable a man in the knowledge and understanding of law as any one of his time. He had a slow, yet an attractive way before a jury that especially on matters of property carried his cases to success. He was an active, useful member of the Presbyterian Church and a man of good influences in what pertained to the community. Ben Johnson from ability, age and experience concededly stood at the head of the Tompkins County bar from 1830 to his death in the latter part of the forties. He certainly enjoyed a great reputation as a lawyer in the old sixth circuit bar which numbered among its members such eminent men as Daniel S. Dickinson, John A. Collier, William H. Seward, Joshua A. Spencer.

“C. F. MULKS.”

The Ithaca Daily News of April 24, 1899, contained the following about him, taken from the Watkins Democrat :

“While at the Ithaca Academy, for two years, when court was in session, we often attended doubtless to the detriment of our studies, to hear the lawyers wrangle. Tompkins County was then thought to have the largest number of good (and some eminent) lawyers of any county in the State, barring the great cities. Ben Johnson, Charles Humphrey, Wm. Linn, Geo. D. Beers, Stephen B. Cushing, Judge Hubbell, Samuel Love, Geo. G. Freer, and an eccentric old gentleman by the name of Stockholm, were the most prominent.

“Johnson, from ability, age and experience, stood at the head of bar. Beers, then a young man of great promise, was often employed against Johnson. Perhaps no man living or dead was ever endowed or ever will be with such unmitigated assurance, and on occasion with such colossal impudence as George D. Beers. He would frequently pitch into Johnson, like a sky-terrier into a mastiff—and sometimes get the best of him. When he addressed the jury first he would steal Johnson’s thunder somewhat as follows: ‘Gentlemen, you are now to be addressed by my distinguished opponent. He has, gentlemen, somehow obtained a great reputation and chiefly I think, by stating his propositions with such assurance and gravity that the unsophisticated are quite inclined to regard them law, when the fact is, in many instances, there is no warrant for his statements in any law books ever published. I will not say that he means, at such times to deliberately lie, but gentlemen, he does it to keep up his reputation and increase the number of his clients. You will do well, therefore, to accept whatever he may say with many grains of allowance.’ He would then take his hat and leave the Court House.

“With something like this and doubtless studied variations, he finally roused the tiger in Johnson, and the old veteran rose as Beers was leaving court and said: ‘Gentlemen, there he goes as usual like that other little spotted animal which, after squirting its liquid runs to escape its effluvia.’ He then for about ten minutes everlastingly basted and roasted Beers and gave due notice that he would skin and dissect him to the best of his ability every time he ejected his dye stuff and then left court. Thereafter Beers faced the music and treated the old gentleman with more consideration.

“While Beers had the most phenomenal impudence, Cushing had the most extraordinary volubility. A phonograph operated by steam would give some idea of his marvelous fluency of speech. He would say more in thirty minutes than the average lawyer in three years. After one of his addresses to the jury Johnson followed and said: ‘Gentlemen, my little friend (Cushing was small) seems to run to words—and he has it bad, and it seems constantly growing worse.

You are fortunate, gentlemen, in getting to the end of his discourse. Should his disease continue some future jury will be doomed to hear a whole dictionary. It would seem there ought to be some astringent specific to his case. But then, gentlemen,' he added reflectively, 'I doubt if there is anything in nature that can stop him.' We shall never forget the solemnity with which he closed his address to the jury in the case of Graham, whom he convicted of murder: 'Gentlemen, you have now a solemn, but an imperative duty to perform. Courts and juries are the guardians of life, liberty and property of every citizen. The prisoner at the bar has been shown to be the greatest criminal and has thus incurred the severest penalty known to our laws. Without any provocation he has slain his fellow man. He is thus a rotten branch, a dangerous, wild beast ready to rend any member of society and it is your duty, not to be regarded as painful, but with alacrity and without regret to cut him off.'"

At the time of her death the Ithaca Journal said :

"The funeral of Mrs. Ben Johnson took place this afternoon from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. B. Sprague. Jane Dey was born August 29, 1798, eighty-three years and one month before the day of her death. Sixty-four years ago she came to Ithaca as the bride of Ben Johnson. For the past thirty-three years she has lived here as his widow. She bore her husband eleven children, of whom two died in infancy, and one, Eleanor, wife of Anthony Schuyler, died in 1849, leaving four children, of whom the two survivors, with their father, attended their grandmother's funeral. The other eight—Mrs. Orson Bostwick, Mrs. Charles P. Dibble, Jesse Johnson, Mrs. Charles Swan, Mrs. Joseph B. Sprague, Charles Dey Johnson, William G. Johnson and Mrs. Charles M. Titus—were all among the mourners of their mother today. Eight grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren, the children of Hermon V. and Emily Dibble Bostwick, also followed the remains, and there are two other great-grandchildren, one the son of Montgomery and Katherine Livingston Schuyler, of New York, and one the son of Charles A. and Julia Barry Dibble, of St. Paul. The husband of Mrs. Johnson's eldest daughter walked at the head of her coffin, and the husband of her youngest daughter at its foot, and it was borne to burial by her three sons and three of her grandsons.

“This chronicle would of itself give a significance in a manner historical to the closing of the life to which the lives of thirty-four living descendants, of three generations, are traced back. But to those who knew Mrs. Johnson, the extrinsic significance of her life and of her death is trivial compared to the impression which abides with them of the intrinsic power and beauty of her character. Fulfilling always and to the utmost through the long years of her activity every duty, religious, social and domestic, which was imposed upon her, her mourning friends will look back with even more tender feelings to the years which were allotted to her after the activities of her life were over. In these years, the calm afternoon of her long day, a respite seemed to have been granted her that she might serve to those who had grown up about her as a precious and beautiful example of patience and of repose. ‘Beaming in mildest mellow splendor; beaming, if also trembling, like a sun upon the verge of the horizon, near now to its long farewell,’ she stayed and shone during these latter years, and ‘the light of her countenance’ was to those about her neither an unmeaning nor an extravagant expression. Of a noble beauty in her youth and in the years of her maturity, her beauty remained in her extreme age. The rare union of sweetness and dignity made hers a most winning as well as a most impressive presence. To the last her mind retained its clearness and its poise and her character its radiant attractiveness. No sign of querulousness ever marred the tranquility with which she bore the burden of her many years and of her many bodily infirmities throughout her serene and beautiful old age. She has died tended to the last by the most affectionate ministrations and accompanied to the last by

That which should accompany old age
As honor, love, obedience, troops of friends, and she has left the world better for her having been in it for those who are to follow her.”

Brigadier General in the State Militia, 1826.

At the time of his death the Albany Journal said of him :

“Richard Varick DeWitt, known to all men who have been long resident of this city, Albany, N. Y., and loved and respected by all to whom he was known, died this morning after a long illness. From his very boyhood he was marked for the purity, uprightness, amiability and we may say the religiousness of his character. Descended from those who were distinguished for intelligence and virtues, his outset in life was attended by every circumstance that promised worldly success and happiness, and although he subsequently encountered troubles and reverses that greatly changed the aspect of his life, they never impaired the fine qualities of his nature. Inheriting his father's scientific taste he always took a warm interest in all scientific institutions and in all mechanical improvements and enterprises of his time and gave to them in his active years much of his time and fortune. He was of the founders of the Albany Lyceum and afterwards of the Albany Institute. Through all his many years of failing health and suffering, he ever preserved the original sweetness and serenity of his disposition and elevated as it was by the religions and convictions which had been the rule and comfort of his life. He has gone from us leaving to us all a good and enduring remembrance."

The Albany Argus said :

"Richard Varick DeWitt. This venerable citizen died last Friday morning at his residence in Albany, after a lingering illness. Mr. DeWitt lived a long and useful life, and died respected and beloved by all who knew him. He was a gentleman of great purity of life, and of scientific tastes and attainments. To promote these pursuits, he became one of the founders of the Albany Lyceum, and afterwards of the Institute, in which he retained a deep interest to the day of his death. He was also identified with various religious enterprises, and for more than a quarter of a century was a faithful member of the Middle Dutch Church. Inheriting a large fortune from his father, Simeon DeWitt, for many years surveyor-general of the State, he dispensed it liberally in the promotion of works of improvement, in railroads and steamboats, and in testing mechanical inventions that promised to be useful to mankind. Mr. DeWitt was sixty-eight years of age."

Another Albany newspaper said.

"On the 7th inst., Richard Varick DeWitt departed to a better world. He was born at the beginning of the present century, in this city, which then and for some time subsequently, was truly the Capital of this State and the centre of its culture, fashion and politics—a position of which Albany, in common with many other towns in this country, has been in a measure deprived by the overshadowing growth and progress of New York. He was descended from a family, which numbers in its ranks of soldiers and civilians, John DeWitt, Grand Pensionary of Holland, a statesman who raised his country to a pitch of greatness. The association of his father, Simeon DeWitt, and his uncle, Richard Varick, both distinguished officers of the Revolution, brought him in contact early in life with many of the eminent men who then flourished, and afforded him frequent opportunities of personally noting their virtues and characteristic qualities. His anecdotes and recollections of Governor Morris, the elder Livingstons, DeWitt Clinton, Kent, Spencer, General Armstrong, and many well known citizens, North and South, were very interesting. He graduated at Union College and after the usual preparatory study in the office of the late Harmanus Bleecker, afterward U. S. Minister at the Hague, was called to the bar. The possessor of a large estate of which a considerable portion of the village of Ithaca formed a part, and a favorite in and fond of society, his inclinations led him to literary and artistic pursuits as well as the cultivation of exact sciences. The designs and plans of buildings he has left behind him, show a careful study of good models, a correct eye for proportions and a familiarity with the principles of architecture, while his sketches and paintings in water color and oil are spirited and true to nature. He was a patron of the old Albany Library and one of the founders of the Albany Institute. He established and maintained a line of steamboats on the Cayuga Lake, which were in their day considered to be models of speed, comfort and safety. Through his exertions, and chiefly with his means, the Ithaca & Owego Railroad was constructed (one of the earliest lines in this State), and when the financial disasters of 1837 occurred, he lost his property by the forced sale of this road for a trifling part of its cost. Not long afterward he suffered the loss of his beloved wife (a daughter of the late Dudley Walsh), a lady of great worth and very attractive in person, mind and manner. He was Vice-President, and during the absence of Governor Fish in Europe acting President of the State Cincinnati Society. Many New Yorkers will remember with pleasure the dinner of the Society at the Everett House, at which he presided, and when the late Senator Crittenden of Kentucky, spoke so eloquently. He, in connection with the late Mr. W. C. Miller, established the first of the Sunday schools in Albany, and through life and in every way exhibited a deep interest in their success. He was for many years an elder in the Middle Dutch Church, and was ever active in good works and zealous in the promotion of religion and virtue. There are many persons now living who can never forget his frequent acts of kindness. No changes of life or adverse depressing influences ever destroyed that natural buoyancy, geniality and vivacious bon homme which he possessed in a marked degree. These qualities ever attracted to him the young, who enjoyed his society and profited by his example and advice, while his extensive reading, long observation of men and manners, his delicate humor and great refinement, threw a charm over his converse with people of all ages. In short, it may truly be said that in his unobtrusive kindness, his humble estimate of himself, his reliance for support on a higher power; in his unselfish regard for the welfare of all, his charity, his acts of forgiveness; in his consistent life and peaceful death he displayed in a marked degree, the attributes of a Christian gentleman. In the immediate circle of his family and relatives his loss has created an aching void which can never be filled, while his friends will ever cherish with mournful pleasure the remembrance of his many virtues."

Another Albany newspaper said:

"In the death of Richard Varick DeWitt Albany loses a citizen of the highest tone of character, a gentleman whose Christian life the church recognized and the world acknowledged. The son of the Surveyor-General DeWitt; to whose worth of public service General Washington bore testimony: all his life knowing only the associations of a gentleman: of extraordinary zeal in science; with the intelligence and large thought of one who looked throughout all his days to see the good that there was in life, less for him to enjoy than to communicate to others: meeting the night and day of Providential allotment with gentle thought of content, he was everywhere a cherished and respected man. His name would have been among the first to come to the utterance when these citizens were called upon to present a thorough gentleman and a consistent Christian.

"These are not words lightly used; but, rarely as they may ever be used truthfully, in that case they are just record. We go to his grave with that grief the shadow of which is for the living. He was faithful to his high principle, and honored his name and his city.

"The Reformed Dutch Church in Beaver Street, of which he was for a lifetime a living, earnest member, has in its record many a name, imperfectly written, it may be, in those creations of dust which we call rank and riches, but brilliant in that record which is on high. It has a hallowed rolc of sainted men and women, and in these has a treasure beyond all defiance of earthly loss. Amidst these names this faithful Christian gentleman has welcome. Some of those who best knew him loved him best. In that company of good men to which that church holds inestimable title, his memory will remain, and the succession of usefulness his life begun the recollections of him shall make endearing, and the more from the fact that he never, with the higher life, forgot the comities and courtesies of hereditary culture and a gentleman's life.

“He was of the foremost and boldest in the advocacy of measures of internal improvement, in this imitating the great statesman who was his friend, and, I believe, his relative. His courage, in advance of the time of its prosperity, connected the lakes of New York with the Susquehanna River by the iron rail. He took from the inert assignees of Robert Fulton an unexpired steamboat right, and initiated a career of navigation long since grown into large usefulness. He had unconquerable love for science. ‘At her feet he bowed.’ He studied and labored and planned and invented over obstacles that made gigantic his cares, but he saw before him only the certain future success—a success beyond his grasp, but he knew the truths of his study, and if not for him, for others their good would come. The care is over, the vicissitude is past. His life of unsullied right was a great success, as Heaven interprets that word.

At a meeting of the Albany Institute, held on Saturday, Feb. 8, the following resolutions were adopted :

“Resolved, That the members of the Albany Institute, recognizing the late Richard Varick DeWitt as one of its first officers, and a most active member during its whole existence, desire to testify, upon the occasion of his death, their appreciation of his high intelligence, his scientific attainments, his earnest efforts in the cause of education, his moral worth, and all the genial and kindly virtues that mark the character of a Christian philosopher.

“Resolved, That, as a slight expression of our regard for his memory and regret for his loss, the record of his decease be placed upon the minutes of the Institute, and that we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his family in their bereavement.

“Resolved, That we attend the funeral of the deceased in a body ; and that a copy of these resolutions be presented to the family.

“JAMES WEIR MASON, Secretary.”

The Consistory and Trustees of the Second Reformed Church in the City of Albany, in joint meeting assembled, unanimously adopted the following minute :

“With saddened and chastened hearts the Consistory and Trustees of the Second Reformed Church, chronicle their profound sorrow and sense of loss in the record of Richard Varick DeWitt’s departure from earth.

"For nearly fifty years a member of this church, he maintained a spotless Christian reputation, and beautifully exemplified the graces of an humble and earnest follower of Jesus. During a considerable part of this lengthened period called to fill all church offices to which he could be chosen, he brought to the discharge of their duties, with fullest consecration, a richly endowed and stored mind, a loving heart, an energetic spirit, an ever helpful hand, so that the formative influence of his pure life and the power of his judicious activities can be gratefully traced through nearly the entire history of our church.

"While we mourn him as the loyal and consistent member, the Sabbath school teacher and superintendent, whose gentleness won those whom his wisdom instructed, the trustee sagacious and liberal, the deacon sympathizing and generous, the elder who ruled well, the friend ever genial and true—we praise the God of all grace for the rich legacy of his undying character and example.

"Our grief deepens our sympathy for his sorely bereaved family, for whom, with assurance of sincerest interest and affection, we supplicate that divine support and consolation, through the abundant enjoyment of which their honored and beloved father lived so admirably and then so peacefully fell on sleep.

"JOACHIM ELMENDORF, President.

"A. V. DEWITT, Secretary."

He died Feb. 7, 1868. Residence, Albany, N. Y.

Children:

70401. Richard Varick. Born in 1832 in Albany, N. Y. Educated at the Albany Academy. He was admitted to the Society of the Cincinnati July 4, 1868. He was prominently engaged in the insurance business in the City of Albany and was Secretary of the Albany Insurance Company, 1890-6, when he engaged in business for himself. Director in the Albany Exchange Savings Bank. Trustee of the Albany Medical College. At the time of his death the Albany Argus said: "Former Fire Commissioner Richard Varick DeWitt died at his home on Lancaster Street last evening after a brief illness. His death will come as a shock to his hosts of friends in this city. He was widely known and highly respected. Mr. DeWitt was born in Albany in 1832 and was the son of Richard V. and Sarah Walsh DeWitt. Simeon DeWitt, grandfather of the deceased, was a prominent officer in the Continental Army. In 1778 Congress appointed him chief of the topographers of the Continental Army and geographer-general, which positions he retained until the close of the Revolutionary War. He served as surveyor-general of New York State from 1784 to 1834. He declined the appointment of surveyor-general of the United States, which was tendered him by Congress in 1784. Richard V. DeWitt was educated at the Albany Academy and in 1849 entered the employ of the Albany Insurance Company as clerk. In 1854 he was appointed to a clerkship in the New York State Bank, which position he held until 1868, when he again engaged in the insurance business. From 1872 to 1890 Mr. DeWitt was secretary of the Commerce Insurance Company and was secretary of the Albany Insurance Company from 1890 to 1896, when he resigned to engage in business for himself. He was a member of the board of fire commissioners, being appointed September 8, 1887, to succeed John McEwan. He was secretary of the board for several years and was succeeded by James McCredie. Mr. DeWitt served in the fire board with distinction until it was legislated out of office in 1900. He was also actively identified with the board of underwriters and for many years served as chairman of the Protectives' Committee. Mr. DeWitt was a trustee of the Madison Avenue Reformed Church for thirteen years. He was at one time a director of the Albany Exchange Savings Bank. He was a trustee of the Albany Medical College, a member of the standing committee of the Society of the Cincinnati of the State of New York, and president of the Albany branch of the local Fire Insurance Agents' Association of New York State. Mr. DeWitt was closely identified with athletic sports in Albany and was for many years an active oarsman and greatly interested in baseball. He was a clever writer and articles from his pen were often seen in the public prints. He wrote for the New York Times and frequently for the local press." The Ithaca Daily News said: "The New York branch of the Order of the Cincinnati has issued the following order or announcement: Office of the Secretary. New York, Aug. 24th, 1901. General Order. With regret announcement is made of the death, at Albany, N. Y., on Wednesday, August 21st, 1901, of Richard Varick DeWitt, a member of the New York State Society of the Cincinnati. NICHOLAS FISH, President. By order: F. K. PENDLETON, Secretary. Richard Varick DeWitt, whose death is here announced, was the grandson of Simeon DeWitt the founder of Ithaca. He was the son of Richard Varick DeWitt, senior, who passed away at Albany about 1866-7. They were both for many years engaged in the insurance business which has been continued by the son of the same name to the present time. The name of Richard Varick comes from Col. Richard Varick a distinguished officer of the Revolution and afterwards prominent in civil life, having been mayor of New York City and attorney-general of the State. He was a brother-in-law of General Simeon DeWitt of Ithaca. Richard Varick DeWitt, senior, though never a resident of Ithaca, used often to visit here on pleasure and business being one of the executors of the estate of his father, Simeon DeWitt. He was well known by the citizens here and is still well remembered by a few of the older people yet living." The Ithaca Democrat said: "The death is announced of Richard Varick DeWitt of Albany, a grandson of Simeon DeWitt and an honored and distinguished member of the New York Society of Cincinnati. This gentleman, whose father's name was the same as his own, had long been identified with the insurance business of Albany, and I believe was a vice-president or prominent officer of one of the insurance companies incorporated and doing business in that city. His death recalls a name and family, historic to Ithacans, and eminent in the annals of the State. I refer to Simeon DeWitt, who died in one of the upper rooms of the Clinton House, in this city, near the closing week of 1834, aged 78. General DeWitt had three sons, only one of whom married and left issue, and the person who has just passed away, was his only lineal grandson. The latter leaves one or more sons, so the family in the male line does not become extinct. The father of the deceased, Richard Varick DeWitt, senior, was born at Albany at the beginning of the last century. He lived there and died there February 7, 1868, aged 68 years. He is said to have been like his father a gentleman of varied literary accomplishments and a member of the Albany Institute, of which institution both himself, and his father, the surveyor-general of the State, had been among the founders. The DeWitts, father and sons, and Francis A. Bloodgood, who was closely related to them, were the original promoters and main financial support of the old Ithaca and Owego railroad, the second railroad incorporated in the State, and the first in that part of it, west of the Mohawk Valley. It was a bold, brilliant enterprise for that day, but was not financially successful, and left the estates of the promoters heavily embarrassed. The association of the elder Richard Varick DeWitt with his father and his uncle, Colonel Richard Varick, both distinguished officers of the Revolution, and eminent in civil life, brought him in contact with many of the eminent men who then flourished, and gave him the opportunity of cultivating their friendship. Among his friends were such eminent men as Gouverneur Morris, the Livingstons, DeWitt Clinton, Chancellor Kent, the Spencers, General Armstrong and many others. C. F. MULKES." Unmarried. He died Aug. 21, 1901. Residence, Albany, N. Y.

70402. Dudley Walsh. He is engaged in the insurance business. Unmarried. Residence, 1901, Albany, N. Y.

70403. Alice. Married Augustus dePeyster. She died between 1866 and 1870, at Brookline, Mass. At the time of her death an Albany newspaper said: "The death of Mrs. Alice de Peyster brings tribulation and anguish to so many, both at home and abroad, that her immediate family constitute but a small part of the sorrowful array who mourn her loss and will cherish her memory. Bereaved of her mother in infancy, she became an object of the tender care and culture of one of the meekest of Christians and most accomplished of men, her father, the late Richard Varick DeWitt. Under his wise and loving supervision, her moral and intellectual character was formed; and it was just what might have been expected from the tutelage of so much goodness and wisdom. Her suave manners and gentle nature made her the idol of her companions during childhood and youth, and won the love and regard of the mature and observant, who found ground for hopes of future excellence and usefulness in her receptive mind, active intellect and conscientious industry; which hopes, however high, were more than justified in her womanhood. The fine moral qualities and mental capabilities she was endowed with by nature were carefully nourished and strengthened, and they early expanded to a depth and breadth that afforded support to every grace and virtue that piety, intelligence and refinement could implant there. Enjoying keenly the high and refined pleasures which such endowments and acquisitions can hardly fail to give to those who possess them; to her, nevertheless, those rich gifts seemed rather a trust fund for the benefit of others, and in her unselfishness accounted herself a beneficiary. Hence, no opportunity to do good or give pleasure to others was suffered to pass unimproved, and her labors in the church and the Sabbath school earned for her the respect of age and the love of childhood. From this field and such pursuits, and from a society that loved her, four short years ago, she was taken, amid blessings and tears, to enter upon a new career of life on another theatre; leaving memories behind her that will now be hoarded more closely than ever. She became the wife of one worthy to be her husband, and in this relation she was, what she had been in every other, a theme of praise and a model for imitation. In her new sphere, as in the one she had left, she compassed the affection and respect of all who came to have knowledge of her, and tears are now flowing as freely in Brookline as in Albany over a dispensation so mysterious, that Faith itself may be pardoned for wondering whether Heaven can need so much as Earth does such women as Alice DeWitt de Peyster.
70404. Sarah Walsh. Unmarried. Residence, 1901, Albany, N. Y.

75325. HON. CHARLES PHILO DIBBLE. (Philo and Susan Dibble.) He was born Aug. 28, 1815, at Skaneateles, N. Y. He married, Sept. 14, 1842, Hetty Johnson. 70174. Business man. Merchant. Vice-President of the First National Bank of Marshall, Mich.

At the time of his death a Marshall newspaper said :

"The sad intelligence of the death of Hon. Charles P. Dibble was conveyed here Wednesday morning by means of a telegram received by his son from Aiken, S. C. With his wife he left here four weeks ago to visit his son Henry at that place, and letters received from time to time stated that his health was rapidly improving under the influence of the warm southern climate. He was stricken with paralysis, however, last week and lingered until Tuesday, with no hope of recovery. It was the second stroke, the first having been sustained about seven years ago.

"He was born in Skaneateles, Onondaga Co., N. Y., August 28, 1815, where he resided until fourteen years of age, with his parents, Philo and Susan Dibble, who were respectively natives of Massachusetts and New York. He received his education at the district and select schools and also at Homer Academy. At the age of fourteen the nestling resolved to try his own pinions, and accordingly leaving his home he entered a store, where he remained as clerk three years. Here he showed such a natural tact and aptitude for mercantile life that we next find him a partner in the firm of his father, and then sole proprietor of a similar business at Kelloggsville. After remaining at the latter place twelve months he closed out his stock of goods and in the fall of 1835, at the age of twenty, he came to the boundless west to battle for fortune.

"He was attracted to Marshall by the reports of her growth, and after purchasing considerable property, he went as far west as Chicago on a prospecting tour. He returned with the belief that Marshall was as favorable a location as the west afforded, and in the spring of 1836 he brought in a stock of goods and began trading. This was steadily followed with success until 1877, when he retired therefrom on account of ill health, surrendering the business to his son, Charles A. Dibble. It was a busy mercantile life, beginning in 1832 and spanning a lapse of forty-five years, and it must needs have been checkered by privations incident to the life of a pioneer, by vexations and attendant losses, though in the main pleasant and prosperous.

"He was married, September 14, 1842, to Miss Hettie Johnson, of Ithaca, N. Y., where she was born. She, with five children, survive him—William and Evelyn, of this city; Mrs. Emily Bostwick, of Ithaca, N. Y.; Charles A., of St. Paul, Minn., and Henry M. Dibble, of Aiken, S. C. Theirs was a happy wedded life with only three shadows to mar its brightness—the death of their children, Benjamin, Louise and Walter.

"It is safe to say that no man in the county ever enjoyed the confidence of the people to a greater extent than Hon. C. P. Dibble. He has been treasurer of almost every association ever formed in the city and county, and for twenty years served the agricultural society of Calhoun County in that position or that of president continuously. He was treasurer of the Marshall and Bellevue plank road company and also of the Coldwater, Marshall & Mackinac railroad. In his political affiliations he was a Republican, having formerly been a Whig partisan. He was elected the first mayor of the city in 1859.

"As a citizen he was wedded to the interests of Marshall, and in everything pertaining to the advancement and prosperity of the city he took a lively interest. No enterprise was started here that did not find in him a ready sympathizer. He was one of the stockholders in the hoe factory, and was one of the original stockholders in the First National Bank, of which he has for years been vice-president. As chairman of the building committee of the board of trustees he superintended the erection of our fine high school building and performed such signal service in this capacity that he was presented with a purse of $500, as a slight testimonial of the esteem in which his untiring labor was held. Refusing to accept the money as a gift to himself, he placed it at interest, and yearly the income—$50—is divided among the various departments as prizes. He was one of the most prominent members of Trinity Church and was junior warden of the church a great many years.

"The deceased was a man of marked traits of character, firm and unyielding in defence of right and justice, yet sympathetic and merciful to the unfortunate. His greatness consisted in the combination of qualities and excellent characteristics which go to make up a good man. 'He was a man, take him for all in all, we shall not look upon his like again.' Marshall mourns his death."

He died April 22, 1884, at Aiken, S. C. She died Feb. 16, 1891, at Aiken. Residence, Marshall, Mich.

He married, Oct. 11, 1869, Tammie Perry (daughter of Thomas K. Perry and Clarinda Miller, daughter of David Owen Miller, John Perry, a soldier of the Revolutionary War, and Elizabeth Corbin). He was agent at Ithaca of the American Express Company and its successor the United States Express Company for many years and until the Civil War, when he resigned and became purveyor to Gen. Tyler's Brigade which position he held until the close of the war. He was one of the early oil producers at Pleasantville in the Titusville, Pennsylvania, oil field where he remained for many years. He returned to Ithaca about 1892 in which year he drilled the Ithaca mineral well just south of the city. He was First Assistant Engineer of the Ithaca Fire Department, 1860-3. JOSEPH B. SPRAGUE

At the time of his death the Denver Tribune said:

"Hon. Joseph B. Sprague, of Ithaca, N. Y., died at Charpiot's Hotel in this city, yesterday forenoon at 11:30. This event, so very unexpected, is the occasion of many expressions of sincere regret here, and will be the cause of genuine sorrow among a very large circle of friends in the East.

"Colonel Sprague, as the deceased was familiarly designated, has frequently visited Colorado during the last three or four years, having mining property at Wagon Wheel Gap, and when in the state has made this city his home. In company with his wife, now at the family residence in Ithaca, N. Y., where the news of Mr. Sprague's death will reach her, he made an extended trip through the mountain districts during the summer, visiting all the principal places of interest and resort and making a large collection of rare and curious specimens from the mineral and animal resources of the state. Colonel Sprague had a decided pouhant for making collections, and his recent purchase of the elk-horn chair at Taylor's Museum will be fresh in the minds of Tribune readers. From his early years he was a great traveler, and those who knew him best have often listened with pleasure to his accounts of his adventures by sea and land there scarcely being a country, no matter how far or strange, that he had not visited. Mr. Sprague was fifty-three years of age, and a native of Rochester, N. Y., and a son of Asa Sprague, proprietor of the old stage line from that point to Buffalo, and afterwards for many years a banker and prominent citizen of Rochester, where the Colonel was very widely known and highly esteemed. In connection with Hon. Hiram Sibley, of Rochester, he was interested in mining property in Montana, and among his more intimate friends in Denver were Mr. George Wilder and Charles F. Burrell, formerly of that city.

"Mr. Sprague's home for the past eight or ten years has been at Ithaca, N. Y., he having been Mayor of that city last year, and the present year receiving the nomination for Congress from the Democrats of his district. As he was at the time in this state, and engaged with business matters here, the proffered honor was declined. Mr. Sprague arrived in Denver from the East early in September, and after a short stay in the city visited his property in Wagon Wheel Gap. After his return to Denver he seemed to enjoy his usual health until within a very few days of his death. On Monday he suddenly became very ill, and on being assisted to his room at Charpiot's, soon sank into a comatose condition, in which, in spite of the most skillful and devoted medical attendance and nursing that could be procured, he continued until death resulted, the direct cause being cerebral apoplexy. Mr. Sprague was a very large and fleshy man, and had long feared the disease which finally terminated his life. He was as large in heart as in body, and in every respect a thorough gentleman.

"In his death the mining interests of Colorado lose a staunch friend, Denver an ardent admirer (the Colonel had frequently said he knew of no place of its size anywhere that could compare with this city), the bereaved wife a kind and devoted husband, and a host of acquaintances one whom they universally esteemed for his manly, generous qualities.

"The friends were duly notified of the death of Mr. Sprague, and the remains were taken in charge by an undertaker, by whom they were embalmed, preparatory to shipment East today."

The Ithaca Daily Journal said :

"The telegrams in the Journal last Saturday evening heralding the fatal illness and finally the death of Col. Sprague may be said, without exaggeration, to have shocked the people of our village, as no like event has done since the death of Ezra Cornell.

"Citizens with the paper in hand assembled upon the street corners, in hotels and stores to exchange expressions of regret and sorrow at the tidings. At the tea table and evening gatherings it was the engrossing topic. The universal sentiment was that Ithaca had not only lost a public spirited citizen, a man with a willing heart and open purse, but that the poor would feel in the coming winter the painful absence of one who while living had never forgotten or disregarded their claims : a man of great travel and varied experience, of the kindest impulses and ever looking to the improvement of the village. In most cases there would be some exceptional voices in the general chorus, but we have yet to hear of one in this case or of a person who has heard of one. There is no better phrase to express the standing of the deceased in this and the many other communities in which he was well known than that of intense 'popularity'. While thoroughly independent in announcing his hard, common sense ideas, he never offended by so doing. A small, or penurious action was totally foreign to his nature. He was integrity itself in private deal or in places of public trust. Although not a man of unusual mental ability, marked originality or brilliancy in either thought or speech, yet he unmistakably possessed the magic power of quickly winning and forever holding the good will of every one with whom he came in contact—from the millionaire who faced him at a club dinner—to the boy who blacked his boots upon the streets. To the majority of men this would seem a more valuable gift than that of genius. Very democratic, never apparently seeing any reason why the man of money and influential position was entitled to greater consideration or kinder words than those occupying the most dependent and menial of stations.

"Since his coming to Ithaca no event involving charity or public spirit has been without his name and purse near the top. It is impossible to clearly define the deceased's earlier days without a somewhat extended reference to his father; but this will not only be pardoned by all but enjoyed by most of our elderly readers.

"Asa Sprague was born at Schenectady, N. Y., where his only son, Joseph B., also first saw light. Subsequently, the family removed to Rochester, but this was after the former had acquired a name as potential as that of Dean Richmond on the old stage and even railroads from Albany to Buffalo. Born poor, with limited advantages, Asa Sprague in his early life was in charge of the toll gate over the once famous Cayuga bridge. This was in the jolly but tiresome old times of universal stage coaching. John Butterfield, since the many millionaire, was then the hard worked driver of one of the stages which was regularly driven through the toll gate of which Sprague was in charge. Acquaintance ripened into intimacy; soon a partnership was formed and eventually they became the largest interested in the stage lines between Albany and Buffalo. Then came the advent of railroads and the decline of the more primitive method of travel. Mr. Sprague was largely interested in and superintendent of the old Rochester and Syracuse or Auburn railroad. This was before the adoption of the Bismarckian policy of consolidation and antedated the N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R.

"By his sagacity and business ability he amassed a fortune of $1,200,000.00 and died at his home in Rochester.

“John Butterfield allied himself with the Welles and Fargos and became one of the express magnates, the possessor of a fortune counted by millions, and the father of Gen. Dan. E. Butterfield. The deceased, Joseph Brittin Sprague, well known as ‘Colonel’ (a title won only by his stature, military bearing, and overflowing genial spirits) was born as above stated at Schenectady, N. Y., Sept. 19, 1826. Upon the same day his father purchased a one-half interest in the marble block, corner Broadway and State streets, in Albany, known as the old Museum. To this coincidence is attributed the Colonel’s persistent refusal to listen to any proposal for his disposition of the same during his lifetime. On the contrary, he purchased the other interest and when the structure was destroyed by fire some four years since, he rebuilt it grander than before.

“As a sailor in early manhood, he had been to China, Japan, the Russian Possessions, the Sandwich Islands and many other foreign lands. Returning home, he embarked first in business at Ovid, N. Y., near the site of the present Asylum. Here, with a partner he conducted a large general store and bought and shipped immense quantities of produce from the shores of Seneca Lake to the eastern markets. It was while residing at Ovid that he came to Ithaca, and in the house at present occupied by Frank C. Cornell, that he was married to Louise, fifth daughter of the late Ben Johnson.

“We next learn of him as largely engaged in the manufacture of safes, scales, etc., and also interested in a large hardware establishment connected therewith. This was in Rochester and the business was done under the firm name of Sprague, Stevens & Co. After five or six years he withdrew from this enterprise and retired to a farm of five hundred acres in Urbana, Ohio. This farm, together with the Albany Museum property, formed a portion of his father’s estate. By his father’s will he and L. S. Ashley, of New York City, (the husband of an only sister of the deceased, who survives him) were constituted executors. The deceased declined to assume the responsibility of acting as such and prevailed upon a Mr. Atkinson, of Rochester, an old friend of the family and a lawyer by profession, to act in his stead. Mr. Ashley, of New York, is also a lawyer but is not in active practice, possibly because of sufficient income without. Hence the rumors put forth regarding a limitation upon the Colonel’s share in the estate, simply to that of a periodical income were entirely without foundation. It is well worthy of note that this statement was only heard—and then only in whispers—during political campaigns.

“The farm at Urbana being too quiet a seclusion for a man of the deceased’s social tendencies, he exchanged the same with C. M. Titus for Ithaca real estate, a part of which being the present Sprague residence. Mr. Titus in turn disposed of the farm to J. S. Wood of Ithaca, who removed thither and occupies it at this writing.

“In 1869, the deceased and wife passed the year mostly in Europe, returning to this country they made a trip to Europe in 1870, accompanied by a then prominent resident of Rochester, George R. Clark and his daughter. The Colonel returned to New York the third time, leaving the party in Algeria. Upon receiving notification of Mr. Clark’s death he again crossed the water to bring back the ladies and the remains of his friend. It was while absent upon this mission that his barns and valuable horses in Ithaca were burned.

“His late home is stored with mementos and curiosities gathered in his travels, and nothing gave him more delight than to patiently explain over and again the facts of their acquirement and the interest with which they were imbued.

“Coming to Ithaca for a permanent home in 1871 he was soon thereafter chosen Trustee (or Alderman) of the First Ward, subsequently President of the Village, (equivalent to Mayor of a city). Last year as the Democratic candidate for State Senator he contested this district with Mr. Hopkins, and while the odds and majorities of previous campaigns demonstrated the futility of the effort at the outset, yet, the immense complimentary vote extended him by this county attested the high regard of the people who knew him.

“While absent in Colorado this fall attending his silver mining interests he was notified by wire that he had been unanimously nominated by the Democratic Convention for Congress. This had been done without his knowledge. He responded declining the honor, however, as he found it impossible to manage a political campaign and his business so far separated, at one and the same time, and the latter imperatively demanded his presence. His position and unswerving policy in such local issues as the street paving, cow law, park fences, hose purchases and like matters are of too recent occurrence and too well known to need repetition here. Suffice it that time proved him correct in almost all if not every public stand taken by him. As time went on our people grew in recognition of his unselfish attempts to make a modern village of Ithaca and he grew accordingly in the esteem and affection of its residents.

“Although politically opposed, we have yet to hear the first whisper affecting the personal integrity and official rectitude of Col. Sprague. And great is the pleasure with which we volunteer our expression of the kindly and honorable traits of him who has gone out from among us forever.

“The instances of his unostentatious aids would necessitate a record of every event of any public character which has occurred here since first he came to Ithaca. His furnishing No. 6 engine company’s parlors; handing them $500 toward purchasing their engine; entertaining this and its visiting company in princely style at the Clinton House, during the Firemen’s Convention, are but samples of his royal methods of dispensing aid. His private charities—their extent and number—will never be known. Those who knew him best say confidently that no instance exists of a deserving person applying to him and being turned away unaided. In fact, his great heart and generous soul made him doubtless the subject of many gross impositions. But these never soured his sunny way or prejudiced the cause of the next claimant. Much of the regard cherished for him and his memory here, is directly traceable to his open handedness and careful consideration for the poor and distressed. Many men among us are the equals in financial resources of Colonel Sprague, but we think none will contest this attribute with him before the judgment seat without being speedily non-suited. For years he had been a member of the Rochester Social Club, composed of the bankers, merchants and wealthier citizens. His invariably good humored face, towering form, and quiet tone were familiar and welcome in New York, Albany, Syracuse, Rochester and the other leading cities of the State.

“A mistaken rumor has prevailed on our streets that he was indisposed and went to Colorado last summer for his health. This erroneous statement we find even in some of our exchanges. We are informed by his physician and relatives that his health had not been better for years than at the time of his departure, and that his mission was purely of a business nature. It cannot at this time be ascertained whether or not he left a will; or how great or profitable were his Colorado mining investments. We learn that the village authorities, merchants and leading citizens intend organizing, that a programme may be arranged for fittingly evincing the respect of Ithaca for the kind man and good citizen who has passed away. If such action has not been taken, no delay should occur in so doing. Ithaca has too few such men to fail in evidencing at the last sad rites her sincere sorrow at the loss. If such is the feeling in the community, what shall measure the grief at the fireside to which the terrible news of the affliction came "without warning?"

75385. CHARLES M. TITUS. He was born Dec. 29, 1832, at Jacksonville, N. Y. He married, June 11, 1855, Isabella Johnson. 70181. Merchant. Manufacturer. Real estate dealer. President of Geneva & Ithaca Railroad Company. Supervisor. Member of Assembly, 1879-80; 1886. No children.

Landmarks of Tompkins County, N. Y., says of him:

"As a resident of Ithaca for over forty years, as a public spirited citizen, enjoying the confidence of his fellows, as a recipient of political honors time and time again the highest in the town, as a member of the State Legislature twice re-elected, and as a gentleman universally recognized as enterprising and honorable in all his transactions, the incidents of his life are very properly a part of the history of Tompkins County, and space awarded him is so appropriate as to need no apology for its allowance.

"The life history of Mr. Titus is the history of thousands denied early pecuniary or even educational advantages beyond the most ordinary, but with force of character, energy of purpose and adherence to business plans, step to the front and occupy positions of great prominence before the public.

The father of Mr. Titus removed from Trenton, N. J., at an early day, and died before reaching middle age. The mother of the subject of this sketch was a Miss Sarah Ann Gilbert, of Jacksonville, whose father was a soldier in this county, serving as a soldier in the War of 1812.

As the father of Mr. Titus died when he was a mere child, stern necessities taught the boy he must depend on his own exertions for his personal advancement. He began his active life, meeting the ordinary difficulties which would have appalled and entirely overcome any ordinary one of less self-reliance and less determination to succeed among the workers of the world.

He was born at Jacksonville, in this county, on the 29th of December, 1825. His education was limited to the district school, and one month at a school in but a very brief period of time for even that. When growing he entered a drug store at Trumburg, remaining there a short time, and establishing a character and reputation for energy and trustworthiness. Ambitious of a larger field he next entered the employ of Mr. H. F. Hibbard, then a prominent general merchant. He soon won the confidence of his employer, and his services were highly appreciated.

Steady application and confinement indoors told upon his health, and he perceived that outdoor employment must be secured. A traveling salesman, exhibiting an extensive line of American-made sewing-machines of all the various shades, attracted the attention of Mr. Titus, and he thought he saw therein the opportunity he had sought. He thus engaged in outdoor business, becoming a salesman to the trade of products of eastern silk manufacture in this and other states.

For many years in the early fifties Mr. Titus put forth his efforts as a wholesale dealer of fancy goods with reasonable success. Not content to buy silks of eastern producers, he with others formed the firm of C. M. Titus & Co., erected a building, introduced the best machinery then known and entered upon the manufacture of silk threads of the highest grades and superior quality. The business was carried on in a building afterwards burned, upon the site of the present H. V. Bostwick wood working industry. The products of the firm were readily absorbed by the trade in New York City, and this led to the expansion of the business, and a general jobbing house was opened there and continued until fire destroyed the stock and broke up the enterprise. Because of the threatening aspect of public affairs, Mr. Titus then engaged with Bowen, Holmes & Co., a leading dry goods house in New York City.

"At this time, the fall of 1860, thoughtful men saw in the trend of affairs a great struggle must soon take place upon sectional lines, and, moved by patriotic motives, Mr. Titus severed his New York connection and started for Springfield, Ill., intending to offer his services to Mr. Lincoln, whom he was confident must be elected, ready to be assigned to any position in which he might be useful in the approaching crisis. Enroute to the West he reached Northern Pennsylvania when the wonderful oil production just commenced, and he saw great opportunity for his active temperament therein.

"He was insensibly drawn into the excitement of oil speculation, and became an extensive producer and operator. Selecting Oil City as his office point, he soon identified himself with the early history of that place. He was one of the promoters of the Oil City bridge, spanning the river there. He was also one of the organizers and a director in the First National Bank. He was selected at a public meeting of oil producers to represent their interests at Washington relative to the war tax upon petroleum, which mission was successfully performed.

"When but twenty-three years of age he purchased his present residence. The grounds attached were then vacant, but they now contain six fine dwellings. He has held Ithaca as his home all the years since as a boy he came from Trumansburg. Concluding to give up his business in Pennsylvania, and feeling that he must have active employment to hold him at his home, he purchased the manufacturing plant for many years conducted by J. Foster Hixson. Associated with William L. Bostwick, the firm of Titus & Bostwick was organized, manufacturers of machinery and agricultural implements. This firm introduced the well known and useful implement, 'The Ithaca Steel Toothed Horse Rake'. The business was very successful, and afterwards Mr. Titus disposed of his interest therein to Mr. George R. Williams, in order that he might devote his energies to the improvement of which is known as the Bloodgood Tract, consisting of some 400 acres of marsh and hillsides on the south bounds of the village, was first settled, drained and otherwise greatly improved. About one half of this tract was sold to the late John McGraw. Within the part retained by Mr. Titus was laid out that beautiful roadway known as 'Titus Avenue,' which he located, built and bordered with trees now grown to great size. The expense of this entire work was borne by the enterprising projector.

"In this tract and part of the purchase are some of our finest streets and avenues, as well as many of the most costly and desirable residences of the city. The present Fair Ground lies within its borders. Since 1870 he has operated on a very large farm, supplying much of the milk consumed in Chicago, and also farmed 500 acres of lands, the most productive in the city. Through portions of these lands streets are 80 to 120 feet wide and fine dwellings erected thereon. He built the Titus Block on West State Street in 1876, as well as many residences and business buildings, before and since.

"He has also possessed a mechanical and inventive temperament and is the inventor and patentee of the device and method of making straight and continuous lengths. The son, inheriting the inventive and mechanical temperament of the parent has produced and patented several variable devices. For several years he has been engaged in conjunction with others, in bringing forward and perfecting what is now known as the 'Peerless Type Writer'. This machine is entirely designed by Mr. Titus, as destined to take the lead of all in the world. The manufacturing of it upon an extended scale commences in this city, and Mr. Titus is to receive a royalty upon each copy produced.

When the road from Ithaca to Geneva was projected Mr. Ezra Cornell was deeply interested in the success of the enterprise, and recognizing Mr. Titus's abilities, insisted he should assume the responsible position of its president. Mr. Titus believing the interest of the road could be better secured, substituted the name of Mr. Thomas Hillhouse of Geneva, that gentleman was made president, but soon afterwards resigned. Mr. Cornell then insisted his first choice should be offered to, and Mr. Titus assumed the arduous duties of the position, and although almost insurmountable difficulties appeared, carried the enterprise through to successful completion. This link in the chain is a part of the through route of the Lehigh Valley Railroad from New York to the West.

"Deeply imbued with advanced Republican principles, Mr. Titus has always been active in the counsels of the party, helping to place the first Fremont banner in Ithaca in 1856. In addition to being upon the Republican electoral ticket in 1868, and his supervisorships, he has served three terms in the Assembly, and was unanimously selected as the candidate of the county for the senatorship of this district in 1893, but his nomination was defeated by a combination of delegates from the other counties.

"Mr. Titus was married on the 11th of June, 1855, to Isabella Johnson, youngest daughter of Ben Johnson, the ablest member of the bar of Tompkins County. At his comfortable residence in this city, graced by the presence of his wife, is dispensed hospitality of the highest character, crowned by dignity, and enjoyed by hosts of friends who feel the value of the family acquaintance and friendship. Mrs. Titus made an extended European tour in 1892."

"Under the title of 'An Ambassador of Christ,' there has been published in New York a biography of the late Rev. Montgomery Schuyler, D.D., who died in St. Louis in March, 1896, at the age of eighty-three. A graduate of Union College, he was a teacher for some time in the thirties in the Ithaca Academy and was also called to the Episcopal Church in this city in 1842. In the days of his youthful beauty and strength, like most popular young clergymen, he 'shook calls out of his sleeve,' eighteen of which are mentioned in the book. He had an open, generous, affectionate nature and is remembered by a few of the aged people of this city. A portrait is prefixed to the volume."

REV. ALEXANDER MANN

75600. REV. ANTHONY SCHUYLER, D.D. (Peter, 70276. He was born July 8, 1816, at Seneca, N. Y. He graduated at Hobart College, 1835. Trustee of Hobart College, 1860-8. President Alumni Association of Hobart College, 1862. Lawyer. Protestant Episcopal minister. Ordained in 1852. Deputy to Gen. Convention. He married (1st), Dec. 23, 1839, Eleanor Board Johnson, 70171. She died Nov. 2, 1849. He married (2nd), Mary Hall.

At the time of his death the New York Tribune said:

"Dr. Schuyler was descended from an old Holland family that settled in Albany in 1657. He was born in Geneva, N. Y., in 1816, and was graduated from Geneva College, now Hobart, in 1836. He moved to Ithaca, N. Y., where he studied law, was admitted to the bar, and married Miss Eleanor Johnson in 1839. After her death, in 1849, he decided to enter the ministry, and studied under the Rev. W. S. Walker, of Ithaca, and was ordained deacon in 1852. He served a disconate of eighteen months, when he was ordained priest and called to Oswego as rector of Christ Church.

"In 1862 Dr. Schuyler was called to Christ Church, Rochester, where he remained till 1868, when he came to Orange as rector of Grace Church. He married Miss Mary Allen, daughter of Henry Allen, of Skaneateles, in 1869, and she survives him, with four sons and one daughter, two of the sons being by Dr. Schuyler's first marriage.

"Dr. Schuyler led a singularly quiet life, although his influence was felt in every good work. He was a Democrat in politics, but voted for McKinley both in 1896 and in the late election. Although eighty-four years of age, all his faculties were keen up to his death. He was beloved among his associates in the clergy and by all classes in the Oranges.

"The funeral will be held on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the church of which he was rector, and will be conducted by the Right Rev. Thomas A. Starkey, Bishop of the Diocese of Newark. The other appointments for the service have not yet been made. It is expected that nearly all the clergy in the Diocese will be present in their vestments. The honorary pallbearers will be the vestry of the church—William M. Franklin, Jonathan L. Broome, Jay C. Young, Edward S. Ashley, Charles E. Kroeh, Julius A. Boylan, Thomas S. P. Fitch, Josiah O. Ward, Walter Scranton, Frank Q. Barstow, Philip H. Patriarche and Alfred P. Boller. The body will lie in state in the church on Saturday from 8 A. M. to 2 P. M., and will be taken on Sunday to Geneva where the burial will take place on Monday."

The New York World said:

"The Rev. Dr. Anthony Schuyler died from heart failure at Grace Church Rectory, Orange, N. J., early yesterday morning, in his eighty-fifth year. He had been a man of much activity and of many and varied interests, and old age sat lightly upon him until the last. He preached last Sunday and attended a lecture the evening preceding his death. For the last few months it had been his custom to alternate with his associate rector, who is also his nephew, the Rev. Alexander Mann—the one who preached the evening sermon would preach the morning sermon on the following Sunday. When it came to decide who should preach the Thanksgiving sermon, Dr. Schuyler gently but firmly insisted that his assistant should preside then, giving as his reason that he had preached enough Thanksgiving sermons. 'But,' he added, 'I should like to preach the last sermon of the year and century.'

"Dr. Schuyler was sixth in descent from Philip Pieterse Schuyler, the founder of the family in this country, who settled at Fort Orange, now Albany, married there in 1650, and became a Magistrate and 'Captain of Foot' in the service of the West India Company. His cousin, coeval, and life-long friend, the Rev. Dr. Montgomery Schuyler of St. Louis, died four years ago, at the age of eighty-two. Dr. Anthony Schuyler was born in Geneva, N. Y., July 8, 1816. He was a graduate of Geneva, now Hobart, College, of the class of '35. He studied law, was admitted to the Ithaca bar, and for ten years practiced his profession. He then felt that he had a calling for the ministry of the Protestant Episcopal Church. After the necessary preparatory course of study, he was ordained in 1850, and two years later he was called to the rectorship of Christ Church, in Oswego, N. Y. In 1862 he became rector of Christ Church in Rochester, and after six years of pastoral work there he accepted a call from Grace Church, Orange, a charge which he held at the time of his death. In 1859 his alma mater conferred the degree of S.T.D. upon him. Since the foundation of the Diocese of Newark he had been Chairman of the Standing Committee on the Constitution and Canons, besides representing his Diocese in the general conventions.

"As a pulpit orator, Dr. Schuyler was a simple and direct speaker and a writer of simple but unmistakably scholarly English. Two volumes of his sermons have been published—'Household Religion,' in 1887, and 'The Incarnate Word,' in 1899.

"Dr. Schuyler was twice married. His first wife, to whom he was wedded in 1839, was Miss Eleanor Johnson, daughter of Ben Johnson of Ithaca. She died in 1849, leaving a daughter and three sons; two sons are now living—Charles B. and Montgomery Schuyler. In 1862 he was married to Miss Mary Hall Allen of Oswego, who survives him, with a daughter and two sons—the Rev. Hamilton Schuyler of Trenton and Anthony Schuyler, Jr."

The Orange Chronicle said:

"For over thirty two years Dr. Schuyler has been rector of Grace Church, and his familiar figure with its firm yet elastic walk, his face, with a pleasant look and smile of recognition for every one, seemed integral parts of the life of the community. Even those who did not know him personally took a pride in him as a representative man in the city, while to the members of his own church and communion his passing away came with a sense of personal bereavement. Every one who knew him loved him; during the entire time in which he was the rector of Grace Church there never was the suggestion of any friction or unpleasantness in the church, and he had not an enemy in the world. He has left behind him the fragrance of a consistent Christian life and a record of duty well done."

The Orange Chronicle, 'Notes by the Way,' said:

"Every one who has been privileged to enjoy the friendship, or even close acquaintance, of Dr. Schuyler will feel a personal loss in his sudden taking off. He was a man who brought the spirit of his religion into his daily life, who made no pretense of saintliness in his outward manner, but who lost no opportunity of doing something to help those who stood in need, whether of spiritual or bodily help. I well remember when the news came of the great fire in Chicago how quickly he responded to the cry for help, taking, as it were, the very coat from his back. Vigorous, logical and direct in thought, his pulpit utterances always commanded the deep attention of intelligent congregations, while at the same time he did not preach over the heads of those whose intellectual attainments were more modest. In his long sojourn among us Dr. Schuyler had endeared himself to the whole community, and his going out at the ripe age of over four score years will not only be regretted, but his life and work will leave an atmosphere of a noble life that will remain while memory lasts."

The East Orange Weekly News, said :

"Dr. Schuyler was a large man physically, and a man of large ways in generosity, thoughtfulness for others, and in grasp upon the affairs of his calling. Of a sunny temperament, genial and lovable ways, and much gentle dignity, he gathered to himself the esteem and affection of all who knew him. His tastes were quiet and his habits of life marked by the simple dignity that belonged to his sacred calling. Although his early training and practice at the bar had given a logical cast to his mental processes and made him a close reasoner, he had a lively appreciation of the laughable side of things, a keen sense of humor, and enjoyed a good story. His venerable and benignant presence, made familiar by his walks about the town, will be generally missed, and a sense of loss will visit many who are not members of his parish."

A communication in The Orange Chronicle, said :

"For thirty-two years the Rev. Dr. Schuyler had been a prominent clerical figure in this community, honored and beloved by all who knew him. In his parish he was faithful and diligent, a promoter of peace and good-will. In his relations to his people he was always sympathetic and approachable. To the poor he was kind, humane and accessible, and he never courted the rich. Like his Master, he was no respecter of persons.

"Above most clergymen he was constant and zealous in the support of missions, and under his leadership Grace Parish was one of the most forward and liberal in the Episcopal Church in gifts to the missionary work. Dr. Schuyler's loyalty to his church was steadfast and unquestioned, and was unaffected by any degree of narrowness. In his relations to Christians of other communions he was tolerant and friendly. In society he was affable, cordial and free from cold conventionalities.

"Dr. Schuyler's sermons were distinguished by Gospel purity and soundness and by spiritual fervor. They ever tended to the edification of the believer and the awakening of the indifferent and unrenewed in heart: they were vigorous in thought to an uncommon degree and were touched with a strain of native eloquence all his own. They also possessed the rare quality of engaging the attention of the thoughtful reader when printed, as of the heart when delivered from the pulpit. Dr. Schuyler's energetic intellect, literary instinct, and grasp of spiritual truth made him a pastor-preacher who could not fail to edify the serious minded of his hearers. Although strong and clear in his convictions he had no pride of opinion, and was often ready to yield to the judgment of inferior minds.

"Throughout the life and work of Dr. Schuyler there shone a character humble, simple, transparent. It was, perhaps, the artlessness and simplicity of his character which induced him, after a few years spent at the bar, to attend to the legal profession and give himself to the Christian ministry. Doubtless, he shrank from the tortuous devices, the wiles and subtleties which are sometimes found associated with the practice of that profession. Full of years and honors, this servant of God rests from his labors, and his works do follow him. He sought not the applause of men and none offered him reproach.

"The Christian pastor, faithful and beloved; the loving father, husband and friend; the humble follower of Christ, the gentle, guileless spirit has entered into the rest that remaineth to the people of God. This humble tribute is laid on his tomb by one who for many years had the honor and the happiness to serve with him as his yoke fellow in the work of the church.

Child:

75731. Charles Thomas. Born in Aug., 1899.

75742. CHARLES MARSTON, (John.) He married, Jan. 30, Louisa Isabella Johnson, 75381.

The following in regard to their courtship and marriage is from the Ithaca Daily Journal :

"The marriage took place yesterday at All Souls' Church, New York, of Mr. Charles Marston (oldest son of Alderman John Marston, J. P., of The Oaks, Wolverhampton), and Miss Louise Isabel Johnson, only daughter of Mr. W. G. Johnson, of Ithaca, New York. The marriage was solemnized by the Rev. Dr. Schuyler, uncle of the bride. Mr. Marston is well known in political and commercial circles in Wolverhampton, and is a very popular officer of the 3d Volunteer Battalion South Staffordshire Regiment. All his friends will join in wishing him and Mrs. Marston long life and happiness. Mr. Marston will arrive home with his bride after March 25th, and take up his residence at The Highfields, Pennu-road, Wolverhampton.—Wolverhampton (Eng.) News, Jan. 31.

"The above announcement from the Wolverhampton News is the sequel to a very pretty romance, and as the bride in the case was born and brought up in this city, the particulars are interesting here, especially as Mrs. Marston leaves a city full of friends for her new home in England.

"Five years ago last summer, she, being but a girl of fifteen, at our High School, went with a party made up of Dr. and Mrs. Northrup of New York, and her mother to Europe. They landed at Glasgow, Scotland, and spent about two months doing the British Islands, taking ship for home at Liverpool. The usual stop was made at Queenstown, Ireland, for passengers and mails, and in the hurly-burly of departure the party noticed especially, a young man taking leave of his home friends. Very soon Dr. Northrup made his acquaintance in the smoking room and ere New York was reached they were all the greatest friends, so much that Dr. Northrup would not allow him to go to a hotel, but took him to his home, and during all his stay in America that house was his home. It was Mr. Charles Marston of Wolverhampton, England, and as he was over to look into various of our industries, was here many months and traveled extensively. Meantime Miss Johnson came back to Ithaca and to her work in the High School. Two years later the same party went again to Europe, and landing at Rotterdam, Holland, they found Mr. Marston on the dock to greet them, and he traveled with them in Holland, Germany and Austria, and while in Germany the party received a most cordial invitation from Mayor and Mrs. Marston of Wolverhampton, to visit them before returning to America. They had a charming stay at Wolverhampton of about ten days, and then their entertainers took them for a week to their seaside home in Wales, not far from Liverpool, from which port they sailed.

"In the meantime young Mr. Marston seeing that Miss Johnson was without a brother, tried to make the void good, and if there was any thought of being a lover, he kept up a thinking, but made no sign. But last winter he suddenly appeared at the home of his friends in New York—came over to ask a question—was here for six weeks, and went back without an answer, as while he was held in the highest esteem, that one little 'yes' meant banishment from home and country.

"A correspondence followed and the same party again crossed the Atlantic this last summer, landing at Antwerp in Belgium; and to show how fast Mr. Marston was getting Americanized, as their ship was being warped into its dock on the bank of the Scheldt, there he was mounted on the head of a barrel, swinging his hat and gesticulating like a first class stump speaker. He journeyed with them through Belgium, France and into beautiful Switzerland, and here among the romantic surroundings of that lovely land, Miss Johnson made up her mind that such devotion was worth quitting, if at the cost of home and country.

"As a slight proof of the esteem in which the young couple are held by a large circle of friends, we would say that they have been almost 'snowed under' with useful, beautiful and valuable presents."

Residence, 1901, Wolverhampton, England.

Lossing's Cyclopedia of American History says of him :

"John Paulding, one of the captors of André, was born in 1758 in New York; died Feb. 18, 1818, at Staatsburg, N. Y. Three times he was made a prisoner during the War for Independence, and had escaped the second time, only four days before the capture of André. He and his associates received from Congress a silver medal each, and were awarded an annuity of $200. In 1827 a marble monument was erected by the corporation of New York City in St. Peter's churchyard near Peekskill as a memorial of him."

The following documents are important to a correct judgment of the conduct and motives of the captors of André, on which even Jared Sparks, with less than his scrupulous regard for exact justice, has thrown down unmerited distrust. They were originally published in February and March, 1817, immediately after the remarks of Major Tallmadge in Congress. John Paulding's Affidavit :

"John Paulding, of the County of Westchester, one of the persons who took Major André, being duly sworn, saith that he was three times, during the Revolutionary War, a prisoner with the enemy; the first time he was taken at the White Plains when under the command of Captain Requa, and carried to New York and confined in the Sugar-House. The second time he was taken near Tarrytown, when under the command of Lieutenant Peacock, and confined in the North Dutch Church, in New York; that both these times he escaped, and the last of them only four days before the capture of André; that the last time he was taken he was wounded and lay in the hospital in New York, and was discharged on the arrival of the news of peace there; that he and his companions, VanWart and Williams, among other articles which they took from Major André, were his watch, horse, saddle and bridle, and which they retained as prize; that they delivered over André, with the papers found on him, to Col. Jameson, who commanded on the lines; that shortly thereafter they were summoned to appear as witnesses at the headquarters of General Washington, at Tappan, that they were at Tappan some days, and examined as witnesses before the court-martial on the trial of Smith, who brought André ashore from on board the sloop of war; that while there Col. William G. Smith redeemed the watch from them for thirty guineas, which, and the money received for the horse, saddle and bridle, they divided equally among themselves and four other persons, who belonged to their party, but when André was taken, were about half a mile off, keeping a lookout on a hill; that André had no gold or silver money with him, but only some Continental bills, to the amount of about eighty dollars; that the medals given to him and VanWart and Williams, by Congress, were presented to them by General Washington, when the army was encamped at Verplanck's Point, and that they on the occasion dined at his table; that Williams removed some years ago from Westchester county to the northern part of the state, but where particularly, the deponent does not know. And, the deponent, referring to the affidavit of VanWart, taken on the 28th of January last, and which he has read, says the same is in substance true.

Certificate of Inhabitants of Westchester County:

“We, the subscribers, inhabitants of the County of Westchester, do certify, that during the Revolutionary War, we were well acquainted with Isaac VanWart, David Williams and John Paulding, who arrested Major André; and that at no time during the Revolutionary War, was any suspicion entertained by their neighbors or acquaintances, that they or either of them held any undue intercourse with the enemy. On the contrary, they were universally esteemed, and taken to be ardent and faithful in the cause of the country. We further certify, that the said Paulding and Williams are not now resident among us, but that Isaac VanWart is a respectable freeholder of the town of Mount Pleasant; that we are well acquainted with him; and we do not hesitate to declare our belief that there is not an individual in the County of Westchester, acquainted with Isaac VanWart, who would hesitate to describe him as a man whose integrity is as unimpeachable as his veracity is undoubted. In these respects no man in the County of Westchester is his superior.

Out of twenty-four years in the Navy, he was only two years unemployed, seeing service on the survey, off the coast of Africa, in the Mediterranean, on the lakes, in the naval observatory, on the Paraguay expedition, and on the Pacific. At the beginning of the Civil War he was ordered to St. Louis to superintend the construction of iron-clads, and commanded the "St. Louis," the first vessel of that kind that was built in the United States, doing valuable service at Fort Henry, Fort Donelson, Island No. 10, Fort Pillow and in many skirmishes with confederate gun-boats. My older brother had a deed given by George 3rd to my great-grandfather and brother of tract of or section 13, 33 acres. My father had it and I saw it often. My grandfather was visited often by Col. Dey who was in battle of Monmouth and I believe also of Dey St. New York, who also had a house in Sussex Co. which was Washington's head quarters for a time. In whose interests are you wishing done? 18627. MAJ. HIRAM PAULDING. — John, John, Joseph, John, 1808—187426. He was born May 2, 1831, at Farrytown, N. Y. He married — (Widow) — Maria — the Miller.

At the time of his death the New York World said:

"Major Hiram Paulding, grandson of John Paulding, one of the captors of Major Andre at Farrytown during the Revolution, died at his home in White Plains, Tuesday night. He was born in 1831. He was admitted to the bar in Westchester County, and practiced in the Westchester County courts for nearly fifty years. He was vice-president of the Andre Memorial Association, of which the late Samuel J. Tilden was president. He leaves a widow, two sons, and one daughter. (Sept. 19, 1901.)"

The Eastern State Journal of White Plains said:

"Major Hiram Paulding died early Wednesday evening. He had been in failing health for some time and his death was not wholly unexpected. Mr. Paulding was born at Farrytown on May 2nd, 1831, and was the son of John Paulding, who took an active part in the Civil War, and was related to one of the capturers of Major Andre. Commodore Paulding who was second in command under Admiral Farragut in the battle of Mobile Bay, was an uncle of his. Major Paulding was very well-known throughout Westchester County especially by members of the Bar, being the oldest in point of practice, at the county court house. He was a familiar figure on our streets, his military bearing and cordial manners attracted and won the acquaintanceship of all. A widow and two sons, Charles and Peter Paulding, and a daughter, Mrs. George W. See, survive him.

"Major Paulding will be very much missed in the community, where he had been a conspicuous figure for so long. He had natural legal ability rarely found, and as a trial lawyer had won many notable victories in our local courts. The sympathy of the community is felt for his widow and sons and daughter."

He died Sept. 18, 1901. Residence, White Plains, N. Y.

"BEAUFORT, N. C., Feb. 18, 1902.

"DEAR SIR: Mr. J. W. Dey, of Newark, N. J., has sent me a letter written by yourself to him, dated Dec. 9, 1901, with request that I answer it. Mr. Dey is my brother-in-law, and as I am of this state, it seems to me that there are those near him who could do it better. My husband is Charles Pitman Dey, of New Jersey. His father, John Dey, now living in Newark, N. J., age 86 years. He was born July 26, 1815. His parents were Joseph Dey and his wife, Elizabeth Land. Joseph Dey's parents were John Dey and Anna Longstreet, and my understanding of it is their home was on Staten Island. This is as far back as I have received information.

"Respectfully,

"MRS. C. P. DEY."

BOARD HISTORY.

THE FAMILY IN ENGLAND.

BY SIDNEY LEE.)

"ANDREW BOORDE, OR BORDE (c. 1490 ? 1530) traveller and physician," "Andreas Parforatus," as he jocosely calls himself, was born at "Boord's Hill in Holmsdayle," near Cuckfield, Sussex, some time before or about 1490, as by 1521 he was appointed suffragan bishop of Chichester, and must have therefore then been thirty years old. He was brought up at Oxford, and was received under age—and consequently against their rules—into the strictest order of monks, the Carthusians, evidently at the London Charterhouse. Andrew Boorde is therefore not to be identified with his namesake (the son of John Boorde), the bondsman, or villein regardant—attached to the soil and sellable with it—of the manor of Ditchling, Sussex, whom Lord Abergavenny manumitted on 27 June, 1510 (Madox, Form. Aug., 1702, p. 420), for, if not a freeman by birth, his monkhood had made him one. About 1517 he was falsely accused of being "conversant with women;" and in or about 1521 was "dyspensyd with the relygon by the byshopps of Romes bulles, to be suffrygan of Chichester: the whych I never dyd execute the auctore" or authority. About 1528, after some twenty years of vegetarianism and fasting with the Carthusians, Boorde writes to the prior of the Hinton Charterhouse in Somerset, "I am nott able to byd the rugorosite off your relygon:" and he accordingly gets a dispensation from this religious or monkish vow from Prior Batmanson, and goes over sea to study medicine. There he "travelled for to have the notycyon aractes of Physyke in duers regyons and countres, and returned into Englande" in 1530.

He stayed with Sir Robert Drewry, attended and cured the Duke of Norfolk, and was by him "connocated to wayte on his prepotent mageste, Henry VIII". He desiring "to have a trewe cognyscion of the practis of Physycke" he passed "over the seas agayne, and dyd go to all the vnyuersities and scoles approbated and beyng within the precinct of Chrystendome". Of these he names Orleans, Poitiers, Toulouse, and Montpellier in France, and Wittenburg in Germany, and he quotes the practice of surgeons in Rome, and Compostella in Navarre, whither he went on pilgrimage with nine English and Scotchmen. By 27 May, 1534, Boorde was back at the London Charterhouse, and took the oath of conformity. He was then "kept in thrawldom" there, and freed by Cromwell, whom he visited in Hampshute. Cromwell appears to have sent him abroad on his third tour, to report on the state of feeling about Henry VIII; and to Cromwell he writes from Bordeaux on 2 June, 1535: "Sens my departyng from you, I have pertrastratyd Normandy, Frawnce, Gascony and Byon. Bayonne; the regions also of Castyle, Biscay, Spayne, parte of Portygale, and returned thow. Aregon, Namerne, and now am att Burdyose, and few frendys Anglond hath in theys partes of Lurope, as Iesus, your lover knowth." The pope, emperor and all other Christian kings—save the French—were, with their people, set against Henry. Boorde then fell ill; but he sent to Cromwell, doubtless from Spain, and with directions for their culture, "the seedes of reuberbe, the which come owtt off Barbary. In these partes ytt ys had for a grett tresure." This was nearly two hundred years before the plant was cultivated in England (1742). On his recovery Boorde returned to England, and went to Scotland, whence he wrote to Cromwell on 1 April, 1536: "I am now in Skotland, in a lytle vnyuersyte or study named Glasco, where I study and practyce physyk, for the sustentacyon off my lyuyng." He disliked the Scotch: "Trust yow no Skott, for they wyl yowse flatterying wordes; and all ys falshode." "Also, it is naturelly geuen, or els it is of a deuellyshe dysposicion of a Scottysh man, not to loue nor fauour an Englishe man." After a year's stay in Scotland, Boorde came back to London, attending a patient in Yorkshire on his road, and saw Cromwell. In London two horses were stolen from him; and in 1537, 13 Aug., from Cambridge, he appealed to Cromwell to get them back from their buyers, and also recover 53*l.* owed to him by Londoners, who called him "apostata, and all-to-nowght" (good for nothing), and otherwise slandered him. Late in 1538, or after the dissolution of the religious houses in 1538, Boorde must have started for his longest tour abroad, and gone through Calais, Gravelines, Antwerp, Cologne, Cobletz, Worms, Venice, thence by ship to Rhodes and Joppy, and on to Jerusalem to see the Holy Sepulchre. He probably came back through Naples and Rome, crossed the Alps, and settled down for a time at his favourite university, Montpellier, "the nobilis vniuersite of the world for phisicians and surgions," "the hed vniuersite in al Europe for the praetes of physycke". There, by 1542, he had written his "Fyrst Boke of the Introduction of Knowledge" (publ. 1547?)—the first printed "Handbook of Europe"—his "Dyetary" (publ. 1542?), his "Breuyary of Health" (publ. 1547), and his lost "Boke of Berdes" (beards). In his "Dyetary" he embodied a little anonymous treatise ("The boke for to lerne a man to be wyse, in buylding of his howse for the helth of body to holde quyeteness for the helth of his soule and body. The boke for a good husbände to lerne:." Robert Wyer—London, 1542?), which he had either written previously himself, or which he then stole. His "Boke of Berdes" (condemning them) we know only from the imperfect copy of an answer to it by one Barnes—"Barnes in defence of the Berde" or "The treatise answering the Boke of Berdes," London, 1543?, in which he accuses Boorde of getting drunk at a Dutchman's house, and vomiting over his long beard, which stank so next morning that he had to shave it off.

Boorde was no doubt in England, when his "Dyetary" was published in 1542, though its dedication to the Duke of Norfolk is dated from Montpellier, 5 May, for Barnes says that on Boorde's return, evidently to London, where many patients resorted to him, he "had set forth iij bokes to be prynted in Fleet Strete". He probably settled at Winchester, and in 1545 published a "Pronosticacion" as he most likely did in earlier and later years. In 1547 he may have been for a time in London—a "Doctor Borde" was then the last tenant of the house appropriated to the master of the hospital of St. Giles-in-the-Fields—to see to the publication of his books, which had been five years in the press: the "Breuyary" (a medical treatise), its companion "Astronomye" ("I dyed wrett and make this boke in iiii dayes, and wretten with one old pen with out mendyng"), and his "Introduction of Knowledge," besides a second edition of his "Dye-tary." Soon after this, "within this eight yere," says the Bishop of Winchester, Dr. John Poyner, in 1550, Boorde was proved false to the justices "to have kept three house womer" in his chamber at Winchester, "and the harlots openly in the stretes and great church of Winchester were punished." Whether for this, or some other and later offense, Boorde was put into the Fleet prison in London, and there, on 9 April, 1549, made his will, leaving two houses in Lynn, which Recorder Conysshay had given him, tenements in Pevensey, Sussex, which he got on the death of his father, and houses and charters in and about Winchester. He died soon after, probably near sixty years old, and his will was proved on 25 April, 1549.

Besides the books already named, Boorde's "Itinerary of England," or "Perigrination of Doctor Boorde" was printed by Heaune in 1535; his "Itinerary of Europe" and his "Booke of Sermons" are not known to exist; "A Booke of Anatomies" and "Prognostications" in the British Museum for 1537 and 1540 may or may not be his. The books, etc., assigned to him without any evidence are: "The Merie Tales of the Mad Men of Gotham," "Scoggs's Jestes" (a middle thing unjustly tattered up); Dr. Boorde's says Anthony Wood, "The Mylner of Abynton," and a coarse poem of his, "Nos. Vig. Parvuli." He is also absurdly supposed to have been the original Merryandrew. The "Promptuarium Physicæ" and "De Indiciis barbarum," which Bale assigns to Boorde, may be his "Breuiary," and its second part, the "Extraneagantes." Besides the first Handbook of Europe, we owe to Boorde the first printed specimen of the Gypsy language, given in his description of Egypt in his "Perigrination." His anticipation of Shakespeare in the close of passage following is well known: "Englishmen be bold, strong and mighty; the women be full of bewty, and they be decked gaily, they be sumptuous"; "God is serued in their churches deuoutly; but treson and decey among them is used craftyly, the more pitie; for yt they were true wythin themselves, they neede not to feare although al nations were set aginst them." For his treatment of another of Shakespeare's topics, Englishmen's fantasticality in dress, Boorde made himself famous by his wood cut of an Englishman standing naked, with a pair of shears in one hand and a piece of cloth over the other arm, above the lines:

I am an English man, and naked I stand here,
 Missing in my mynd what rayment I shal were;
 For now I wyl were this, and now I wyl were that;
 Now I wyl were I cannot tel what

In spite of Boorde's sad slip at the end of his life, no one can read his racy writings without admiring and liking the cheery, frank, bright, helpful, and sensible fellow who penned them.

Lineage—According to the visitation of 1684, the family of Boord, Borde or Boaid is "descended anciently from Sussex". In 7 Henry VI. (1429), William Borde de Badecomb (Batcomb), Somerset, granted certain lands at Yewelchester (Hechester), into the Almshouse there, where the deeds may still be seen. In 22 Henry VI. (1444), William Borde was Echeator of Berkshire. At the end of the 15th century, John Borde was rector of Lymington, Somerset, in which office he was succeeded by Thomas, afterwards Cardinal Wolsey.

The following letter refers to the home of the Boards in England:

“I. AUSTIN FRIARS, E. C., June 15, 1885.

“MY DEAR SIR: I am quite ashamed of having left your polite and very interesting letter of May 19th, so long unanswered. As you know I was in New York, for a few days only, in May, and regret not having seen you when you kindly called at my hotel. Since my return I have hardly found the day long enough for business matters.

“Our family is no way related to the Board family. My father purchased the property of Paxhill about 1862. The Board family, I think, ended in the female line marrying some Crawford, and they ended also in female line, she marrying Albert Smith, the celebrated Alpine lecturer. The property was then sold to a Mr. Herbert Noyes, who mortgaged it and in '62 my father bought it of the mortgagee. He sold it again in '77, just before his death as I, his only son, did not care about a country house so large and expensive as that. I will try and find you a photograph of the original house and my father's additions.

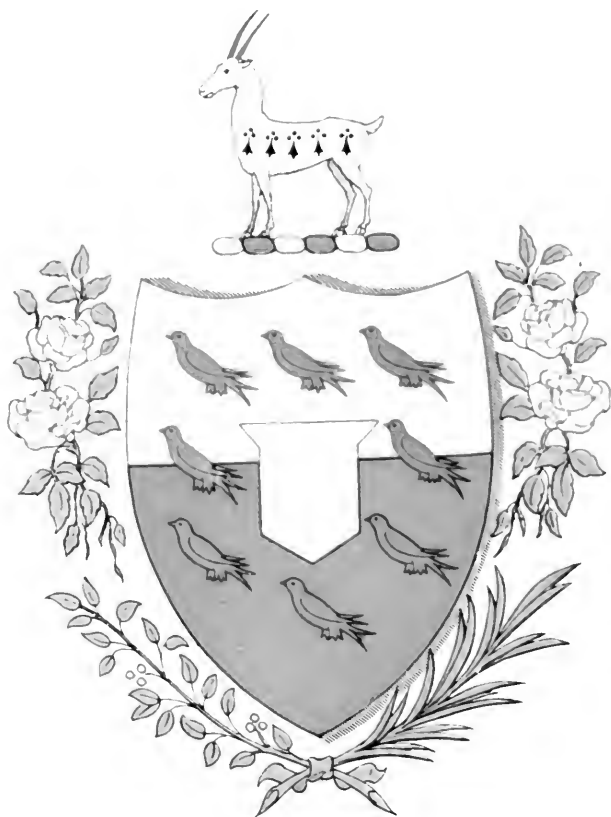

“Are you aware that one of the Boards was Andrew, Private Chaplain to Henry VIII., who was a great wit and from whom has descended the expression ‘Merry Andrew’? The house had been allowed to fall into terribly bad repair and the additions and stables and glass houses cost my father some $200,000!! It was his one hobby and being a good antiquarian he made a lovely place of it. It now belongs to a Mr. Strudy, a London stock broker.

“I remain yours faithfully,

“RG. NORTHALL LAURIE.

BOARD HISTORY.

CORNELIUS BOARD, OF BOARDVILLE, N. J. 173

FIRST GENERATION.

125000. CORNELIUS BOARD. He came from Sussex, England (Co. Wales), with his wife Elizabeth and two sons, James and David, in 1731, to discover copper mines for Lord Sterling, and settled first at Bloomfield, Essex Co., N. J., and later at Boardville, Pompton Township, Passaic County, N. J. He was a civil engineer and surveyor. Cornelius Board, the original Board emigrant, came to America from England in the year 1732. He was sent out under the patronage of Alexander Lord Sterling to search the mountains of northern New Jersey and southern New York for copper ore. He traveled up the Ramapo Valley, and on one of the head waters of the Ramapo creek he found not copper but iron in great abundance. The place of this find of iron ore he named Stirling after his patron, and he built there a forge in the year 1730 to 1736. The first iron made in that part of the country was made by Cornelius Board, and it is absolutely certain that this first Stirling Forge was the beginning of the works that later made iron for cannon and balls used during the Revolution; also for the great chain stretched across the Hudson at West Point. Original documents are deposited with the county clerk of the County of Orange, N. Y. These are in the shape of sworn evidence given at a great land line trial held in Chester in the year 1785, during which trial James and Joseph Board, sons of Cornelius, gave testimony from which are quoted the facts mentioned above as to the time and manner, etc., in which Cornelius Board came to America.

The Record of Deeds at Perth Amboy, N. J., says:

"Cornelius Board, on 17th of August, 1732, bought 15 $\frac{1}{2}$  acres of land 'at the little falls of Pisaack'. James Alexander, Surveyor General."

The History of Iron in all Ages in Proceedings of the New Jersey Historical Society for 1891, says:

"Cornelius Board was seeking for copper mines and bought, in 1732, 157 acres of land, half a mile along the Passaic River, at Little Falls, evidently in connection with a proposed iron industry. He also bought in 1737 several tracts along the Wanaque and Ringwood rivers, evidently for the iron in them and for water power. He sold in 1740, to Ringwood Company—the Ogdens of Newark—16 acres at Ringwood for £63."

The History of Orange County, N. Y., by E. M. Rittenber and L. H. Clark, says:

"Cornelius Board and his sons owned the land in the Pompton Valley, consisting of some fifteen hundred acres."

Records in office of the Secretary of State at Trenton, N. J., say:

"Cornelius Board and Elizabeth, his wife, gave a deed April 15, 1740, to Josiah Ogden and others of 16 acres at Ringwood. Witness, James Board."

"Jonathan Davis and Joseph Bertram, trustees of Cornelius Board, give deed to Elizabeth Board of Ringwood, Bergen County, N. J. Mentions will of Cornelius Board in which Joseph Board is sole executor (Jan. 29, 1744). James Board one of witnesses to deed, May 6, 1754."

"Joseph Board, of Bergen County, to Nicholas Gouverneur and others: 'Part of tract surveyed to Cornelius Board, deceased, on the 28th of Feb., 1739,' being same tract deeded to Elizabeth Board by Jonathan Davis and Joseph Bertram, trustees of Cornelius Board, Feb. 1, 1764."

"Jonathan Davis and Joseph Bertram, trustees of Cornelius Board, deceased, to Walter Ervin. May 6, 1754."

Probate Records say:

"Cornelius Board, by will, left property at Ringwood, Bergen Co., to be divided among his three sons. Ample provision is made for his kind and loving wife, Elizabeth Board, and after all debts are paid, 'the remaining part of my personal estate is to be divided into four parts as near to equality as possible,' and these four parts he gives and bequeaths one each to his four daughters. Youngest son Joseph made son executor."

Records at Perth Amboy, N. J., say:

"John Burnett to Cornelius Board, deed for 170 acres. Recorded in Liber K. 10, 20. Mich. Kearney, Dep. Sur.

"Deed. Y., often mentioned by historians as the scene of many noted events.) He was born Dec. 27, 1802, in Chester, N. Y. He married, Feb. 15, 1827, Caroline Board. 127010.

The History of Orange County, N. Y., says of him :

"His early life was spent at school, on his father's farm and in his father's grist mill. The year of his marriage Mr. Bull purchased 92 acres of land of Thaddens Seely in Blooming Grove, upon which he settled. He afterwards bought 118 acres of land adjoining his original purchase, and in 1830 he purchased 198 acres in Blooming Grove. On his original purchase was an iron ore mine which, in 1864, he sold to Peter P. Parrot, of Greenwood, N. Y. Mr. Bull followed agricultural pursuits during his life, and was a successful farmer, and an officer of the Orange County Agricultural Society. He was one of the original incorporators and stockholders of the Chester Bank, acted as its president for a short time, and was a director in its board from its founding until its death. He was a man of good judgment, and his financial abilities were acknowledged by business men. Mr. Bull was interested in all that pertained to the welfare of his town, county and state, and was looked upon as a leading citizen. He became a member of the Presbyterian Church of Chester in 1837, and his wife is (1881) one of the oldest living members of that body. For forty-two years he was a manager of the Orange County Bible Society for the town of Blooming Grove. In politics he was a Republican, and was a delegate to the state conventions of his party at different times. He was for many years a Justice of the Peace, and was also commissioner of deeds of his town."

At the time of his death the Goshen Democrat said:

"He was a good citizen and a leading man, was highly respected and would be greatly missed in the community in which he lived."

He married, in December, 1822, Huldah Hudson (daughter of Captain William Hudson and Susan Tuthill of Blooming Grove, Orange Co., N. Y.). She was born July 25, 1801.

The History of Orange County, N. Y., by Ruttenber & Clark, says of him:

"At the age of sixteen he went to learn the tanning and currying business at Washingtonville, Orange Co., N. Y., with Moses Ely, where he remained until he reached his majority, when he purchased 142 acres of land near his uncle's, upon which he resided until 1850. He was a thorough going farmer, and dealt considerably in cattle, and for fifteen years supplied West Point with meat. In 1849 he was selected to take charge of the Yelverton estate at Chester, and in 1850 removed to that village and engaged in mercantile pursuits, and freighting produce to New York, in which he continued until about 1874, when he retired from the more active duties of life. Mr. Board was one of the building committee of the Chester Academy in 1842 and was one of the board of trustees as long as the building was used as an academy. He sold the ground for the Presbyterian Church at Chester, it being a part of the Yelverton estate. He has been several times selected as administrator and executor of estates, and his integrity remains unimpaired in all his business transactions. Upon the erection of the town of Chester he took an active part and during its early history was officially connected with it. Mr. Board is a plain, unassuming man, who has preferred the quiet life of a business man and farmer to place in politics."

The History of Orange Co., N. Y., by E. M. Ruttenber & L. H. Clark (1881), says of him:

"Young Heard was five years old when his mother came to Goshen. During his boyhood he received a good education in the public schools at Goshen, but early decided to live a business life. His uncle, Anthony Dobbin, died, leaving no children, before John reached his majority, and thus he was looked upon by his aunt as the only male representative to take charge of the farm after the death of her husband. A portion of this farm is in the corporate limits of Goshen, and now forms a part of the village, upon which substantial residences have been built since its ownership by Mr. Heard. He has spent his entire life upon this farm since his first settlement there in 1812, the property coming to him from his aunt and mother. In 1877 he remodelled the old residence, adding a brick structure, and now has one of the most substantial and pleasant residences in Goshen. Although his life has been spent as a farmer, he has been interested and taken an active part in most local worthy enterprises tending to the prosperity of Goshen and the welfare of its citizens. He was an original member for many years of the Board of Trustees of the Presbyterian Church, until the building of the present church edifice, when he resigned, and has been a member of that church for thirty years. For several years he was a trustee of the Farmers' Hall Association at Goshen, and he has always been a promoter of education and religious interests in the community. For upwards of twenty years Mr. Heard has been one of the State Loan Commissioners for Orange County, and his judicious investment of funds has reflected much credit upon himself for his integrity and safe counsel in these business relations. In 1855 he was appointed by the court, with Hon. James G. Graham and Beverly Johnson, Esq., of Newburgh, as commissioners to assess the damages to land-owners by the laying out of the Short Cut Railway in Orange County. Also, in 1860, with Hon. Homer A. Nelson, then Secretary of State, and Hon. Charles W. Burton, both of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., to assess like damages on the Port Jervis and Monticello Railroad. Also, in 1871-72, with Hon. S. W. Fullerton and David A. Scott, Esq., both of Newburgh, to assess like damages on the Poughkeepsie and Eastern Railroad in Dutchess County. Also, in 1860, with D. A. Scott, Esq., of Orange, and Hon. Saxton Smith of Putnam County, to equalize the taxes of Dutchess County; and also in 1869-70, he was appointed with D. A. Scott, Esq., and others, to assess damages by laying out and other street matters in Newburgh. He was Assistant United States Revenue Assessor, 1860-9, President of the Orange County Agricultural Society one term, and one of the managing members many years, has been appointed by the court as commissioner and referee in every town in the county in highway matters; has acted as executor and administrator for several estates, and in all these places of trust and responsibility his integrity has remained unquestioned."

and well posted in it. The examination was conducted by Prof. Herbert L. Osgood of Columbia University, who last June mailed a list of books, which would be the basis of the examination, to each member of the chapter. Nine questions were asked at the examinations, which took place this month, and the answers, which were made in writing, were handed in at the end of three hours. The questions were searching, extending far back into the history of England. Prof. Osgood has charge of the course of study, which is for two years, and the student will receive a certificate at the close if the examinations are successfully passed. The course is equivalent to the junior and senior year in the same study at Columbia. The scholarship was named for Mrs. Donald McLean, regent of the New York city chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, as it was founded at her suggestion. Harper's Bazar, Nov. 19, 1899, says: "The first successful candidate for the Mrs. Donald McLean scholarship in American history, offered by the New York City Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is Miss Louise Winthrop Koues. Miss Koues has always been a student and lover of books, and of late years she has devoted much attention to American history and genealogy, and for this reason, determined to try for the new scholarship. She believes the way to become interested in general history is to study family history—the two are so closely connected. Her own genealogy is one to interest others as well as herself, as she is a lineal descendant of many notable men and women, tracing her line to titled and distinguished forefathers on the other side of the Atlantic, though it is of her early American progenitors that she feels proud in a quiet, modest way. On her father's side she is descended from Governor John Winthrop first Governor of the Massachusetts Bay settlement in 1630; also from Thomas Dudley, second Governor of Massachusetts Bay, whose eldest son, Rev. Samuel Dudley, married the only daughter of Governor Winthrop. Their daughter married Edward Hilton the elder, who is known as the 'Father of New Hampshire,' being the first settler in that district. Other paternal ancestors are Deputy Governor Samuel Symonds and his noted wife, Dorothy Harlakenden, of the old English family of that name. On her mother's side she goes back to the first settlers of Manhattan Island, through the old Knickerbocker families of Bogert, Bancker, and Johannes de la Montaigne, a Huguenot of rank, who fled to Holland from the French persecution, and thence to American shores where he married Rachel de Forest. Among her Revolutionary ancestors are William Keous—who spelled the name in the old-fashioned manner—a graduate of Harvard, class of 1768, and a member of the Brentwood committee of correspondence, February, 1775, and William Leacycroft, an officer of artillery in the Continental line in New York's "crack" regiment. He was present at the siege and surrender of Yorktown, and later, when peace was declared, was one of the founders of the Order of the Cincinnati. Miss Kenes was born in New Orleans, but her father was a native of Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and her mother a New Yorker. She has passed most of her life in New York, but went abroad to finish her education. She is much occupied in philanthropic and church work, and it was she who originated the idea and plan which have developed into the Woman's Auxiliary to the Board of Missions of the Episcopal Church. She is the first and only historian of the Governor Thomas Dudley Family Association, formed in 1892, which meets annually in Boston, and which numbers a long list of well-known members, such as President Eliot of Harvard, President Gilman of the Johns Hopkins University, Anson Phelps Stokes, Woodbury C. Langdon, and ex-Governor George Peabody Wetmore. At present she is busily pursuing her historical studies at Columbia and Barnard, having gained her scholarship through competitive examination there. She is enjoying the work so congenial to her. Residence, 1761, 2914 Broadway, New York City.

The History of Orange County, N. Y., says of him:

"He spent his early life upon the homestead. His education was acquired at the neighboring public schools, and later at Decker-town (N. J.) Academy. His tastes led him to follow the calling of a farmer to which his time and attention were entirely devoted. Industry combined with sagacity, and a thorough knowledge of his vocation, speedily won for him a marked success in life. Mr. Wheeler advanced with the age. All the modern scientific appliances which are instrumental to subduing the soil, and otherwise aiding the agriculturist, were utilized by him. On the death of his father he became the possessor of the ancestral estate. In politics he was a Republican. He was a quiet, modest, gentleman, averse to public life, and, consequently, having no political ambitions.

He was one of the original incorporators of the Warwick Valley Farmers' Milk Association, and of the Warwick Savings Bank, having been president of the latter institution. Ausburn Towner's History of Chemung County, N. Y., says of him:

"Jesse Owen came to Chemung, March 11, 1863, and with his father bought the 'Minniedale' farm and also a large lumber tract.

They were both engaged in farming and lumbering for many years. Jesse and his son James H. own the 'Minniedale' farm, and are largely engaged in butter dairying for special New York trade. On this farm Gen. Sullivan found 175 acres of corn, which he destroyed when he made his memorable march through the Chemung Valley in 1779. A few of the barn holes where the Indians buried their grain are yet plainly visible. One of the council-houses of the Six Nations was located near where the large barn is, a part of which barn was built by Capt. Daniel McDowell before the Indians left, forty-two of whom assisted him at the raising. The famous spring at which Captain McDowell and his Indian captors halted to rest, when he was being conveyed as a prisoner to Niagara in 1782, is also on this farm."

"John M. Board, of 41 West 14th St. at his home in Metuchen, N. J. He was seventy-nine years old. Mr. Board was one of the few men who had the opportunity to refuse a Presidential nomination. Under date of Feb. 1, 1855, he received the following letter:

"John M. Board: Dear Sir: At a caucus at the St. Nicholas Hotel, convened Feb. 1, for the purpose of selecting certain persons for candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States, your name was mentioned in a favorable light. Should you think it proper to have your name used as the next Whig candidate for that high office, please inform me at the earliest moment.

"I am yours truly,

"THOMAS RITCHINGS.

"Mr. Board was informed that he could have the nomination. He decided not to accept. He was more of a philanthropist than a politician, though for many years he was a Republican leader in New Jersey. He was a close friend of Horace Greeley.

"Born in Pompton Plains, he engaged in the real estate business. Afterwards he became a contractor in Hoboken. In 1854 he went to the Assembly. In 1868 he removed to Metuchen, and to abolish toll on the bridge across the Raritan River at New Brunswick he defrayed the expenses of maintaining the thoroughfare. He equipped men for the front when the war began, and aided their families during their absence.

"Mr. Board was proud of the fact that he was master of every musical instrument in general use. He was associated with the leading musical societies of New York, and was once organist and choir leader of the old North Dutch Church in Fulton street. He had been Chief Engineer of the Hoboken Fire Department, Under-Sheriff of Hudson County, President of the Widows' and Orphans' Fund and of the Exempt Firemen's Association. At one time he was wealthy.

"A New Jersey woman is the head of a Klondike expedition which left on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad today. She is a Black Hills miner and her name is Mary W. Board. The expedition is for the Copper River, where she expects to establish a colony near Osca, a Russian settlement. Miss Board will probably name her colony "Jersey," as she was born in Hoboken and has lived for many years at Metuchen.

"Miss Board has been mining for about ten years in the Black Hills, but stopped operations last year on account of a scarcity of funds. Her object in going to Klondike is to obtain sufficient means with which to carry on somewhat extensive operations in her Black Hills mines. Miss Board has outfitted her expedition of men and women for $450 each. Her contract includes food, clothing and simple mining machinery for a year. She is an intrepid woman about forty years old, who long ago gained a reputation for locating quartz and placer mines. Her faith centres in the Copper River, which, she declares, is rich in gold. There are several trained nurses in Miss Board's expedition, and other women, all of whom, she says, are quite as plucky and determined as the men.

"Miss Board has done the work of a lawyer in this city and New Jersey, although when she applied for admission to the Bar she was refused. She has never again asked for admission, but has prepared many important cases which have been heard in the courts. Her first trip to the Black Hills was made in the interest of a famous mining suit. She is the daughter of the late John M. Board, who refused the Whig nomination for President in 1855. Mr. Board was an intimate friend of Horace Greeley."

155330. NETTIE CARTER BOARD. 140171. Born Sept. 5, 1862.

AYER'S HISTORY.

This family name had a curious origin as is attested by ancient legend and chronicle. It came from no less a personage than William, the Conqueror, of England. There was a battle raging and William had a good many of them in which he took a personal hand himself. In this one some mailed warrior hit him a blow on his helmet and crushed it on his head and gave him great pain. His assailants were driven off and the first of his attendants to reach his side quickly loosened his helmet, and relieved him of the cruel pressure of the iron. William asked his name. "Truelove," was the reply. "Thou shalt be from Truelove called Ayer," said William, "for thou hast given me to breathe the pure air of heaven."

EIGHTH GENERATION.

185000. CAPT. J. JEFFREY AVRES. (Nathaniel, Richard, Nathaniel<sup>5</sup>, Moses<sup>4</sup>, John, Obadiah, John<sup>3</sup>). 1820001. He was born December 19, 1811, in Ulysses, Tompkins Co., N. Y. He married, in 1838 (o. 1839), by Rev. John P. Hudson, Cordelia Derby (daughter of Reuben and Abigail Derby of Williamsport Pa.).

At the time of his death a Williamsport newspaper said:

"Captain J. Jeffrey Avres was born in the town of Ulysses, Tompkins County, N. Y., December, 1811. He was married in this city in 1839, to Miss Cordelia Derby, daughter of Mr. Reuben Derby, the officiating clergyman being Rev. John P. Hudson. He resided in Ithaca till 1841, when he came to Williamsport to locate permanently. A complete history of his early business career in this city appeared in the Gazette and Bulletin in the spring of 1870, and as it was obtained direct from his own lips it can be relied upon as being strictly correct.

"It states that as early as 1842 he commenced the sale of books and stationery in a building erected by Messrs. Fullmer & Slate, on the corner now occupied by Ulman's Opera House, which was burned in 1866. In 1845, soon after the commencement of President Polk's administration, he was appointed postmaster, and served in that capacity four years. During that period he carried on his regular business in connection with the postoffice. On leaving the office in 1849, he disposed of his bookstore to Mr. Flint, for the purpose of devoting his attention more closely to the Lycoming Mutual Insurance Company, the agency of which he had received as early as 1846. He was the first local agent for that company in this place, and laid the foundation for a permanent business, which amounted to over $2,000,000 insured in 1868. His connection with this company ceased in 1869, being superseded by Henry W. Watson, Esq. He remained out of the book trade till October, 1851, when he again embarked in it in connection with Messrs. Anthony & Jones, and they carried on business in the building opposite the old United States Hotel, now the First National Bank building. In the course of time both the senior members retired, and the Captain became sole proprietor. His establishment rapidly grew in favor with the public, and became a place of great resort by all those seeking the news and current literature of the day. Many pleasing associations cluster around the memory of the 'old place' under the proprietorship of the Captain.

In March, 1862, Mr. A. D. Lundy, his son-in-law, became associated with him in business, under the firm of Ayres & Lundy. In 1866 they purchased the property on East Third street, of Mr. C. B. Bowman, where the book store and postoffice are now located. In April, 1867, the Captain was again appointed postmaster and confirmed by the senate, after numerous other nominees had been rejected. This last appointment he held up to the commencement of the administration of General Grant. The Captain often facetiously remarked that, notwithstanding he was a military man himself, having been appointed Captain of Company A, 163d Regiment New York Militia, as early as 1836, by Governor Marcy, when he was a resident of Tompkins County, such men as Generals Taylor and Grant failed to appreciate his services and removed him from office.

Soon after receiving his last appointment, the idea was formed of erecting a suitable building for a postoffice, something that the city stood greatly in need of. Through his energy the people of Williamsport are indebted for the present postoffice, which is acknowledged to be inferior to no other in the country, so far as convenience is concerned. Since its erection the postoffices of Lock Haven, Scranton, Westchester and several other places have been modeled after his design.

On the first of April, 1870, Messrs. Ayres & Lundy sold out their book, paper and stationery business to Mr. A. J. Weise, to give their entire attention to the insurance business, which was a very extensive one. A few months later, however, they were compelled to resume the book and stationery business at the old stand, owing to Mr. Weise not being able to fulfill his promises to them. The business was then carried on under the old firm until a few months ago, when Captain Ayres retired into private life, leaving both the book and insurance business in the hands of his son-in-law, Mr. A. D. Lundy.

"In the death of Captain J. Jeffrey Ayres, Williamsport has lost one of its most worthy and highly esteemed citizens. Mr. Ayres was not simply an ordinary man—one that can pass away from this earth and not be missed by those he leaves behind him, for he was one of those men who strive to make themselves of some use in this world. He was an earnest Christian worker and as one of the trustees of the Second Presbyterian Church, this city, of which he became a member February 17, 1842, by certificate from his church in Ithaca, N. Y., no man could have displayed better ability for the position. It was a 'labor of love' to him, as nothing so cheered his heart as the finding of an opportunity to be of some benefit to the church, either through work or from his purse, for he was very liberal and gave not grudgingly. His disposition was a cheerful one, and it was a rare thing to find him unprepared with a joke or some lively and entertaining remarks—in fact, there were very few better and more entertaining conversationalists than Captain Ayres: he was a close reader and a vigilant watcher of what was transpiring at home and abroad; no matter what the subject of conversation might be he seemed to possess sufficient knowledge of it to entitle him to a respectful hearing. In brief, Williamsport has lost a useful citizen—one whose absence will be missed and sincerely mourned."

At the time of her death a Williamsport newspaper said:

"Mrs. Cordelia D. Ayres, of this city, died at about 12 o'clock Saturday. Her illness was of three years' duration. Three years ago she was traveling in Europe and in crossing the English channel was seized with a severe nausea, from the effects of which she never entirely recovered. From that time she began to fail and her strength decreased gradually until finally, Saturday, her frail hold on mortal life was loosened and her spirit passed into eternity. She was about 73 years of age.

"The deceased was, before her marriage, Miss Cordelia Derby. She was the daughter of Reuben and Abigail Derby, who came to this city from New York state in 1834. In 1838 she was married to Jeffrey J. Ayres. Mr. and Mrs. Ayres lived two years in Ithaca, N.

Y., whence they returned to Williamsport in 1840. Mr. Ayres opened the first book and stationery store in the city, an establishment which is still in existence. He served two terms as postmaster of the city. Mr. Ayres died August 24, 1851. His high character, consistency and decided personality are pleasantly remembered by all the older citizens of the city. Both of Mrs. Ayres' parents died here.

"Mrs. Ayres was a lady of true piety and of mental and moral worth. She was a useful member of the Second Presbyterian Church, and extended her influence, so far as health would permit, into the various charitable avenues of service for which the ladies of Williamsport are so well known. Only two weeks ago she was again chosen vice-president of the home for the friendless, a position which she had filled very ably several successive terms. She also gave great attention to Sunday school matters and was a thorough Bible scholar, so much so that she was a recognized authority."

At the time of his death the Elmira Evening Star said:

“Of Mr. Ayres, Ausborn Towner, in his biographical sketches, says:

“Some allusion has already been made to this citizen of Elmira, one of its old time merchants, his name appearing conspicuously in the records of the First M. E. Church, to which he has had a life long attachment, and of which he has always been a zealous and conscientious supporter, and in the village official position that he has filled with credit to himself and satisfaction to the community. His family name had a curious origin, as is attested by ancient legend and chronicle. It came from no less personage than William, the Conqueror, of England, himself. There was a battle raging and William had a good many of them in which he took a personal hand himself. In this one some mailed warrior hit him a blow on his helmet that crushed it in on his head and gave him a great pain. His assailants were driven off and the first of his attendants to reach his side quickly loosened his helmet and relieved him of the cruel pressure of the iron. William asked his name. ‘Truelove,’ was the reply. ‘Thou shalt be from Truelove called Eyer,’ said William, ‘for thou hast given me to breathe again the pure air of heaven.’

“Mr. Ayres’ branch from the family coming down the original Ayr is one that can be traced back clearly and without a break for 300 years. There was a John Ayres or Ayre, born in England in 1590, in Wiltshire, where the seat of the original Eyre was located. The family there then was a large and strong one. This John Ayre came to America in 1636, and that same year there was born to him a son who was named Obediah.

“The last named son, Nathaniel, born in 1787, was the father of Socrates Ayres, who was born in Ulysses, Tompkins County, New York, October 14, 1814. The mother of Socrates Ayres was Lucretia Beckwith, who was born on November 7, 1792, and was married to Nathaniel Ayres October 28, 1813.

“Nathaniel and Lucretia Ayres, both inheriting some of the best blood of this country, lived and died on their farm near Trumansburg, N. Y. Their son, Socrates, remained on the same place until he was seventeen years of age, which was in the year 1831. He was then apprenticed to a jeweler for a term of four years. He completed his apprenticeship and attained his majority in the same year and coming to Elmira, entered upon the chosen business of his life. His health suffered somewhat from close attention to his affairs and after a year and a half in Elmira he returned to his father's farm for six months to recuperate. With repaired strength in the fall of 1837 he opened a place of business in Penn Yan, remaining there until August, when he once more took up his residence in Elmira, not again to leave it. He purchased the business of Francis Collingwood. Including his apprenticeship his active business life extended over a period of sixty years. His place of business on the eastern side of the Water street end of Lake street bridge was for thirty years under his control, and so conspicuous in many ways that the older residents of the city even now refer to the spot as 'Ayres' corner'.

"He was one of the earliest insurance agents that established that line of business in the valley, having always and retaining to this day companies on his list of the highest standing."

"Mr. Ayres also did business on the south side of Water street between Baldwin and Lake. About twelve years ago he located on West Water street near Main.

"Mr. Ayres was politically a man of strong convictions, but quiet and never sought public office. He was at one time treasurer of the village, but shrank from the contentions of elective positions. He was originally a Democrat, but became one of the first Republicans voting for John C. Fremont in 1856. He retained this political affiliation to his death.

"The deceased was the oldest member of the First Methodist Church and since his coming to Elmira sixty-two years ago, has been connected prominently with its work. His official relations cover a period of many years and only with advancing age was his activity lessened. His co-workers were among the strong men of the past, such men as Dr. Hollis S. Chubbuck, Elias Huntley, William Viall, John K. Perry, William Foster and many another long since rewarded.

"To the church Mr. Ayres and his faithful, devoted wife, brought their infant children for baptismal consecration and in them reared those children according to the precepts of the Holy Scriptures. Mrs. Houghton, their only daughter, is the wife of a prominent Methodist clergyman, and the Methodist church here and elsewhere has known the influence of this early Methodist home. When the Ayres family began their life in this community the church was comparatively primitive. But the young life of such families as that of Mr. Ayres wrought strength and progress in their faithful services. Those were the days when the wives opened their houses to the social life of the church and when the thimble and needle wrought in the cause. And the Ayres home was open to any demand and its maker and keeper untiring.

"Mr. Ayres was a man of most gentle manners, quiet and refined in appearance and courteous to all. In prosperity or adversity, joy or affliction, his bearing was marked by calmness and dignity. He bore with patient fortitude the losses the years brought him of friends and physical strength, and to the last exemplified the nature that can uncomplainingly endure.

"The death of Mr. Ayres practically closes a family history that has been interwoven with business, social, philanthropic and religious life in this city. His children can bear in their lives the fruits of such home care and instruction as they have known, but not in the unity of household aims as when they who were its head were here. Other homes, other endeavors, other service, but not the same. Yet the memories and influence of the past are beyond the power of death."

The Elmira Telegram said:

"Elmira was called upon yesterday to mourn the loss of one of her oldest and most respected citizens. Socrates Ayres, who for many years had resided at No. 320 Lake street, after a long life, quietly passed away at his home yesterday morning about 10 o'clock.

"Mr. Ayres was born near Trumansburg, on his father's farm, in 1814. He remained there until seventeen years of age, and then spent four years as an apprentice to a jeweler during which time he thoroughly learned the business of a watchmaker and jeweler. At the age of twenty-one he came to Elmira and embarked in his chosen business. After a year and a half, owing to ill health, he was forced to return to his father's farm, to regain his strength. Later, in the fall of 1837, he opened a jewelry business in Penn Yan, where he remained until 1844. He then came to Elmira again, and had resided here ever since. For over thirty years he conducted a good business at what is now the corner of Lake and Water streets, and including his apprenticeship. Mr. Ayres's active business life extended over a period of sixty years. His store became so well known that the older residents still speak of the location as 'Ayres's corner'. It was robbed on one or two occasions, and also injured by fire, but through misfortunes and reverses, Mr. Ayres kept on the even tenor of his way, always meeting his engagements and making a record for integrity and manliness unsurpassed by any citizen of Elmira.

Mr. Ayres was one of the first insurance agents in this part of the country, and always retained the companies of the very highest standing on his list. It is worthy of remark that with Mr. Ayres there began their business life a number of young men who, if not eminently successful always, have shown in their business careers the effect of an elevated example set by their employer. Among these may be named Samuel B. Taylor and Henry E. Drake, the latter of whom while in business manifested the possession of an exquisite taste and judgment that if continued should have placed him at the head of dealers in his line. It is to be said also that Buren R. Sherman, who afterwards became governor of the state of Iowa, was an apprentice to Mr. Ayres in the mystery and art of the jewelers' and watchmakers' trade. After moving from the corner described, Mr. Ayres was for ten years located on the south side of Water street, midway between Lake and Baldwin streets, and from there, with his son joined with him in business, went west of Railroad avenue, where he remained until forced to give up active business when he retired, his son continuing in the business. Mr. Ayres in 1841, while living in Penn Yan, was married to Miss Susan Harris, a daughter of Seth Harris, of Pine Plains, who was the manufacturer of the famous Harris scythes. Six children were the result of their union. There came to Mr. and Mrs. Ayres on May 30, 1891, an event that seldom touches the lives of persons of this age. They celebrated the golden anniversary of their wedding day, and the manifestations of pleasure and congratulation made by their numerous friends were such that could have followed a half century of united lives that shed happiness wherever their influence fell and indicated a continuance of peace and contentment for the long period that are as delightful as they are unusual to contemplate. Mr. Ayres for more than sixty years has been a member of the Methodist Church, sincere in his regard for its beliefs, conscientious in all of the observances it prescribes, bringing up his children 'in the fear and admonition of the Lord,' and liberal toward the support of the society that upheld the tenets and obligations to which he has been attached. Very soon after he came to Elmira he was made an official of what has since become the First Methodist Church, and in one capacity or another he has served that organization for about fifty years. His death is a source of deep regret to all, though it was but the peaceful ending of a well-spent life."

At the time of her death the Elmira Advertiser said:

"A large circle of acquaintances will learn with feelings of regret and sadness of the death of Mrs. Socrates Ayres which occurred at her home yesterday morning.

"This much respected woman had been for many years a resident of the city of Elmira and had been as highly esteemed as she had been widely known. Just as Good Friday was dawning, death, an expected and not unwelcome visitant, released her waiting spirit and she entered into rest. She had lived for nearly four score years and all the long pathway of her life had been brightened by the sweet affections of home and friends and by that charity which decks with rarest beauty the quiet spots of private life. Her lengthening years led her not to doubt and gloom, but heavenward to the sunny uplands of a restful trust. Hers was the unflinching faith that shines amid all the natural infirmities of age and gilds with the serenest rays the sunset hours of life. The poet Addison sent for a friend to come to his bedside, and see how a Christian died. It was the pious boast of Wesley, the founder of the sect of which Mrs. Ayres was so long a prominent and useful member, that 'our people die well'. Thus closed this good woman's life. She bore with fortitude and resignation the sufferings of her final illness, and saw the end approach, as one whose 'soul is stayed in perfect peace'. For several days she lay in unconsciousness, but on Sunday evening she awoke from this state, with faculties clearly recognizing the nearness of the other world, she called her family to her bedside and bade each a separate farewell with words of comfort and counsel—a scene beautiful and touching—faith triumphant in the valley of the shadow of death.

©Mrs. Susan Harris Ayres was born Oct. 19, 1815, at Pine Plains, Dutchess County, N. Y., and belonged to a family of high distinction and social prominence in early American history. She married Socrates Ayres while residing in Penn Yan, May 30, 1841, from which place she came with her husband to Elmira in 1844, where they have spent nearly half a century in a life of domestic happiness and pleasant social relations, rich in many years, in good deeds, and in the love and respect of a whole community. Mrs. Ayres is survived by her husband, Socrates Ayres, Susan, her daughter, wife of Rev. Oscar A. Houghton, D.D.L. of Syracuse, William Emmet Ayres of Syracuse, and Frederick S. Ayres of Elmira, her sons. To these immediate relatives, and other familiar friends who deeply share with them in their bereavement, there will not fail to go forth the sympathies of a wide circle of acquaintances. For the death of Mrs. Ayres awakens in many a mind tender reminiscences of dear ones who in days long ago went in the same ways of duty and took sweet counsel together. How true it is that the place where the living come nearest together is where they gather by the graves of their dead.

For nearly fifty years, Mrs. Ayres was an active and most useful member of the First Methodist Church of this city, and was to the last a generous and laborious supporter of the religious and benevolent activities of the society. Should some future local historian describe justly the work that the Christian women of Elmira have done for the alleviation of sorrow and the reformation of the erring, and trace the pathways of domestic and churchly duties in which so many of them have gone on errands of mercy and love, what a record of faithful living would the recital make! In such a history of this city, this good woman's name would merit an honored place. All who knew her know that her greatest desire was to make her life do something to lessen the evil of earth and increase its good. The readers of this paper know, generally, the heroic struggle made for years by the members of the congregation to which Mrs. Ayres belonged. In those struggles, the work done by the women of the society was such as brought their money, talents, time and energies under constant contribution to the needs of the church. One generation of women put unstintingly their best powers into the efforts to save the church from financial failure. The history of that sacrifice will never be written, but at this time it is fitting to pay tribute to the untiring energy and unwearied devotion of these noble women, among whom it is no disparagement to say, Mrs. Ayres was a trusted leader in devising and executing plans of religious activity. But her efforts for good were far from being limited to this field of usefulness. Wherever womanly work, done in womanly ways, counts for good her influence was felt. She did what she could—and that was much. So her name will be often on the lips and her memory will long be precious in the hearts of those who knew best—a devoted wife, a loving mother, a kind neighbor, and a faithful Christian. The funeral will be held at the family residence, 32 Lake street, Monday, April 3, at three o'clock in the afternoon. Interment will be at the convenience of the family. No odor of fairest flowers is sweeter than the fragrant memory of such a pure and holy life.

Children:

1857. HENRY HENRY M. ALLER. He was born in 1827, in Schuyler County, N. Y. He graduated at Genesee College. He married Lucinda Aves. 1858. State Senator in Kansas. Collector of Internal Revenue. Presidential Elector. Member of Missouri Constitutional Convention. Judge of Platte County.

At the time of his death a Leavenworth daily newspaper said:

"Judge Aller's devotion to duty was almost remarkable. When hardly able to stand alone he did not shrink from the labors of his official position. On Saturday morning he rode in a carriage to the walk leading from Fifth street to the city jail and with assistance walked from there to the court room. He held court, and although his voice was weak his decisions were clearly and concisely given. After court he visited the office of the chief of police at headquarters where he received his check for December salary and before handing it to his son Henry, who was present, endorsed it with an apparently steady hand. A gentleman present suggested to him that it would be better for him to remain at home and not try to attend to his court duties until he got stronger. He replied that it made him feel stronger afterwards to get out and stir around in the open air. He got in his carriage shortly afterward and was taken home, accompanied by his son. That was his last visit to police headquarters.

"On Sunday afternoon Justice Johnson was requested to take his place on the bench on Monday, and on Monday afternoon the faithful police judge was dead. He passed away without apparent pain, surrounded by his wife and children. The sad news was soon spread throughout the city and many were the expressions of genuine sorrow and regret: for whatever his faults, Judge Aller was generous and 'good-hearted' and the people thought much of him.

"Henry M. Aller was born in Schuyler County, New York, in 1827, and was therefore in his 70th year. While a boy he worked on a farm and in a tannery. At the age of seventeen he taught school, and later attended Genesee College, from which he was graduated with the degree of A.M. After leaving college he taught school at Elmira and founded the Aller Academy at that place.

"In 1860 he came west and located in Platte County, Mo. He became president of the Pleasant Ridge College near Weston and took up reading the law in the office of Col. James N. Burns.

"When the war broke out Judge Aller took sides with the Union cause and was appointed by President Lincoln collector of internal revenue. He held this position throughout the war and resigned to accept the position of judge of Platte County, to which he was appointed by Gov. Fletcher. He resigned this position to engage in the building of the Chicago & Southwestern railroad from the Missouri river to Davenport, which is now a part of the Rock Island system.

"While in Missouri he was elected to the constitutional convention, but declined to serve, and he also declined two nominations for the legislature. He came to Leavenworth to live in 1871. He was general agent for the Rock Island road and was one of the officials charged with the management of the Missouri and Kansas bridge. He was at one time the owner and publisher of the Leavenworth Evening Press.

"Judge Aller was an active Republican and during the 80's was elected from Leavenworth County to the state senate and served four years. He once received the Republican nomination for mayor. In the national campaign of 1892 Judge Aller was the Republican elector for this district. During the last two years of Governor Humphrey's administration he served as police judge, and when the Republicans got control of the police board two years ago he was reappointed.

"Judge Aller was a Mason. He belonged to the lodge in Weston."

Another newspaper of the same city said :

"Judge Aller was in his seventieth year, having been born in Schuyler County, N. Y., in 1827. As a youth he worked on a farm and in a tannery and was graduated from the Genesee College. He founded the Elmira Academy at Elmira, N. Y. In 1860 he came West and located at Weston, Mo., and for several years was president of Pleasant Ridge Academy in Platte County. He was appointed collector of revenue by President Lincoln and a judge of Platte County by Governor Fletcher. In 1871 he moved to Leavenworth and was agent for the Rock Island railroad. In the 80's he was elected to the state senate and served four years. He was police judge during Governor Humphrey's administration. He was a Mason. His wife and two children, Mrs. Neely Todd and Henry Aller, survive."

The Kansas City Times (Leavenworth correspondent) said:

"Judge Aller came to Leavenworth nearly thirty years ago, being at the time connected with the surveying corps of the Rock Island. Later he became the superintendent of the Missouri and Kansas bridge and the road's local agent. He had been more or less prominently identified with Republican politics in the state, and about eight years ago secured a survey for 'short' line to Denver, which, while practicable, could not be brought into life, owing to a failure to obtain the needed capital. Two years ago he was appointed police judge of this city. He leaves a wife and two children, Mrs. N. W. Todd and Henry J. Aller, Jr."

He died Jan. 4, 1897. She resided, 1898, Leavenworth, Kan. Residence, Leavenworth, Kan.

Children:

- 1857-71. Henry. Born in 1858. Married. They had one child, born in 1897 or 8. At the time of his death a Leavenworth newspaper said: "Henry Aller was born at Pleasant Ridge College, near Weston, Mo., in 1858, and removed with his parents to this city in 1871. He received his education in the public schools of Leavenworth, and later was in the employ of the Bittman Todd Grocery Company. After serving several years with the firm he was interested with J. Stephens in the cellulose mattress business. Mr. Aller was received in the Methodist Church in 1884 by the Rev. C. B. Mitchell, and was very popular in church circles, and was for several years a director of the Y. M. C. A. In 1896 Mr. Aller started a mission school in the vicinity of the North Leavenworth coal mine, and took a great interest in this work and supported the school from his own purse. The death of Henry Aller came as a shock to most of this community, as he was prominent in business circles and had a vast concourse of friends. He leaves a wife and an infant child, in addition to a mother and sister."

185073. Sue E. Died Sept. 14, 1882. The Leavenworth Press gives the following account of the runaway accident which resulted in her death: "The house of our Chief is enveloped by the pall of death, and cheeks that were all aglow with happiness but a few hours ago, are now blanched in the presence of death, while eyes that sparkled with joy, are blind with weeping. It was one of the cruellest visitations of the remorseless messenger—him of the hour-glass and scythe—that it has ever been our misfortune to chronicle. To gaze upon that young face, beautiful even in death, and to contemplate that the vital current that but a few short hours ago thrilled with life and joy that now rigid form had ceased to flow forever, makes the task of relating the appalling accident one of extreme cruelty. The details of this terrible accident were briefly as follows: Miss Sue Aller, one of Leavenworth's most accomplished young ladies, daughter of Hon. H. M. Aller, proprietor of The Press, and Mr. Wm. F. Spencer, of the drug house of Spencer & Co., of this city, were on their way to attend the open air concert at the Fort. The horse they were driving, a high lived animal, owned by Mr. Spencer, when about three hundred yards south of the bridge that spans the Narrow Gauge railway track, midway between the city and Fort, from some unknown cause, became frightened and dashed down the hill leading to the bridge at a terrible speed. When near the bottom of the hill, in his endeavors to control the frightened horse, Mr. Spencer broke the right hand line, and before he could release the strain on the left hand line, the horse had been pulled over to the west side of the bridge, through the wooden railing of which he crashed, taking with him to the railway track some twenty feet below, the buggy and its ill-fated occupants. This occurred a few minutes before 8 o'clock in the evening, and no one was present to witness the terrible plunge over the bridge. Miss Aller was driven as rapidly as possible from the scene of the accident to her home, where all that the combined medical skill of Drs. Thomas, A. C. VanDuyn, S. F. Few and O. C. McNary could suggest, was done for the lovely sufferer, but to no avail, for as the clock tolled ten the angel death relieved her from further sufferings. She never spoke a word after the accident and neither by motion or sign gave evidence of consciousness. Her injuries were chiefly confined to the neck and head. Her skull received a bad fracture, a portion of it being driven into the brain, which, upon being removed by the physician, seemed to afford some relief to the sufferer, as she breathed easier and uttered a low moan, the first audible evidence of life she had manifested after being taken from under the carriage. This is a terrible blow to Judge Aller and his family, who all idolized Susie. She was the joy and light of the family circle; intelligent and noble hearted, she was universally esteemed and loved." The Leavenworth Times at the time of her death said: "The sad accident which bereft our city of one of its purest gems, and leaves an estimable young gentleman hovering between this world and the great silent beyond, is yet fresh in the memory of the readers of The Times. On Sunday afternoon the funeral of Miss Sue E. Aller, who lost her life in that fatal ride, toward Fort Leavenworth, took place from the residence of Hon. H. M. Aller, her father, on Pine Street, between Third and Fourth. The sad effects of the accident were so far reaching into the hearts of social circles that the attendance was unusually large, in fact the assemblage was the largest ever seen at a funeral in any private family in the city. Rev. W. H. Thomas preached the funeral sermon, during which he paid a high tribute to the memory of the deceased, remembering her spotless character and the void her absence will create among the people who appreciate the good that comes of little acts of kindness from a pure motive."

At the time of his death the Springfield Journal said: "The funeral of Mr. Grover Ayers, Jr., at the Central Baptist Church Saturday was largely attended, the church being crowded to its utmost capacity. This young man who grew up among you, the schoolmate in the public and Sabbath school had a character of remarkable purity. There could not be found upon it a stained spot. There was a nobleness of character that revealed itself to all and cannot be forgotten. He allowed his ripest thoughts to go out beyond the present. There lived in him a grand, noble, moral courage, and his nature craved something higher than even a pure life, and he stood up before the congregation and said, 'I want to be a Christian'. Though he had not connected himself with any church he was a Christian, and he has left his young gentlemen schoolmates an example that may be followed with safety. He was the peer of any of his associates intellectually, but he was ready to lay that intellect at the feet of his God. He had a noble ambition to cultivate the intellect that God had given him. All that has gone down with him, but let us hope in the life before him his highest aspirations will be realized. The speaker closed with a pathetic exhortation to the relatives, friends and schoolmates of the deceased to follow his example of life."

NINTH GENERATION.

190000. REV. OSCAR ALLEN HOUGHTON. He was born May 15, 1841, at Trenton, N. Y. He graduated at Genesee College, and received the degree of A.M. in 1872, and Ph.D. in 1882 from Syracuse University. He registered at college from Carthage, N. Y. While in college he was a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity and the Mystic Society. He married, Sept. 1, 1869, Susan Ayres, 185028. Minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He was stationed at Wolcott, N. Y., 1869-70; Syracuse First Church, 1870-2; Geddes, 1872-5; Baldwinsville, 1875-6; Ithaca State Street Church, 1876-7; Syracuse Centenary, 1877-80; Clyde, 1880-3; Elmira Hedding Church, 1883-6. He travelled in Europe in 1886. He enlisted in the United States Volunteer service but was rejected on examination.

At the time of her death the Cortland Evening Standard said :

"Mrs. Houghton was born July 7, 1843. She was the daughter of Socrates and Susan Harris Ayres. Mr. Ayres was born in Trumansburg, where his ancestors settled and where descendants of the family are still found. A family genealogy now in process of publication and largely edited by Mrs. Houghton traces the family history in unbroken line to Wiltshire, England, 1590. The family of Susan Harris lived in Pine Plains, Dutchess Co. Mrs. Houghton's parents were married in 1841 and for the three following years lived in Penn Yan, N. Y., where Mrs. Houghton was born. The family moved to Elmira in 1844 and there Mr. Ayres established a jewelry and insurance business which he conducted for over forty years. Mrs. Houghton was educated in the public schools of Elmira and the Elmira College, graduating from the college in 1863 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. She was married to Rev. Oscar A. Houghton, at that time pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Wolcott, N. Y., Sept. 1, 1869. Since then Dr. Houghton has served churches as follows: Syracuse (First ward, and West Genesee street), Ithaca, Syracuse (Centenary), Clyde, Elmira (Hedding Church and also Centenary Church), Auburn, and North Avenue Congregational Church, Cambridge, Mass.

"In all these places Mrs. Houghton was the efficient helper of her husband and left many sincere friends.

"Mrs. Houghton's student abilities were well known. Her special field was American and English constitutional history. While living in Syracuse in 1893-5 she took resident postgraduate study in Syracuse University under Prof. Wm. H. Mace. Her major subject was American constitutional history and her minor subject English mediæval history. In 1895 she successfully passed oral and written examinations for the degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy. Prior to that time she had spent several years in the study of French history, particularly the period of the French Revolution. Last June her scholastic attainments were further recognized by an election to the honorary society of Phi Beta Kappa. She was unable by reason of her failing health to present herself for initiation.

"In 1886 Mrs. Houghton spent some time in travel and study in Germany and the Netherlands. The following year she traveled in England, Scotland, Wales and France, spending some time in Paris. In the winter of 1897 and 98 she was the travelling companion of Mrs. Esther B. Steele of Elmira in Mexico and the far West, contributing in the meantime to various periodicals. She was greatly interested in Mexican history and became a recognized authority in that subject. She prepared parlor lectures on American, Mexican and English history, and on home missionary work as she observed it on the Pacific coast, which were delivered in various places, receiving high commendations from the press, and from intelligent auditors.

"Mrs. Houghton has suffered deeply in the immediate past few years in the loss of many family relatives, her father, mother, one brother, aunt and two cousins all having died within five years. She leaves beside her husband, Rev. O. A. Houghton, D.D., a son, Harris A. Houghton, a fourth-year student in the College of Medicine, Syracuse University, two brothers, Frederick S. Ayres of Elmira and Wm. E. Ayres of New York.

"During her four years' residence of Cortland, Mrs. Houghton has greatly endeared herself to a large circle of friends, not only in her own church but in the community at large, as well. Her bright and vivacious manner, her cordial and genial ways, her sincerity and true friendliness were all calculated to win and hold friends. She was a charming conversationalist, and her extensive and intelligent reading and wide information on almost every subject made it profitable as well as delightful."

The Elmira Advertiser contained a lengthy obituary notice written and signed by one of Mrs. Houghton's girlhood friends in that city, Mrs. George Archibald. We quote some portions of this as follows:

"In Elmira, which was her birthplace, and her home until her marriage, knowledge of her death brings especial sadness. There remain in this city those who remember her in her bright and promising girlhood, those who were her associates in youth and middle age, and some bound to her by ties of kindred. Besides these there are many who in later years have known the unusual quality of her womanhood and felt the superiority of her intellect. None of these but will speak of her today with a sense that something gifted and gracious has passed beyond.

"Susan Ayres was born July 7, 1843, daughter of Socrates Ayres and of Susan Harris, his wife. Her father was long prominent among Elmira's business men and was well known as a member of the First Methodist Church, with which he was connected not far from a half century. There lives in Elmira a woman who remembers the day when he and his wife, then young people but years married, took their babe Susan to the church altar for baptism.

"This child was educated in the Elmira schools and was a graduate of Elmira College. In 1867, Oscar A. Houghton, a young man just beginning the work of ministry, supplied the First Methodist Church pulpit for six months. Shortly after this Susan Ayres became his wife. This marriage removed Mrs. Houghton from the city, yet she has always been a frequent visitor here, and sustained close relations to former friends and an undiminished love for the old places.

Indeed her returns have seemed like those of one who, from time to time, simply came to her own again.

"Twice Dr. Houghton has been appointed to Elmira charges, serving a full term at Hedding Church and a year at Centenary. This renewed former companionships and revived former attachments.

"Of the fulness and achievements of Mrs. Houghton's life much might be written. She was a woman highly endowed and with a capacity for development rarely equalled. Nature intended her for a student and so far as life allowed she became one. Her intellectual discernments were quick and true. Her patience in following their leadings was untiring. On the day when her son and only child, Harris, was graduated from Syracuse University, Mrs. Houghton took a degree there, won by a course of study such as few women accomplish. To the time when the inroads of disease made application no longer possible, she still earnestly sought to know more of the things beloved evermore of scholars.

"But not in books alone did Mrs. Houghton learn. In travel and in observation she delighted to add to her store of knowledge and the lessons she pondered were full of inspiration to those with whom she spoke of them. In the ripeness of her thought her desire turned to usefulness, and the educative plans of her future were the plans of one who hoped to move the thoughts of others to refining and uplifting effort. These plans were broken off by death.

"For about two years Mrs. Houghton has suffered from the illness that has ended her earthly life. Every known resort of medical science failed to do more than temporarily relieve, and for a few months hold the disease in abeyance. Through the fluctuations of hope and fear she herself has been aware of the fatal possibility. With bright courage she looked toward life when life seemed coming back, with still submission toward death when she saw it sure to conquer. Only those who knew her well enough to know the indwelling, spiritual things of her soul can appreciate the experience of that submission.

"It is difficult to speak of the hidden, sacred experiences of any mortal when death has closed the book. It is unfitting to speak much of them when she, of whom they are spoken, held them apart. What they were must be inferred from what she was. And Mrs. Houghton was a woman of noble soul. Bright, positive, independent in thought and action, she held in her heart the tenderest love for her friends, the capacity for sacrifice and the supremest loyalty. She was incapable of the mean word of gossip, of insincere profession of any sort.

"Honor, fealty, sweetness at the core! In the memories of those who loved her, thoughts of her will bring remembrance of those graces—hers of nature and by the blessing of spiritual attainment."

Children:

195091. Clara. The following interesting letters on family history were written by her: "109 Luck Ave., Zanesville, Ohio, July 9, 1901. Murray E. Poole, Ithaca, N. Y. Dear Sir:—In the July number of the New England Historic and Genealogical Magazine is the notice over your name of the publication of genealogies of various names. Among them Ayers—and I am writing to you hoping you will be able with your researches to make connection with my family. My great-grandfather, Jacob Ayers, came to this county at the close of 1795 from Salisbury, N. C. I have a letter from his father Moses written to Jacob in 1803 from Salisbury giving various family items, back of that after working seven or eight years, I am unable to go. I have two contracts between Wade Hampton and Jacob Ayers dated 1792. I wrote to General Hampton and sent copies of these papers. He wrote me they were signed by his grandfather. Now this is my line as I know it: Moses and Doreas Ayers; Jacob and Innocent; Nathaniel and Mary Ramey; Monroe and Louisiana Coburn. My father's oldest brother wrote me a few years ago, (he has since died,) that he heard his grandfather say, that is Jacob of above, that the Ayers came from New Jersey to North Carolina, and that they left land there if any of them wanted to go back and claim it. Two strong traditions I have always heard, that the family is Scotch—and though it is absurd, I will give it for it may help, of royal descent. I have written a great many letters to North Carolina, and while some of the parties to whom I applied have promised to help me, I have learned positively nothing. I had a continued correspondence at one time with Mr. Geo. A. Gordon of Boston about my mother's family. He suggested that my Ayers ancestors may have come with the several hundred Scotch families that settled in North Carolina, refugees from the Stuart rebellion in Scotland of 1745. Yet my uncle David who was past eighty when he wrote, says the family moved to North Carolina from New Jersey. Now I am writing to you as a dernier ressort. I am not able to go down to North Carolina and make researches and letters sent there do no good. Hoping to hear from you, I remain very sincerely yours, CLARA AYERS." 1109 Luck Ave., Zanesville, Ohio, July 15. Dear Sir:—Yours of the 11th inst. received. In giving me my 'line' I am sure there is a generation missing between 'Moses, born 1706, and Jacob. The letter I spoke of in my first, written by Moses to his son Jacob from Salisbury, N. C., was dated July 7, 1803. According to that my great-great-grandfather must have been nearly one hundred years old, which is scarcely possible. He speaks of sons David, Samuel, William, Moses and wife Tanache and son Reyle, Mercy and Hugh living in his neighborhood. It is the descendants of these I have tried to reach but have failed. I give this as affording a possible clue.

Where is that missing grandfather with their greats? Yours,
 CLARA AYERS 77 7109 Luck Ave., Zanesville, Ohio, July 18.
 DEAR SIR — Enclosed is a rough draft of my branch of the Ayers family. It is very incomplete in details because I have had so little communication with my father's family. To tell the truth I am not at all satisfied with a genealogy with a "missing link." I trace my mother's family back to Roger Conant, "clear as a bell," and I should like to do the same with the Ayers line. I was told there was a prominent Ayers family living in Danville, Va. Was advised by some one in North Carolina to write to Mrs. John Penn, Regent of D. A. R., Danville, Va., for information, but I had written so many letters and gotten no information I gave up discouraged. Before writing this I have read over all the letters of relatives I applied to. Every one says there is a strong tradition of Scotch descent. The tradition may be the result of the early association with the Scotch emigrants in North Carolina. I have nothing to show that we are descended from the New Jersey family—only tradition. Do you want every date possible? Very truly, CLARA AYERS."
 Residence, 1623, Zanesville, Ohio.

At the incorporation of the firm in 1877 as the J. C. Ayer Company, he was made treasurer which office he resigned in 1893. In 1871 when the Tremont mills and the Suffolk Manufacturing Company were in a state of bankruptcy, a controlling interest was purchased by James C. and Frederick Ayer, who combined the two under the name of the Tremont & Suffolk mills. The company soon attained unquestioned prosperity. He became President of the Lowell & Andover railroad and director of the Keweenaw Association. In 1885 he purchased the Washington mills, Lawrence, Mass., afterwards incorporated as the Washington Mills Company, of which he was President the first year and has been Treasurer ever since. He succeeded his brother, in 1878, as President of the J. C. Ayer Company. Residence, Lowell, Mass.

Children:

195701. David Ayers. Born Oct. 27, 1826, at Mount Bethel, Pa. 195800.

195702. Daughter. Married Daniel W. Kleinham. Residence, 1902, Belvidere, N. J.

195800. HON. DAVID AYERS DUPUE. (Benjamin, Abraham.) 195731. He was born Oct. 27, 1826. He removed in 1840 to Belvidere, N. J. He graduated at Princeton College, 1846. He was admitted to the Bar in 1849. He practiced law in Belvidere, 1849-66, Justice of the Supreme Court of New Jersey, 1866-1901, and during the latter part of his term, Chief Justice. Rutgers College gave him the degree of LL.D. in 1874 and Princeton gave the same degree in 1880. He retired from the Supreme Court Nov. 16, 1901.

The Green Bag for Nov., 1891, says of him:

"When the term of Daniel Haines as associate justice expired, it devolved upon Marcus L. Ward, then Governor of New Jersey, to find a fit successor. Governor Ward was a conscientious man and loved his native state: so he anxiously sought for the fittest man. To his astonishment one or two leading lawyers to whom he tendered the nomination for the vacant position declined the honor: but still more amazed was he when many members of the Bar named an attorney practicing in the small town of Belvidere as the man best equipped to fill the place. The Governor had never heard of this able lawyer, and knew nothing about him. But this was not remarkable: the chief magistrate of the State had had very little to do with lawyers: he knew all about soldiers, and could name, without much thought or any hesitation, the best fighters in the war which had just closed, for he had been a firm and fast friend of the boys in blue. He soon became satisfied that this lawyer from Belvidere, thus recognized by members of the Bar as fully fitted for the office although unknown to him and to fame, was the man for whom he was seeking: and so on the 15th of November, 1866, David Ayres Depue was commissioned, after being duly nominated and confirmed, as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court: and no better nomination was ever made.

“Judge Depue is of Huguenot descent: but when his original ancestor emigrated to this country, or from whence he came, cannot now be ascertained. A family of the name of Dupuis, which is undoubtedly the original method of spelling the name, lived in the western part of the State, near the Delaware River, during the last century. About a hundred and fifty years ago, Nicholas Dupuis was connected with the colonial records of New Jersey. Some member of this family was an ancestor of Judge Depue. His father, Benjamin Depue, a highly respectable citizen, removed from New Jersey to North Bethel, Northampton County, in Pennsylvania, where the future judge was born in 1826. In 1840 Mr. Benjamin Depue returned to Warren County in New Jersey, not to the home of his ancestors, but made his way to Belvidere, the capitol of the county, bringing the future judge with him. Young Depue had a careful father, who determined that his son should receive the very best education which could be obtained. Accordingly he gave him the benefit of a thorough academic course, in preparation for a collegiate training. In pursuance of his plan, the father placed his son in Princeton College, where the young man graduated in 1846. In less than ten days after graduation, young Depue entered the office of John M. Sherrerd, then one of the leading lawyers of Belvidere. A very warm friendship sprang up between preceptor and student, which continued until the death of Mr. Sherrerd. This friendship was so strong on the part of the student, that his only son was named after Mr. Sherrerd. That boy is now a young lawyer of great promise, practicing at Newark, and is Assistant U. S. District Attorney of New Jersey.

Judge Depue was licensed as an attorney in 1849, and received his counsellor's degree in 1852. He remained for about a year after being licensed in Mr. Sherrerd's office; and then, following the advice of his friend and instructor that he should become independent and fight his own way, opened an office in Belvidere, and soon gathered around him a circle of warm friends and admiring clients. He had not been idle during his clerkship, but had applied himself industriously and carefully to the study of the law, not alone as the means by which he was to earn his bread, but from a pure love for the science. After he began the practice of his profession, he did not allow himself to be drawn aside by the ambition of acquiring political honors, so common to young lawyers. He was a born lawyer, and delighted into delving into the abstruse principles of legal science. He did not study law simply to use it for the present exigency, nor to prepare himself for future contests, but because he loved its abstract ideas, and revelled in its metaphysics. He soon led the Bar in his part of the State, and became known as a highly accomplished lawyer, an astute counsellor, and a powerful advocate. So when in 1866 he became an Associate Judge, he brought to the office an unusual preparation for the proper performance of its duties. He did not seek the nomination, and could in no sense have been considered a candidate. In fact, he wrote to Governor Ward, when he heard that his name was mentioned in connection with the position, that he was not an applicant for the nomination. So soon as he was appointed, he removed to Newark, where he has ever since resided. His circuit at first comprised the counties of Essex and Union, by far the most important in the State. Newark, the largest city in New Jersey, is in Essex; and Elizabeth, an important town, in Union.

Of the characteristics of this illustrious man it is almost impossible to write and do them justice without seeming fulsome. For a quarter of a century he has been the Circuit Judge of Essex County. For a large part of that time that county has comprised all there is of his circuit. Union was long since placed in that of Judge Van Syckel. From the first term of court held by him, Judge Depue fastened himself upon the affection and confidence of the people, and they have never swerved from their loyalty to him. They believe in him: his word is law, his judgment conclusive, his opinion implicitly trusted: juries have an abiding faith in his utterances. It is sometimes amusing to watch the jurors after a wearisome trial, after lawyers have badgered them with their conflicting views, and the time comes for the judge to give his opinion of the case, and see them start from their listless position and become all alive. Now, they seem to say, we shall get at the right of it: now we can learn what is our duty: and so their eyes kindle, their faces are all aglow: and as the words drop in measured tones, each strong and driven home by inexorable logic and convincing argument, they clearly see what their duty is in the case, and what is the law involved. If there be one quality of Judge Depue's mind which is more marked than any other, it is his ability to set before the judgment of jurors the facts in a case, and apply the law in exactness to those facts. He is so cool, so dispassionate, so free from prejudice, so impartial, that they know that they will be fairly and honestly dealt with, and that they will not err if they follow his lead.

"It is charged by some that he is restive in the trial of causes. Perhaps the charge is partially true: but it is the impatience of genius, chafing at the dullness of inferior minds, at the waste of time in the utterance of platitudes of mediocrity, or at unnecessary delay. He is always fair, never impatient when the case demands care and examination. But his quick, alert mind sees the end from the beginning, and he deplors that valuable moments should be wasted in delaying a result which he had already learned was inevitable. So his impressive 'Proceed, gentlemen!' means that it is not necessary to spend breath in endeavoring to postpone that which is already determined, or to establish that which is so easily demonstrable.

"Judge Depue took his seat on the bench at the November term of the year 1866, but, of course, could take no part in delivering opinions, except such as were oral, and could only listen to arguments. His first opinion was given at the March term, 1867. It was a case of quo warranto, arising upon the school law of the State. The cause was not of any very great importance, but it received, as did every case submitted to him, a thorough and searching examination. His opinions are always exhaustive, and he has the faculty of ascertaining every point there is in a cause.

"In 1873 his first term closed, and he was re-nominated by Governor Parker, who, although politically opposed to him, yet appreciated the importance of retaining him in the judiciary of the State. In 1887 he was again nominated and confirmed, and by a Democratic Governor. His third term expired in 1887, when he was again made an Associate Justice. These reappointments were just tributes to his impartiality, ability and integrity. He has since his appointment to office never swerved a hair's breadth from the strict line of duty, by any consideration whatever. When on the bench he knows no friend nor foe, is swayed by no motive other than the earnest, overmastering desire to do justice to all. His keen discrimination and quick intuition enable him to discern at once what is the true path of duty, and he never fails to find and follow it.

"With all his mental acquisitions, his intellectual ability, and his profound learning, he is a man of simple and unaffected manners, and is easy of access to all, no matter how poor or humble. He is a great reader, and delights especially in biography; his tastes are scholarly and lead him to the highest order of literature. He dearly loves the society of friends, and will with them unbend himself, in his leisure moments, in humor and discussions of lighter themes than those connected with abstract legal principles. Two colleges in New Jersey have conferred the degree of LL.D. upon Judge Depue.—Rutgers in 1874, and Princeton in 1885."

APPENDIX XIX.

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS

The name and its synonyms: Ayres, Ayer, Ayre, Eyer, Eyre, etc., is not uncommon. It is found dating back to the 11th century. The legend concerning its origin is found in "Thorp's Catalogue of the deeds of Battle Abbey."

Legend: The first of this family was named Trulove, who was one of the followers of William the Conqueror at the Battle of Hastings (1066). The Duke was flung from his horse, and his helmet was beaten into his face, which, Trulove observing, he pulled it off and horsed him again. Duke William told him: "Thou shalt hereafter instead of Trulove be called Eyre (or Air) because thou hast given me the air I breathe." After the battle the Duke found him severely wounded, his leg and thigh having been struck off. He gave him lands in Derby, a coat-of-arms—the leg and thigh in armor cut off—and an honorary badge yet worn by all the Eyres in England. Arms: Argent on a chevron sable, three quarter-foils, or. Crest: An armored leg couped at thigh erect per pole. Motto: Lacte aere florent.

L. A. Coolidge in Ainslee's Magazine for December, 1901, says of him :

"If one hundred American citizens were to be asked to name the most influential man in Congress, ninety-nine of them would reply off-hand, 'The Speaker of the House of Representatives'—and they would be wrong. If by the most influential man in Congress is meant the one who accomplishes the most, who has most to do with shaping legislation, whose support of any particular measure is of greatest value—the man who comes nearest to meeting the definition is Nelson W. Aldrich, a United States Senator from Rhode Island. The Speaker of the House is powerful; at his own end of the capitol his supremacy is unchallenged; but Aldrich is greater than he. Aldrich can handle the Senate.

"Outside of Washington not many people know very much about Aldrich. There are a dozen Senators, at least, whose names are more familiar. Frye and Hale, Hoar and Lodge, Hawley, Platt, Depew, Allison, Foraker, Elkins, Spooner, Quay, Mark Hanna—any one of these is better known, and yet any one of them will yield to Aldrich in knowledge of what can be done in the Senate and how to do it. 'If I want to put a bill through Congress,' said one of them, 'I had rather talk with Aldrich than with any other ten.'

"Eight or ten years ago an election of Senator was pending in Illinois. The Democrats in state convention had nominated John M. Palmer as their candidate. Palmer was an old war horse surrounded with all the traditions and sentiment of his party. Certain Republicans thought it would be a fine thing if they were to oppose him with Uncle Dick Oglesby, likewise an old war horse surrounded with traditions and sentiment, and a representative was sent to talk with Uncle Dick about it. Oglesby objected. 'John and I have had our day,' he said. 'We were all right years ago, but times have changed. Either one of us would be out of place in the Senate. A man to succeed there now has to be a specialist. Suppose John is elected; he goes to Washington and a tariff bill comes up. He can make a great speech on the tariff. It is a matter of principle with him, and he will wax eloquent on the iniquity of protection and the advantages of a tariff for revenue. If he were to make the same speech out here on the prairies it would set them afire. The old settlers would take his word for gospel and think he knew all about it. It would be the same with me if I were to talk on the other side. I could discuss the tariff as I would discuss the Christian religion.

But I have never studied the details of it, and neither has he. John will get up and deliver his oration, and then that little fellow Aldrich on the other side will ask him something about schedules. He will ask him about the duty on steel rails, or tinplate, or sugar, or nails, or something of that kind, and John won't know what to say. He never heard of a schedule in his life, and he won't be in it. All his fine sentiments will be just so much wind. He is too old to learn new tricks, and so am I. 'The man who succeeds in the Senate nowadays is the one who has studied the details of a question.' So Uncle Dick refused to stand. Palmer was elected, and the result was just what Uncle Dick had foretold.

'The incident illustrates how Aldrich has gained his hold. He is a specialist. He knows the tariff from A to Z, and there is no other man in either branch of Congress, now that Dingley is dead, who can compare with him. There is no question vitally affecting business interests in which Aldrich is not equally at home. He is a business man, and the great industries of the country have learned to look upon him as their special representative. And, after all, the great mass of really important legislation has to do with business.

'For twenty years the Senate has been gaining on the House. It has seized one advantage after another until it has things about its own way. Its limited membership and unlimited debate give individual Senators free play. The House has grown so big that it has been compelled to cut off debate and put arbitrary power in the hands of the Speaker. It has to act promptly as a unit if it is to act at all. On questions of legislation where serious differences arise with the Senate it frequently has to take a measure or reject it just as it stands. It originates legislation. It sends a bill over to the Senate and the Senate amends it. It is in the power of a small group of Senators, and sometimes at the close of a session, in the power of a single Senator, to prevent the passage of any bill. There are times when any Senator with a small following, by threatening long debate, can compel amendments which are satisfactory to him. A measure, thus amended so as to insure the support of a majority of the Senate, goes back to the House where it originated. If it is a measure involving party policy the house has to take it or else run the risk of sending it back to the Senate again with amendments that will arouse limitless discussion imperiling its fate. In nine cases out of ten the House, under protest, will accept the Senate amendments rather than run the risk of defeating the bill altogether, and right here is where a master of legislation like Aldrich has his power. Having secured the kind of a bill he wants in the Senate he convinces the House that it must take that or nothing.

“When Aldrich first came to Washington as a member of the House he was a wholesale grocer in Providence. That was in 1879, and he had served his apprenticeship in politics as President of the Providence Common Council, and Speaker for one year of the House of Representatives of the Rhode Island General Assembly. His reputation was that of a good business man who had shown political aptitude, and he did very little in the House to increase it one way or the other. He was recognized as a level-headed member who would make a very sensible representative as representatives go. It was a Democratic House, with Sam Randall as Speaker, and they put Aldrich at the foot of the committee on the District of Columbia. He was re-elected to the Forty-seventh Congress, but before he took his seat again he had been chosen to the Senate as the successor to General Burnside; his legislative experience has been acquired almost exclusively in the body of which he is now the most influential member.

“The Senate, when Aldrich entered it, was evenly divided politically, and David Davis was president pro tem. The leader of the Republican side was George F. Edmunds, of Vermont, a man almost the exact opposite of Aldrich in everything that goes to make up a legislative leader. Edmunds was a great lawyer, a keen debater, a master of incisive English, with a mind like a surgeon’s scalpel. Of politics in the ordinary sense he knew nothing. He could no more have railroaded a complicated tariff bill through the Senate than he could have handled a Tammany district in New York. He knew nothing about managing men or combining interests. And yet by sheer acuteness of intellect and mastery of legislative problems Edmunds dominated the Republicans in the Senate for many years. His leadership was unchallenged until there came a new order of things with the forcing of the tariff question to the front when Grover Cleveland sent in his famous message. Edmunds was chairman of the Committee on Judiciary and the leading member of the Committee on Foreign Relations—the two committees of the Senate in which Aldrich would probably find himself least at home.

When Aldrich entered the Senate the tariff question was just beginning to assume an important place in legislation. The Tariff Commission which framed the tariff of 1883 was at work and members of Congress were talking about schedules and duties. Aldrich as a business man representing an important manufacturing state was appointed to a place on the Committee on Finance, with which he has remained ever since, and of which he is now the chairman. He had already begun to study financial questions, and before long it was clear that the new Senator was going to devote himself to that side of legislation, and to that alone. It probably never occurred to him at that time that through that means he was destined to grow into the position of leadership. He was interested chiefly in looking out for the industries of his own state, and in order to do that effectively he found it necessary to study closely all the conditions which would affect them. There are not many men in public life who are willing to give themselves up to that kind of work, but Aldrich was not only willing to do it—he was enamored of the task. He kept at it until he knew to a nicety just how any one of the industries in which he was especially interested would be affected by an increase or reduction in duties, just what proportion of profit rested in ad valorem or specific, just what relation one industry bore to another. Then he went further. He read all the books he could find on political economy and the theories of finance. There is probably no man in Congress who has read more thoroughly or understandingly than he. His library on financial topics is one of the most complete in the United States.

When a man masters any particular subject those who have devoted less time to it are very apt to let him have his own way in everything relating to it where their own individual interests do not happen to be at stake. Other Senators had schemes of their own to look after. Each one was hunting what seemed to him to be bigger game. And so they began to look to Aldrich to settle questions of detail relating to the tariff. On the first Committee on Finance of which he was a member were Justin Morrill of Vermont, John Sherman of Ohio, Thomas W. Ferry of Michigan, John P. Jones of Nevada, and William B. Allison of Iowa. Morrill knew about the tariff and was regarded as the father of Protection; but he was more interested in the theory than in the details. Sherman was a master of finance, and of the laws of exchange—the greatest financier who had sat in the Senate in a generation. But the schedules of the tariff bill wearied him. He was a statesman of the old school, of political ambition—always looking towards the presidency which he never reached. Ferry was nearing the end of his political career. Jones of Nevada cared little except for silver and the currency. Allison was chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, which in itself was enough to occupy the time of any Senator. Aldrich was the only one of the lot who devoted himself to the tariff with its infinite details, and who was willing to sacrifice everything else for that. It has been much the same with every succeeding finance committee of which he has been a member. When the Mills bill came over from the House of Representatives in 1888 Aldrich was the only Republican in the Senate who could devote his entire time to its consideration. When the Senate committee decided to frame a Republican substitute on Protection lines, Aldrich was there to watch every schedule and figure on every duty. He was a member of the sub-committee to frame the bill, and the other members came very near letting him have his own way. That was really the first demonstration of Aldrich's leadership in the Senate. It came about so quietly that most people were unconscious of it. Indeed, it was not until two years later that the Senate aroused fully to the realization that he had become the master-mind in dealing with the question which was then the dividing issue between parties. When the Republicans came into power in the Fifty-first Congress the great problem they had before them was to frame a tariff bill. McKinley was chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in the House. He was the spectacular champion of Protection, and his name was synonymous with the protective theory. The committee of which he was the head framed a tariff bill after many hearings and after much travail which was known as the McKinley bill, and which was sent to the Senate late in May. In the Senate the Finance Committee took hold of it and proceeded to do with it as they saw fit. The work of revision was given to a sub-committee of which Aldrich was a member, and it was Aldrich who figured on the schedules and decided what changes ought to be made. The other members had their suggestions with regard to industries in which they were especially interested; but Aldrich was interested in all industries, and it was easy for them to let him have his way. When the bill went back to the House there was hardly a schedule which did not bear his mark, and when the bill finally became a law it would more appropriately have borne his name than McKinley's. What was true of the McKinley bill in 1890, was true also of the Dingley bill in 1896, and strange to say, it was true, in a measure, of the Democratic Wilson-Gorman bill of 1894, for the most striking feature of Aldrich's leadership is that it is almost as effective on the Democratic side of the Senate as on his own. In all the history of Congress there has never been another man who had his genius for managing political opponents as well as political friends.

"It has often been said of the Senate in jest that it is a rich man's club. So far as the rich men are concerned, this is not a very happy description, for there are not many men of wealth in the north wing of the Capitol. But nobody can understand the Senate very well who does not appreciate the fact that it has many of the characteristics of a club. With a few conspicuous exceptions, Senators are on good terms with one another. There is a spirit of good-fellowship among them, and, politics aside, there is the basis for a common understanding. It would be easy to recall many instances of firm friendship between men on opposite sides of the aisle. Conkling and Thurman, Vest and Quay, Chandler and Tillman, Frue and Gorman are cases in point. Where personal relations are so close it is not strange that party differences should occasionally be found not strong enough to prevent harmony of action on measures which are not of obvious party importance.

"It is generally possible for any Senator who is recognized as a good fellow to do business on the other side of the chamber when it comes to minor questions in which he has something personally at stake. Bearing this in mind it is not so difficult as it might otherwise be to understand how it has come about that a man like Aldrich has been able to establish relations on the Democratic side which work frequently to Republican advantage.

"Aldrich is a master of all the higher arts of the politician. He understands people and motives better than any other man in Congress. He appreciates intuitively where personal interests lie, and he knows how to combine them. There are half a dozen of the most influential Senators on the Democratic side with whom Aldrich can always talk understandingly. When Gorman was in the Senate and was the master-mind on his side of the chamber, it was always easy for the two men to get together, for they had many qualities in common—with this marked difference, that Gorman had political ambitions for himself, while Aldrich apparently has none. That is how it happened that Aldrich had so much to say about the final shape which should be assumed by the Wilson-Gorman tariff act. The history of that act illustrates the possibilities of level-headed leadership in the Senate. The bill was framed in the House, where it had to originate, on the basis of a tariff for revenue only, and was about as impractical a measure as ever got a standing in Congress. When it reached the Senate it ran up against a lot of hard-hearted politicians and business men who cared nothing for theories. Gorman, on the Democratic side, had as little use for Wilson's vagaries as any one of his Republican associates. He did not know very much about details of the tariff, but he knew in a general way what he wanted to get, and he was very glad indeed to have the assistance of Aldrich's technical knowledge when he came to the task of putting his ideas into shape. It is hardly a secret that the cotton schedule in the Wilson-Gorman act was dictated by Aldrich almost word for word, and there were many other schedules about which he and other Republicans had a great deal to say. The Senate was not overwhelmingly Democratic at that time, and the wishes of individual Senators had to be consulted in order to get enough votes to pass any bill whatever. When the bill went back to the House it was barely recognized by its original framers; but there was nothing they could do about it. The session was nearing its close, an election was coming on. For a Democratic Congress elected on the tariff issue to have adjourned without passing some kind of a tariff bill would have been a confession of inefficiency which was not to be thought of. To send the bill back to the Senate meant its defeat. In desperation, the Democratic House adopted the Senate bill without the crossing of a t or the dotting of an i, marked by "pertidy and dishonor" though they believed it to be. That was an occasion where a few cool heads in the Senate proved more than equal to the President and the House combined, and Aldrich, Republican though he was, is entitled to a great share of the credit.

“What Aldrich did with a Democratic Senate on this great question of party policy he is constantly doing with the Democratic minority in a Republican Senate on all sorts of questions which have a business side. He is not a man who establishes intimate friendships either among his party associates or his party opponents, but he is on good terms with everybody, and apparently deals with frank confidence with everybody. One great secret of his success is that he cares nothing for personal distinction. He is entirely satisfied with his position in the Senate. It is a matter of indifference to him whether his name figures in the newspapers or not. He is not looking for anything in a political way beyond what he already has. So long as he can get substantially what he wants into a bill he does not care what name it goes by. The McKinley bill, the Dingley bill, the Hanna or Frye bill, are all one to him so long as he has something to say about their contents. He is not figuring on the presidency or looking forward to a place in history. He never seeks the center of the stage and cares nothing for the limelight. Thus one powerful cause for jealousy and suspicion on the part of his associates is altogether lacking. He is probably the only man in the Senate of whom this can be said, for even the best of them have their vanities and ambitions.

Aldrich has never found it necessary to attach himself to any faction in his own party, and he has never depended in any way upon his relations with the administration. He has never been one of those who frequented the White House. He is independent of Presidents. He has never been in need of federal patronage whether in his own state or to advance his schemes in the Senate. He is sure of Rhode Island anyway so long as he cares to remain in Congress, and he has other means than administration influence to further his legislative projects. McKinley wanted him to be Secretary of the Treasury, but Aldrich declined with thanks, without giving it a second thought. All he wants politically is to remain in the Senate. He has never figured in national conventions, and, so far as can be seen, has never taken part in the manipulations for the nomination of a President. He has no aspirations to shine as an orator. When he makes a speech in the Senate it is on some dry financial subject and its sole purpose is to supply his side with ammunition. He never jumps into a rough-and-tumble debate, but he has a way of asking questions, or making statements, which are disconcerting to the other side. He is quite ready to let others have all the spectacular advantages. The idea of playing to the galleries never entered his mind. He never bustles about his work. When a measure is on in which he is interested he moves around quietly and easily, talking with this man and that, finding out just what everybody wants and just what everybody insists on or is willing to concede. He never burrows or accomplishes his end by stealth. Everything with him is frank and above-board. He never assumes an air of mystery, and yet it is a standing mystery how he manages to accomplish so much with so little effort. He is always accessible, always good natured, and always ready to talk with apparent sincerity and freedom.

“When Aldrich came to Washington twenty years ago he was a comparatively poor man with a large family. Today he is reputed to be several times a millionaire. The foundation of his fortune was laid in consolidating the street railways of Providence, which he still controls. Through the associations which he formed in that transaction with men of capital he has been able to accumulate a great deal of money. But it is characteristic of Aldrich that although he has become wealthy his habits of life are as plain and unassuming as they always were. He has never set up an establishment in Washington. Occasionally he has occupied a rented house, but of late years he has always lived at the Arlington Hotel when Congress was in session, while his family have preferred to live quietly in Providence. He has five sons and three daughters, but none of them has ever cared for the society of the capital. He dines out a great deal and is sociably inclined, but his tastes are simple. He cares nothing for the usual recreations of men of great wealth. He has never owned a yacht or a fast horse. His only recreation has been in occasional trips abroad. A few years ago he bought several farms at Warwick Neck on Narragansett Bay, a few miles from Providence, and he is gradually transforming them into a summer home. In time he will have an estate there which will rival the greatest estates along the New England coast, but meanwhile he lives in one of the comfortable old farmhouses as simply and plainly as if that were all he had in the world. It was in this old farmhouse, which will be torn down before long, that the wedding of his second daughter and John D. Rockefeller, Jr., took place a few weeks ago. Stories of the princely elaborateness of that affair had their origin in the imagination of the newspaper men.

"In personal appearance Aldrich is one of the handsomest men in public life. He has a well-knit frame. His finely cut face beams with good humor. Twenty years ago when he came to the House his hair was wavy and jet black, which gave him a striking appearance. Now it is rather sparse and gray, and the mustache is gray. But in spite of that he is lithe and agile as a boy. He is a good type of the successful business man who has brushed up against all sorts of people and knows how to live—a man of the world, not over-burdened with sentiment, and not worrying about other people's ills."

"Lyman Tremain was born in the town of Durham, and county of Greene, in this State, on the fourteenth day of June, 1819. His father was Levi Tremain, who, with his wife, came to Durham from Berkshire county, Massachusetts, in the year 1812, and remained at Durham up to the close of his life. The grandfather of Lyman, Nathaniel Tremain, was a Revolutionary soldier, who died in Pittsfield, Massachusetts, many years ago. Lyman first attended the schools of his native town, and subsequently became a student at the Kinderhook academy, an institution which was, at that time, one of the most flourishing of the select schools of the State. It was here that his capacity as a speaker became noticeable, and at the age of fourteen he delivered at the academy an original speech which was the subject of very complimentary remarks by the audience that heard it. He left school soon after, and at the age of fifteen entered the law office, in Durham, of John O'Brien, as a student at law. Here, for some years, he worked most industriously, aiming to become a sound and learned lawyer, and feeling that, however he might have been endowed by nature with original ability, no man ever became a great lawyer without a most intense devotion to his profession, and a thorough knowledge of the fundamental principles upon which the law is based. Appreciating fully these facts, young Tremain, earnestly, zealously, early and late, with his whole heart and mind bound up in the object of his life, studied law. In addition to study, he aided his principal in the many things that a quick and intelligent clerk can do in the office of a practicing lawyer in the country. And, in addition, he tried many causes in justices' courts in the surrounding country, and exhibited, in those early contests, the fertility of resource, the readiness and quickness with which he brought his knowledge to bear upon questions as they arose, which, in after life, on wider fields and in the most important cases, were such marked characteristics. What he learned, he learned thoroughly, so that he knew it all through and through, and never skimmed over a principle of law, but studied it until he was master of the reasons for its existence and the arguments, if any, by which it might be assailed. This manner of studying his profession he kept up while he was in the office of Mr. O'Brien. He left there shortly before he was admitted, and entered the office of Samuel Sherwood, Esq., of New York, where he remained a short time, when, in 1840, he was admitted to the Bar as an attorney of the Supreme Court, the degree of counselor at law coming later. He went back to Durham and formed a partnership with Mr. O'Brien, in whose office he had studied. His own practice soon became lucrative and extensive, and reached into the adjoining counties of Albany, Schoharie, Columbia and Ulster. He remained in Durham, engrossed in the practice of his profession, until he came to Albany, in the year 1853.

"During these busy years at Durham, the young lawyer had achieved such a reputation for ability, industry and integrity, that he stood, at the time he left Durham, in the very front rank of the Bar in his county. In February, 1846, he was unanimously appointed District Attorney of Greene county by the judges of the Court of Common Pleas. During the brief time in which he held that office, an unusual amount of important criminal business fell upon him to dispose of. Several trials for murder took place, and in all of them he showed entire familiarity with the facts, an intimate knowledge of the law, including that relating to evidence, and a readiness to find the weak point in a witness or an antagonist that enabled him to make the most he could out of either. During these years he was a warm Democrat. In 1847 he was nominated for the office of County Judge by that wing of the Democratic party then known as the 'Hunker' wing. It was at a time when the bitterest animosity existed between the Hunkers and the Barnburners throughout the State. In this election, in Greene county there were three candidates for County Judge, one from each of the two wings of the Democratic party and one from the Whig party. The contest on the part of Mr. Tremain with his party divided, seemed almost a forlorn hope, yet such was his general popularity and the universal faith in his integrity and ability, that he was triumphantly elected. In 1848 he was one of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention, when Lewis Cass was nominated for the Presidency, and stood among the leading men of the New York delegation. In the fall of 1851 he was renominated for the County Judgeship, and had for his opponent the Honorable Alexander H. Bailey, who was subsequently State Senator. The contest was very animated and close, and the portion of the Democratic party which had been of the Barnburner wing did not support him with any great cordiality, and the result was a very doubtful one—depending upon the action of the board of county canvassers as to whether a certain alleged return from an election district in the town of Catskill should be rejected for alleged irregularities, or should be counted. The board concluded to reject the return, and, as a result of that decision, awarded the certificate to Judge Tremain and adjourned sine die. Thereupon, Mr. Bailey procured an alternative mandamus, returnable at the General Term, to be held in Albany in December, 1851, and served it upon the supervisors, as members of the board of county canvassers, ordering them to show cause why they should not be compelled to meet again as such board, and re-canvass the votes, and include therein the rejected return, and award the certificate to Mr. Bailey. The case was argued upon the return day by Mr. Killian Miller, of Columbia county, for the relator, Mr. Bailey, and by Mr. Nicholas Hill for the board of county canvassers.

The Court, consisting of Judge Harris, Parker and Wright, refused the mandamus, holding that, the board having once canvassed and dissolved, no power remained in it, even by order of the Court, to legally re-convene and re-canvass, and that the remedy of the relator was by information in the nature of a writ of quo warranto. This ended the legal controversy, and there was nothing in law to prevent Judge Tremain, under the authority of his certificate, from again, on the coming first of January, assuming the office and putting Mr. Bailey to his action, when the whole matter would have been the subject of legal investigation, with a result in accordance with legal principles. But such a proceeding did not, under the circumstances, meet the approval of Judge Tremain. In his own mind he had serious doubts of his election; that is, throwing aside all legal questions, he had grave doubts as to his having received a majority of the votes cast at the election, and, having those doubts, added to the legal questions as to the propriety of the action of the board of county canvassers in throwing out the return from one of the Catskill districts, he made up his mind that he would not accept the certificate nor act as County Judge. Accordingly, on the first of January, 1852, he left the Bench, and, by that very act, showed how worthy he was to further occupy and adorn it. The late Judge Harris, who was a member of the Court which decided the mandamus motion, and who himself wrote the opinion of the Court, in after years, while speaking to one of the classes of the Albany law school upon the high sense of honor which ought to characterize every member of the profession, instanced this action of Judge Tremain as one illustrative of his meaning, that members of the Bar should never themselves ground their own actions upon narrow and technical rules of law, but upon the broader and higher ground of personal honor. Judge Tremain remained at Durham, in the vigorous practice of his profession, until, as has been said, he removed to Albany in 1853, and entered into partnership with his old friend, the late Judge Rufus W. Peckham, which continued until the latter went on the Bench, in January, 1860. During these years, from 1853 to 1860, Judge Tremain was actively engaged in his professional labors, and immediately upon his arrival in Albany took rank with the leaders of the Bar there. The day before the meeting of the Democratic State Convention in 1857, a gentleman came in his office, who was himself a candidate for nomination for a prominent State office, and asked Judge Tremain to go up with him to Syracuse, and, when asked what for, answered, 'So that you can be nominated for Attorney-General and I for ——.' To which Judge Tremain replied: 'I should like to be nominated for Attorney-General very much, but the nomination would lose all its pleasure if I were to go to Syracuse and personally seek it.' And he did not go; nevertheless, his name was presented at that convention and he was nominated by acclamation. His popularity with his party was very great, for he had a most frank and open manner, always greeting one with cordiality and warmth. He was a most successful 'stump' speaker, and a political canvass had rarely passed off since he was twenty, in which he had not been called upon by his party to defend its principles upon the platform. His party was successful and he was elected Attorney-General, and served in the office for two years. While Attorney-General he assisted the District-Attorney of Albany county upon the trial of the famous (in the legal literature of our State) Mrs. Hartung for the murder of her husband. The prisoner was a young and quite pretty German woman, the motive for the crime being her love for another man, who was also indicted as an accessory before the fact. The modest appearance, quiet demeanor, and, above all, the youth and beauty of the prisoner, procured sympathy for her in the minds of most of those who saw her. The charge was that of murder by poisoning, and the interest in the trial deepened every day. She was ably defended, but the proofs of guilt were too clear, and, in the hands of such a prosecuting officer as Mr. Tremain, were presented to the jury in such a logical, clear and forcible way, that there was no room left for doubt, and the jury were held up to the performance of their plain duty by the moral force of the law officer of the State, who infused into the breasts of the jury his own high ideas of the honest performance of official duty, however disagreeable its performance may be. The prisoner was convicted, and upon a writ of error being brought to the Supreme Court, the conviction was there affirmed. The prisoner brought error to the Court of Appeals, where all the exceptions taken on the trial were examined and held untenable. But since the trial, and prior to the judgment in the Court of Appeals, the legislature had passed an act in relation to the punishment for the crime of murder, which the Court held was an ex post facto act, so far as the prisoner was concerned, and as the law, under which she had been convicted and sentenced, had been repealed by this change, it was held there was no law by which she could be punished, and the guilty woman was finally discharged under the law as laid down by the Court of Appeals. This action of the legislature was by some imputed to a sympathy for the condemned woman, and as the Supreme Court had affirmed the judgment and the Governor had refused to interfere, there seemed no escape for her except by legislative interference. Mr. Tremain's connection with the case ceased, however, with the conviction before the Oyer and Terminer, as the successive District Attorneys of Albany county took charge of the case in its further progress up and down in the several Courts. Another important criminal trial, in which he assisted the District Attorney of New York county, occurred while he was Attorney General. That was the case of the Italian, Cancemi, accused of the murder of a police officer in the city of New York. After some progress had been made in the trial, information came to the prosecution which led them to entertain grave doubts of the honesty of one of the jurors. The matter was finally arranged by a stipulation, signed in open Court by the prisoner, his counsel and the counsel for the people, that the juror be withdrawn, and providing for a verdict by the remaining eleven, and that the record should show a trial by the twelve. The trial then proceeded and resulted in the conviction of the accused. Notwithstanding their stipulation, the counsel for the prisoner brought a writ of error and obtained a certificate from the presiding judge qualifying the postea and showing the fact of such withdrawal of a juror, and upon that moved in arrest of judgment. The case is interesting upon the question of criminal practice, and also as deciding that the prisoner cannot consent to a trial by less than the number of twelve jurors, and that, in case he is so tried and convicted, the conviction will be reversed. It also opens the question how far counsel may be justified in going in his efforts for a client. In this case the counsel violated their stipulation, in bringing into the record the fact of a trial by eleven jurors: in other language, violated their plighted faith and appeared in the case as men who, in acting for a client, were willing to violate a solemn agreement entered into by them with the assent of the client, and to forfeit their word to a professional brother. Self-respect must have disappeared in the general wreck. If there be any question as to the propriety of such conduct, surely it can not be found in the ranks of an honorable profession!

The Democracy again nominated Mr. Tremain for re-election as Attorney-General in the fall of 1859, but the Republicans carried the State and elected the Honorable Charles G. Myers as Attorney-General. During the term of Mr. Myers, he commenced the important action, in the name of the people, against the New York Central Railroad Company, to recover certain back tolls alleged to be due to the State for property transported by the company. The claim amounted to millions of dollars. It was based upon a clause of the constitution providing a certain disposition of the revenues of the canals, and upon a statute providing for the collection of tolls for freight on the railroad, to be paid during the suspension of canal navigation to the commissioners of the canal fund, the tolls to be the same per mile as would have been paid had the freight been transported on the canal. The statute was repealed in 1851, and the claim was made that the repeal was unconstitutional, inasmuch as these tolls on the railroad for the transportation of freight were substantially part of the revenues of the canals, and, as such, could not be diverted from the purposes to which, by the constitution they were dedicated. As has been said, the claim of the people, if successful, involved the recovery of millions of dollars of back tolls and the inevitable imposition of tolls for the future, only to be taken off by a constitutional amendment. It was a case the importance of which to the railroad company, and indeed also to the State, could hardly be overestimated. While Mr. Tremain was Attorney-General, he had, upon the request of the Senate, given to that body an elaborate opinion covering the question of the constitutionality of the act repealing the act for the collection of tolls, and in that opinion he had come to the conclusion that the repealing act was valid. His successor, Attorney-General Myers, in answer to a request from the Assembly, under date of March, 1860, sent to that body a communication that, in his opinion, the repealing act was unconstitutional. Hence the action brought by him to test the constitutionality of the repealing act, and to recover the back tolls from the railroad company. The company, with a full sense of the importance of the cause, retained Mr. Tremain as senior counsel to defend such claim, and with him were associated one of the general counsel of the company (S. T. Fairchild, Esq., and ex-Judge Paige, of Schenectady, who was a director in the railroad company. The action came on for trial before the late Judge John W. Brown, at the Orange Circuit, and resulted in a nonsuit. The people appealed to the General Term of the Supreme Court, where the nonsuit was affirmed, and thence to the Court of Appeals, which Court affirmed the judgments of the Courts below, and thus ended the question as to the legality of the repealing act, by a decision in favor thereof. All through the contest, Mr. Tremain was the chief counsel for the railroad company, and his argument in the Court of Appeals was pronounced unanswerable, and a masterly vindication of the power of the legislature to pass the repealing act. It was also very gratifying to him that his opinion, given while Attorney General, upon the power of the legislature to pass the act, was concurred in by the unanimous voice of all the Judges who heard the arguments and in all the Courts. The late Judge William L. Allen delivered the unanimous opinion of the Court of Appeals, in which Court he was then sitting as one of the Justices of the Supreme Court, under the old judiciary article of the constitution.

Thus Mr. Tremain stood, a leader in his profession, engaged in the active practice thereof, and taking part in many of the most important civil and criminal cases which arose in the State, when the war of the rebellion broke out. Up to this time he had stood among the foremost members of the Democratic party of his State--always in the confidence of his party, and always received by the members thereof, when he appeared in public, with demonstrations of the highest affection.

During that solemn winter of 1861, when it seemed as if the country were drifting into civil war with all its inexpressible and necessary horrors, and nothing seemed to be done to prevent it, or to calm the passions of the people, the Democratic party of New York called together a State Convention, to be held at Tweddle Hall, in Albany, on the 31st day of January, 1861. Pursuant to that call, several hundred delegates, from all parts of the State, assembled at Albany. The temporary president was Hon. Sanford E. Church, its permanent one being Hon. Amasa J. Parker. Speeches in favor of conciliation were there made, and resolutions were there passed, having for their object an escape from civil war. Mr. Tremain, on the first day of the session, was absent in the trial of a cause at the Albany Circuit. On the morning of the second day he was in the convention, and, being called to the platform, made a speech which became thereafter the cause of the most abundant abuse of the position subsequently taken by him in regard to the war. It was an able speech, made before an excitable audience, and in a time of great excitement, when the words of men speaking extemporaneously were naturally not weighed with that care which the same men would use in a legal argument or in a judicial opinion. There are, undoubtedly, words used in that speech, which, when torn from the general context, and read entirely alone, with no reference to the circumstances of national peril under which the convention met, or to the objects and purposes of the convention, would not commend themselves to the better judgment of even the speaker himself. But he was speaking to men who were eager to prevent bloodshed, and who thought that the policy of the Republican party, then coming into power, was wrong and tending necessarily to civil war. In his own language in that very speech: "Time is important. Get time until the passions of men may cool. Prevent a collision which must inevitably result in civil war. Give the people an opportunity to speak, and then will be time enough, if the time must ever come, when you shall unsheathe the sword against your southern brethren. In the meantime, I think we stand a unit, opposed to civil war." The idea was the appointment of a commission by the legislature, and, failing in that, by the convention, to see if some means might not be found, honorable to all, by which war could be averted and the union saved. And it was speaking in reference to that object, and the attitude of the Republican party, which was believed to be hostile to any such commission from the legislature, or, indeed, to any action whatever, that Mr. Tremain made the allusions he did. However, notwithstanding the action of the convention, the peace conference, etc., the winter glided steadily by, and nothing was done. Spring came, and Mr. Lincoln was inaugurated. Then an attempt was made to revictual Fort Sumter in Charleston harbor. Blood was spilt, the President called out seventy-five thousand volunteers, and war was actually upon us. During the summer of 1861, Bull Run was fought, and several minor engagements, and the two sections were, by the fall, fairly launched in the life and death struggle. The Democratic party met in convention and nominated State officers, among them Mr. Tremain for Attorney-General. This nomination he declined, and gave his reason, that he thought all partisan or political contests should cease until the end of the war.

“Men might reasonably differ upon the question as to what should be the attitude of the Democratic party. It was thought, on one side, that many of the acts of the government were entirely outside the constitution—illegal and wrong; that its system of arbitrary arrests, without warrant and many times without cause, tended to tyranny and a contempt for law, and, if indulged in without rebuke, might render the country, when saved, so used to the Mexican system, that political freedom and personal freedom would both be lost in the very jaws of victory; that to approve such acts on the part of the government was to encourage it to persist in equal if not worse violations of the organic law; and, therefore, there could be no union with a party which proposed to approve these or the general acts of the administration. On the other hand, men like Mr. Tremain thought and said, while we are in this struggle let us not call up the constitutional question; let us endure the danger arising from arbitrary arrests, from illegal acts generally, in the belief that, if we succeed in the main struggle, we will be then able, and our officials will be then willing, to return to the old ways of law and order, with the habeas corpus in full life. The great mass of the Democratic party took the former view of the situation, and, while willing to prosecute the war, was not willing to permit the administration to violate the law of the land, especially in the peaceful states, by this arbitrary arrest system, and, consequently, the party opposed the administration in all such matters. The charge of inconsistency has been frequently brought against Mr. Tremain by his former political associates, based upon his declination of the nomination in 1861 for Attorney-General, and upon his joining the ranks of the Union-Republican party at that time; and his Tweddle Hall speech is pointed to for the purpose of proving the charge. The circumstances under which that speech was delivered have been already detailed. It was not spoken after war became inevitable, but only while there was hope that, by conciliation, calmness, wisdom, peace might be preserved. After all these hopes had ceased, and when war with all its stern realities was upon us, and substantially the whole North was unanimous upon the subject of a prosecution of the war: and when the only questions at issue were as to the approval of certain of the acts of the administration, and their probable or possible effect, not only upon the war itself, but after peace had been achieved: the fact, that Mr. Tremain differed with most of his party upon the effect of such acts and of such approval, does not prove him inconsistent with his position in January, 1861, under entirely different circumstances and speaking for entirely different purposes. It was a bitter step for him to take, when he separated himself from many of his life-long political friends and went into opposition to that party where he had won so much political renown, and which had ever treated him with so much kindness. Nothing but a sense of duty on his part nerved him to the task, and kept him up through all the future years. His sincerity was put to a most severe test, when, in 1862, he consented to his first-born, then a mere stripling, enlisting in the service and going out as adjutant of one of the New York regiments. This son was his pride. A remarkably bright, active youth, full of hope and of high and lofty ambition. It was a tremendous sacrifice for him to consent to this son's going into the service, and yet he did it, and bade him God speed on his mission.

In the fall of 1862 Judge Tremain, without solicitation on his part, was nominated by the Republicans for the office of Lieutenant-Governor, with General Wadsworth as the candidate for Governor. The Democrats nominated Horatio Seymour for Governor, and David R. Floyd Jones for Lieutenant-Governor. The canvass was a most exciting and bitter one, and the Democrats made full use of the Tweddle Hall speech and its alleged inconsistencies. The Democrats carried the State by a majority of about ten thousand, and Mr. Tremain suffered defeat with his party. During the period intervening, and up to the close of the war, Mr. Tremain was actively at work in the practice of his profession, and he was never happier than when hard at work in his office or in Court. He was also active in the political campaigns of the years, and was engaged in making war speeches, aiding in the raising of regiments for the war, and generally testifying, by all the means in his power, the deep and abiding interest he took in the struggle which was going on. During this time he was retained as one of the counsel in the famous legal-tender cases, the question involving the constitutionality of that section of the law of Congress which imparted to the 'greenback' its legal-tender quality. He made an argument before the Court of Appeals in favor of the legality of the clause, and that Court, by a divided vote, sustained the constitutionality of the provision, which prevented an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States. He was also retained to defend the banks upon the claims made to tax the shares in national banks created under the act of Congress. The Court of Appeals sustained the claim, in opposition to the argument of Mr. Tremain among others. Upon appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, the judgment was reversed, but not upon the merits of the question, and that Court established the law in favor of the right to tax the shares, upon complying with the act of Congress.

Just prior to the close of the war, Mr. Tremain sustained a terrible affliction in the loss of his soldier son, Frederick, who died from the effects of a wound received at Hatcher's Run, while he was in command of his regiment as its Lieutenant Colonel. The grief of the parent was hard to look upon, and many a time did it seem to him that he could reccho the expression of King David and say, 'Would God that I had died for thee.' Still, as was his duty, he kept hard at work at his profession, down to the time of his first voyage to Europe, in the year 1866. During this time he was engaged to aid the District Attorney in the prosecution of General Cole, who had, in a most cowardly manner, shot a citizen while he was engaged in conversation at the Stanwix Hall in the city of Albany. The prisoner had been an officer in the army, and had a brother in the Senate of the United States from California. The case excited the most widespread interest. The ablest counsel were engaged to defend the prisoner, among them James T. Brady and William A. Beach. The defense was insanity, substantially, though the real ground of the shooting was alleged to have been the criminal intimacy of the deceased with the wife of the prisoner. He was twice tried; once the jury disagreed, and the second time the prisoner was acquitted. Mr. Tremain, in the trial, on both occasions, exhibited that wonderful vigor and freshness, and a power of sustained reasoning and analysis, for which he was so justly renowned. But nothing could overcome the prejudices of a jury which went upon the assumption that the claim of the prisoner, in regard to the action of the deceased with the prisoner's wife, was true, and, being true, the prisoner ought to shoot. That was the meaning of the verdict, although there was a thin veil of insanity running through the case. In the fall of 1865 the Republican party made many nominations for the Assembly of remarkably able men, acting by a kind of general understanding throughout its ranks. Among them, Mr. Tremain was nominated and triumphantly elected: the Hon. Clark B. Cochrane being also elected from the same county. Without any movement on his part to accomplish such end, it seemed to be generally assumed that he should be the Speaker and he was elected by the Republicans to that position without any previous legislative experience, and he presided over the session of the Assembly in 1866, with ability, dignity and impartiality.

“During the whole of Mr. Tremain’s professional life he had been subject to frequent and most agonizing attacks of inflammatory rheumatism. These attacks would come upon him with almost the suddenness of a blow. He would frequently leave his office at night without the faintest symptom of the approach of the dread visitor, and in the night the attack would come upon him with frightful violence, so that by morning he would be utterly helpless, and suffering most excruciating pain. He had one of these attacks, and about as violent a one as he ever had, just after entering upon the duties of the office of Attorney-General. He suffered for weeks from this attack, confined to the bed and unable to move or help himself. After his recovery, so far as to be able to get out, and in the following summer, he went to Sharon Springs and derived great benefit from the baths at that celebrated resort. He was comparatively free from any returns of his enemy for some time, when the attacks commenced again. It was noticed by his friends that these attacks were very likely to follow any prolonged confinement in the bad air of crowded court-houses, but yet such was the buoyancy and hopefulness of his disposition, that he no sooner felt the iron grasp of the disease relax, than he was impatient to be again at his work, his active mind dreading nothing so much as idleness. But for the few years preceding the year 1869, these attacks had become very frequent in their occurrence, and were telling upon the constitution of the man. He finally decided upon taking the rest which he so much needed, and which he had so well earned, and he accordingly, in that year, sailed for Europe in company with his wife and daughter. He was gone about a year, visiting England, France, Germany and Italy, and, during the whole of his trip, was absolutely free from disease or pain of any kind, and returned home with strength renewed and energies refreshed, to again plunge into the hard work of his beloved profession. He was greeted, upon his return to his residence, with a warm welcome and a kind of public reception at the hands of eminent citizens, who valued the sterling qualities of the man and the neighbor. In 1872 his name was prominently mentioned in connection with the nomination for Governor, but he declined the use of his name for that high office, preferring to take one which would not wholly prevent him from practicing his profession. Without solicitation on his part, he was nominated unanimously for the highly honorable office of Congressman-at-large on the Republican ticket, and was elected with the rest of his ticket at the election of 1872. In the fall of 1871 the gigantic frauds of the Tweed ring had been made public, and the popular mind had been stirred to its very depths by the enormous system of fraud and rascality which had been developed. Mayor Hall had been indicted as a guilty participant in the frauds, and had been placed upon his trial. Mr. Tremain, in connection with the Attorney-General's office, and assisted by Mr. Wheeler H. Peckham, of New York, conducted the prosecution. The jury disagreed. In the meantime, the chief rascal of the ring, William M. Tweed, had been indicted. He was placed upon trial, but such was the power of Tweed and his friends, that even when he stood at the Bar as an accused man, he was able to make himself felt in the jury box, and an agreement was not among the possibilities. Upon this trial, Mr. Tremain and Mr. Peckham were for the prosecution. As soon as it was over, the prosecution determined that there should be no failure of justice a second time. The trial of Tweed was again moved in the Oyer and Terminer, Judge Noah Davis presiding, in the fall of 1873. Prior to that time, the prosecution had had the jury list for that term thoroughly examined, and the history of every man on the list had been obtained, so that, when a man was called as a juror, the prosecution had his whole history before them. Mr. Tremain and Mr. Peckham, of New York, assisted the District Attorney upon the second trial, and even then, with all their care, another failure was at one time imminent, by reason of one of the jurors, who had been accepted, giving evidence that he was not to be relied upon as an unbiased man. An effort was made, through a motion to the Court to that effect, to open the case and renew a challenge to that juror. The motion was vehemently opposed, testimony to substantiate the charges of the prosecution against the juror was taken, and the result was the Court allowed the challenge to be renewed, and sustained it, and set aside the juror. The result was a jury of honest, unbiased men, which convicted the prisoner upon a great number of counts in the indictment, which was for a misdemeanor. A motion was made for sentence upon each of the counts upon which the prisoner was convicted, which was earnestly opposed by his counsel, as illegal and beyond the power of the Court to inflict. The Court, however, decided that it had the power, and then proceeded to inflict such sentence, imposing imprisonment for six months upon a number of different counts in the indictment, and providing that each six months should commence upon the expiration of the preceding term, so that in all Tweed was sentenced for many years to the penitentiary. Thus justice triumphed over this great criminal, who was sent to prison and dressed in the garb of a convict. Congratulations poured in upon the counsel for the people on all sides, and Mr. Tremain had the satisfaction of feeling that he had been instrumental in bringing to punishment this great rascal. Subsequently, upon the expiration of the first six months of his imprisonment, the counsel of Tweed sued out a writ of habeas corpus, to test the question of the power of the Court to inflict cumulative sentences. The Supreme Court sustained the power, but the Court of Appeals denied it, and Tweed thus escaped the further term of imprisonment under the sentence of Oyer and Terminer. Another celebrated trial Mr. Tremain was connected with in the city of New York, as senior counsel, that of the people against Stokes, for the murder of James Fisk, Jr., Mr. Tremain being retained for the defense. Stokes was convicted of murder in the first degree. The sentiment of the community was decidedly against the prisoner, and such sentiment made itself felt in the jury box. In this trial, the readiness of Mr. Tremain, his quickness in seeing a point, and the accuracy of his knowledge of the fundamental principles of criminal law, were all brought into constant play. Not a movement escaped him; not a word fell from the lips of witness, opposing counsel, or from the Court, that he did not fully comprehend, seize upon and turn to his own advantage as far as possible.

Ward, cool, collected and alert, the whole man was instinct with life and energy. He was on the lookout for exceptions, for he saw at the outset that the stream was powerful, and that, in all probability, he could not, on this trial, stem it. And fortunate was it for the life of his client that he had a lawyer to defend him. After the jury rendered Stokes, the case was carried to the Supreme Court, where the conviction was affirmed, the Court holding that, while there was error in the charge of the Judge as his definition of murder that the defendant had committed the fact of the killing, instead of leaving to the jury to find in fact, as a fact, of the Court though the error had not been productive of acquittal to the prisoner when other portions of the charge were examined. The case was taken to the Court of Appeals, where Mr. Tremain fought it with an ability and earnestness commensurate with its importance. The Court of Appeals, all the Judges concurring, held the charge erroneous, and that, under such circumstances it must be seen that it was no possibility, could such error have worked harm to the prisoner, and, as they could not say that such was the fact, they unanimously reversed the conviction and ordered a new trial. This was a most magnificent triumph for Mr. Tremain, and well had he earned it by the most patient, exhaustive and unremitting labor and diligence. Upon another trial, Judge Davis presided, and held the law steadily, showing no favors to the prisoner. Mr. Tremain again defended him, and the trial resulted in a verdict of manslaughter, and a sentence to the State prison for four years. But these gigantic labors were telling upon the constitution of Mr. Tremain. So exhausted was he when he finished the last trial of Stokes, that he went to sleep at the dinner table at his hotel. During the trial, also, he was suffering more or less from the attacks of his old enemy, which seemed to delight in fastening upon his victim when he was least able to resist such attacks. Yet, as the session of Congress approached, he went to Washington to take his seat as representative at large from the Empire State. His reputation had preceded him, and, without effort on his part, he was accorded an honorable position on the judiciary committee of the House. Mr. Tremain took rank at once among the leaders of the House, and, although at times suffering greatly from repeated attacks of his old foe, was, nevertheless, an earnest, and attentive, and able representative of his great constituency. Among the ablest of his speeches was that upon the subject of the disposition of the balance of the moneys received from England by virtue of the Geneva award. Upon that question Mr. Tremain had no doubt. He examined it with great care and made a most exhaustive speech upon it, taking the ground that, in equity, those who had paid the losses suffered by the assured, were subrogated to their rights, and ought to be paid such money. He was not able to carry a bill embodying such provisions, however, and no steps were taken in the matter in that Congress. His Congressional career closed with the term for which he was elected, March, 1875, and he found himself weakened and suffering from the repeated attacks of disease which he had had during his residence in Washington, greatly aggravated by the bad air of the House. He came to Albany, but found himself unable to press into business with his old vigor, and, almost for the first time, his spirits became depressed as he began to realize that his health had become seriously impaired by the constant strains from mental labor and from disease to which he had been subjected. He took another voyage to Europe with his wife, and, although relieved somewhat, he could not say what he said of his other tour, that he had not felt an ache or a pain during his absence, for he had, while in Europe on this occasion, several attacks of his malady. He came home, however, much improved, though not restored to his full health and strength. He soon entered upon the defense of Frederick Smith, indicted for murder, whose trial came off at the Fulton Oyer and Terminer early in the year 1876. The case was a most exciting one, and the little county of Fulton was stirred to the very center. Public opinion was very strongly against the accused, and the evidence which the prosecution brought to bear was pointed and strong. The Court felt as if a conviction should be had, and tried the case without any sentiment towards the prisoner. The air in the little court-room, which was crowded to its utmost capacity at all times, soon became almost unbearable, and acted like poison upon Mr. Tremain, already weakened from the incessant attacks of his disease. He became quite ill, so that the Court had to adjourn for him; and when he was not in Court, he passed his time on the bed. But his spirit was indomitable, and he meant to go through with the case and discharge his full duty to his client if it were physically possible for him so to do. He made a magnificent argument to the jury, his whole mind, seemingly, being of the importance of the case to his client, and he stood before the jury for hours, pleading with them by turns with all his old-time charm of voice and manner, and then clearly and forcibly disintegrating the evidence for the prosecution, and denouncing, in deep and stern tones, the flimsy character of the people's evidence. All this he did, ably, forcibly, eloquently, and while he was a suffering and broken-down man; the flesh being weak, but the spirit within rising high and clear above its weakness. The jury acquitted the prisoner, and there can be no doubt that such verdict was due to the able manner in which Mr. Tremain tried the cause, and to the magnificent manner of his summing up. The case was won, and Mr. Tremain returned to Albany, worn out in body, suffering greatly, yet much gratified at the success of his efforts.

This was the last important cause which Mr. Tremain ever tried. His strength seemed never to return to him after he had finished this trial. He had great difficulty in breathing, and his spirits became very much depressed. He came to his office, but failed to get back his strength, and looked on at the business of his partners, who were, one of them Rufus W. Peckham, the son of his old friend, and the other his son, Grenville Tremain. When Judge Peckham went upon the Bench in 1867, Mr. Tremain formed a partnership with a son of the Judge, Ratus W., Jr., which was continued substantially to the time of the death of Mr. Tremain. In 1868 the firm was enlarged by Mr. Tremain's son, Grenville, coming into it, which continued with all three until the sad and untimely death of Grenville in March, 1878. At that time Mr. Tremain was laboring under serious illness; so serious that he could not get out of his room to look a last time upon the face of his last remaining son.

In 1877 the Republican party, without solicitation from either father or son, and as a compliment to both, as graceful as it was merited, nominated, by acclamation, Grenville, the only surviving son of Mr. Tremain, for the office of Attorney-General. The ticket was not successful in the State, but here, where both were so well known, the son received a most flattering vote, running largely ahead of his ticket, and receiving a majority of votes in Albany county. This young man, so gifted, so winning, so eloquent, who stood in the very inmost recesses of his father's heart, was suddenly, and what seemed the flood-tide of health and strength, stricken down by his fatal illness, and, after struggling for a few days, died. The blow was a terrible one, and many a time the father uttered his astonishment that he was left and Grenville taken. He never recovered from the blow, but lingered through the summer and fall, and died on the 30th day of November, 1878, at the Gilsey House in New York.

"In his private life, among his friends and at his own home, Mr. Tremain was one of the most charming and agreeable of men. There was a brightness in his very presence, and cheerfulness and good humor were his characteristics. He was the idol of his house, and all were busy in efforts to minister to his comfort. The disease which has been spoken of, and which so frequently attacked Mr. Tremain, was, as has been said, most painful. The suffering he endured was sometimes agonizing. And yet, during all the years of his life, when the attacks came on; and when, thereby, all his plans were disarranged and confusion took the place of order; and, later on, when he saw himself debarred from the exercise of those unusual talents which nature had given him, and while he was compelled to live in silence and enforced idleness as to his profession; yet, during and under all these trials, pains, sufferings in mind and body, those who were nearest to him never heard a complaint or a murmur against the fate which he was so bravely meeting. Mr. Tremain had been, for many years, an active and earnest member of St. Peter's Episcopal Church in the city of Albany, and died a member of that parish.

"The foregoing is, comparatively, a brief sketch of the useful and busy life of Mr. Tremain. As a lawyer he stood among the leaders of his profession in the State. There will be no denial of the fact that he was a most wonderfully successful man before a jury. He was of commanding presence, and looked to be a full man, as well as acted up to that measure. When trying a case before a jury, while always respectful and gentlemanly in his demeanor to the Court, yet, from the moment he sat down to the trial, his eye, his mind, his full attention, were all given to the jury. He endeavored to establish kindly relations between himself and them, and that by a sort of freemasonry that it is about impossible to describe and rare to see imitated. This was all in the presence of the Court and during the actual trial, for of course it goes without saying that he would have scorned to speak to a jurymen outside of the Court. But he impressed upon the jury an idea of his own faith in the case, and he would give them such plausible reasons for that faith, and he would argue at one moment so smoothly, and at another plead so strongly, and yet again denounce in thunder tones and with a righteous wrath and an indignant gesture, that, altogether and in combination, the effect upon the jury was miraculous, and many a verdict he has snatched from the very edge of defeat by this wonderful power he had with the twelve men in the box. In addition to that, he was always in the trial wary and cool, looking out for 'exceptions' in case of an adverse result, so that he might have a chance to reverse and try again. Before the Court in banc, he was always dignified and courteous (as he was everywhere), and came before the Court fully prepared to argue his cause. He was not what might be termed a case lawyer, but he was astonishingly familiar with the principles of the law, and he was able to and did reason clearly and intelligently upon such principles. He had great powers of analysis, and would point out a distinction, or discover a similarity between two cases, with great readiness and with great ability. He did not despise an authority, and no man's brief betrayed the fact more clearly that he had had access to the authorities and availed himself of their aid. But he was never smothered by them. They never mastered him. He took them, examined them, mastered them, and used or distinguished them with clearness and force. That he should be taken from us, in the very zenith of his powers, with a capacity for future usefulness as measured by the natural age of man, not filled by many years yet, is difficult to understand or appreciate the reason for. But the memory of such a life should not be permitted to go out with the lives of those who knew Mr. Tremain. It should be made more permanent, and for that end, the foregoing outline of his honorable life has been given."

"Frederick Lyman Tremain was the eldest child of Lyman and Helen Cornwall Tremain, and was born at Durham, Greene county, N. Y., on the 13th of June, 1843. He died at City Point Hospital, Virginia, on the 8th of February, 1865, from a gunshot wound received in battle, near Hatcher's Run, on the 6th of February, being 21 years, 7 months and 24 days old, at the time of his death.

"Of his ancestry, all that I propose to state in this connection is, that he descended, both on his father's and mother's side, from revolutionary stock. His paternal great-grandfather, Nathaniel Tremain, was a soldier of the Revolutionary War, who died, highly esteemed and respected, at Pittsfield, Berkshire county, Mass. His maternal great-grandfather, Captain Dan, Cornwall, was also a soldier of the Revolution, and a worthy citizen, who died at Cornwallsville, Greene county, N. Y.

"In his boyish career, there is little to record, which is worthy of special notice. While he was by no means precocious, he was a remarkably bright, intelligent and active boy. His nature was so genial and generous that he was always a favorite, not only with his youthful comrades, but with all who were brought in contact with him.

"He had a remarkable facility in the acquisition of knowledge, and, apparently without effort, mastered whatever lessons were required of him, in and out of school. In all his boyish sports and athletic exercises, he was an acknowledged leader. He displayed them, and through his subsequent life, an unusual degree of mechanical ingenuity.

There was one trait in his character which was developed at a very early period, and which became, afterwards, prominent and extraordinary. This was his wonderful courage, coolness and self-reliance. Many instances to illustrate this characteristic might be related, commencing as early as when he was three years old, but I refrain from giving them a place here, fearful that their publication might be ascribed to an overweening parental fondness. Quick in forming his conclusions, prompt in action, fertile in resources, obstacles and difficulties served only to stimulate him in the execution of his purposes, and rare, very rare, was the instance, so rare, indeed, that no case can be now recalled, in which he failed to accomplish, successfully, whatever he undertook.

His religious education was carefully attended to, and, at an early age, he received the holy rite of baptism, in the Protestant Episcopal Church, at Oak Hill, under the ministration of the Rev. L. A. Barrows. The following extract is from a letter received from this faithful minister and good man, written at Norfolk, St. Lawrence county, his present residence. 'We feel to deeply sympathize with you under the dark cloud which this sudden and unexpected bereavement has thrown over you. Since such is the melancholy fact that a dear child, a brilliant youth, in the defence of his country, has been called from your paternal embrace, let faith lift the veil, and view in a world of bliss, future scenes more glorious than could have been won here on battle fields. Frederick is gone. I placed the form of the cross upon his forehead, and, as in life, so in death, let us believe that he triumphed over the spiritual enemy and is now rejoicing in the kingdom of God.' Here let me add, that, after his death, there was found in his camp tent, carefully preserved, a copy of the Holy Bible given to him by his dear mother, with a mark placed at chapters five and six of Matthew, which contain that sublime and comprehensive epitome of man's whole duty, Christ's sermon on the mount.

In November, 1853, he removed, with his father's family, from Durham to the city of Albany, where he continued to reside until his death. Here several years were passed in faithful and diligent study, preparatory to his college education. The schools he attended, in the city, were the Albany Boys' Academy, and, afterwards, the Classical Institute, in Eagle street, of which Professor Charles H. Anthony was Principal. Under the instruction of this excellent and faithful teacher he spent between two and three years of his life. Between Mr. Anthony and his young pupil, relations of friendship were contracted, which continued in full force to the end. The photograph of this teacher of his boyhood was found, after his death, among the valued memorials in his army trunk.

"In the spring of 1858, Frederick entered the Classical school for boys, under the charge of Mr. James Sedgwick, at Great Barrington, Mass. In this beautiful New England village, he remained pursuing his studies, and attracting the affectionate regard of teachers and schoolmates, for one year.

"In the spring of 1859, Frederick became a pupil in the celebrated school for boys, under the charge of the Rev. Thomas C. Reed, D.D., at Walnut Hill, Geneva. He continued in Doctor Reed's school until the summer of 1860, when several of his school companions were examined for admission into Hobart College, Geneva, and Frederick, who had formed very strong attachments with them, also applied, and passed his examination, and having been found qualified, was admitted into the Freshman Class and entered that college, at the commencement of the college year, in September, 1860.

"The two years, or nearly two years, of his college life were marked by no unusual incidents. Many warm friendships were formed, and his genial and unselfish character, as well as his excellent natural abilities, were duly appreciated.

"Nor was he backward in performing his full share in the mischief-loving scrapes in which, from time immemorial, boys in college have been accustomed to take part. He was proud of the secret society of which he became a member, and contributed, to the extent of his ability, to promote its power and influence. In brief, during the three years and upwards that he was pursuing his studies in this most beautiful village, surrounded by the delightful scenery which nature has lavished there with such bountiful profusion, he was constantly acquiring that education which enabled him, in after life, to master with facility the duties of the responsible and arduous positions which he was called to hold.

“By the firing upon Fort Sumter, his patriotism was aroused, and he experienced an ardent desire to become a volunteer in the army of the Union. About this time, the people of Geneva were engaged in organizing an engineer corps, under the command of Mr. Charles B. Stuart, formerly State Engineer and Surveyor. Frederick desired to enlist, and applied to his father for his permission, but, there being at that time, no difficulty in procuring volunteers, and his college career having commenced only the fall before, the paternal consent was then withheld, not finally, but for the present.

“In December, 1861, the annual sophomore exercises in public speaking took place, and Frederick was selected as one of the thirteen speakers of his class to participate in them. In a letter inviting his parents to attend he writes, ‘I think you will not hear any bad speaking, but, on the contrary, will hear much good speaking on the occasion.’ The exhibition took place at Linden Hall, in the presence of a large and intelligent audience, and he acquitted himself quite creditably. In the Geneva Gazette, his performance was specially mentioned in complimentary and flattering terms.

“During the summer of 1862, after the President’s call for more men appeared, Frederick, who had never for a moment relinquished his desire to enter the army, again urged his father to yield his consent. The author was thus brought face to face with the stern reality of war, and was called upon to determine the question whether the application of this loved son should be granted or denied. He had, from the commencement of the great conflict, labored, to the extent of his ability, to convince his countrymen, that it was their duty to sustain the government and overthrow the rebellion. He had exerted whatever influence he possessed, by public addresses, and in various other modes, to induce men to take the field against the enemies of the country. The conviction that it was the solemn duty of every American citizen to sustain the authority and preserve the life of the nation at any and all sacrifices, was as full and complete as the human mind was capable of entertaining. This conviction formed a part of his very being, and he believed that, in this great crisis of the nation’s peril, his duty to his beloved country was second only to his duty to his God.

“Frederick immediately began his arrangements for the new field of duty, with great earnestness and energy. He had already become a member of Company A, of the Zouave Cadets, a uniformed company in the 10th Regiment of Militia, and had been engaged in acquiring the drill and the necessary military science. This company has become highly distinguished during the war. It can point, on its muster rolls, to many names among the noblest, most gifted and patriotic of the young men of Albany. It has already sent more than ninety of its members to the field, each one of whom has earned and obtained a commission, many of high rank, and all of respectable position.

"Having obtained from Hobart College, an honorable dismissal, his attention was immediately devoted to the new regiment of infantry, known as the 113th regiment of New York volunteers, which was then in the process of being organized in the city of Albany.

"For the purpose of organizing this regiment, His Excellency, Governor Morgan, had designated a war committee, embracing some of the most patriotic and influential citizens of Albany, and the committee held daily sessions at the Mayor's room in the City Hall. It was resolved to make this regiment one of the best that had been sent forth from the State. The Governor had entrusted to the committee the duty of recommending suitable persons to obtain authorization papers, to recruit volunteers with reference to having commissions, as lieutenants and captains, issued to those who were able to recruit the requisite number of men.

"Frederick promptly applied to the committee, and was the first person who received from the Adjutant General, on the recommendation of the committee, authority to obtain recruits for the new regiment. He erected his tent in front of Capitol Park, in State street, issued his posters, associated with him young Orr and young McEwen (the former of whom has since lost his life, in the army, and the latter is now Judge Advocate of the first division, second army corps, having been for some time a prisoner at Libby Prison, Richmond), and proceeded with vigor and energy, to obtain volunteers. Indeed, the real manhood of his character was displayed from the moment he felt the responsibilities of his position, and continued to manifest itself, more and more clearly, in every subsequent stage of his career.

"The late Adjutant General, John T. Sprague, then a Major in the United States army, was on duty for the Government, at Albany, as an auditing and disbursing officer. The war committee unanimously designated him as the Colonel of the new regiment, and he accepted the position. The Government at Washington, however, soon after this, declined to relieve him from duty in the regular army, and, hence, he was only enabled to act as Colonel for a very few days. During that time, however, discovering the necessity of an Adjutant for the regiment, and being acquainted with Frederick, Colonel Sprague kindly tendered him the position of Adjutant. It was accepted, and his selection approved by Governor Morgan.

In the time that intervened prior to the period when the regiment left Albany, which was about thirty days, the whole duty of organizing it, and getting it into proper working order, devolved upon the new Adjutant. The Colonel (Morris) did not arrive until a very short time before the regiment moved. No other field officer was selected until a day or two prior to that time, and the only other officer, besides the Adjutant, was Doctor Pomret, Surgeon, whose duties were confined to the surgical and medical department.

To the faithful discharge of these duties, Frederick devoted himself, days and nights, dividing his time between the headquarters in Broadway, and the barracks. How readily he mastered those duties, and how well he performed them, may be inferred from the letter of Doctor Pomret, the present Surgeon General of the State of New York, and from the frequent compliments bestowed upon him by the committee, who were superintending his movements, and who were surprised and gratified by the qualities he exhibited. If any apprehensions had been entertained, by reason of the Adjutant's youth, it is believed they were entirely and speedily dispelled.

About the 10th of August, 1862, the 113th regiment, with 1265 bayonets, left the city of Albany, under orders to report at Washington. It was one of the first regiments placed in the field, under the President's call, and received a beautiful stand of colors, as well as the Springfield muskets, which had been promised to each of the first four regiments. A finer regiment, or one carrying with it so many good wishes and so much interest, on the part of Albanians, never left our city.

Of that noble body of men how few, alas, now survive! The brave Col. Lewis O. Morris fell, gallantly fighting at the head of his regiment, at Spottsylvania Court House, in the summer of 1864. Between him and Frederick there soon sprung up, and always existed, mutual esteem and regard.

“When the regiment reached Washington, the officer in charge of its defences, knowing the skill of Colonel Morris as an artillery officer, procured the assignment of the regiment to duty upon the defences of the city, where it was, not long afterwards, converted into the 7th New York artillery.

“The ensuing fifteen months were passed by Frederick, with his regiment, near Fort Reno, about five miles from Washington. He applied himself, diligently, to the acquisition of the knowledge required in the artillery service. Part of the time, he was engaged in teaching a school of officers in military tactics. He devoted himself faithfully to the performance of his official duties. Twice I had the pleasure of visiting him there, and could not fail to discover that he was a universal favorite with the officers and men.

“He became thoroughly familiar with his new profession. About the time of leaving the regiment, he happened one day to be engaged with a brother officer, in discussing the subject of being examined as to qualifications before a military board in session at Washington, when Frederick volunteered to be examined. His duties called him frequently to Washington, and soon afterwards he presented himself before the board, and was subjected to a thorough examination, the result of which was that he passed the examination successfully, and was tendered, in a few days, a Lieutenant Colonel’s commission in a colored regiment, but, meantime, he had received another appointment which he preferred.

“On the most elevated ground in the District of Columbia, about six miles from the Capitol, stands Fort Reno, formerly called Fort Pennsylvania. Within a short distance from the fort, and upon a level plain, may yet be seen the little village of log cabins, laid out into streets, which was built for the accommodation of the 7th New York artillery. Upon one side, near by, stand the hospital and the office for the surgeon, as well as the house erected for the use of Dr. Pomfret, and occupied by that skilful and noble hearted surgeon, with his family, during the fifteen months that the regiment remained upon the defences of Washington.

“On the other side are a few officers’ cabins or huts, and one of these, more tasteful than its neighbors, with a little piazza at each end, was the ‘Adjutant quarters,’ constructed for, and under the superintendence of, the subject of this sketch.

"Frederick was a universal favorite among the common soldiers. He always treated them with kindness and justice. Quick to discover real merit in a private, and mingling much with the men, his opinions concerning promotions had great influence with Colonel Morris, and many a deserving soldier has been indebted for his promotion from the ranks, to the aid and recommendation of the Adjutant.

"He began, after more than a year had elapsed, and still no orders to move came, to desire more active service. The conversion of his regiment into an artillery regiment, thus placing it in a higher branch of service, had been gratifying to him, but he had not anticipated so long a continuance of garrison duty, and, having reason to believe that the regiment might remain doing that duty for a long time, and perhaps until the end of the war, his active spirit began to chafe under the monotony of his present life. Animated by an honorable ambition, he could not enjoy a life of inglorious ease.

"He wrote several letters to the author, expressing these feelings, and desiring his aid in obtaining a position where he might have an opportunity to acquire distinction, and strike a blow at the enemies of his country.

"Influenced by these appeals, the author applied for, and in November, obtained, for Frederick, a Presidential appointment as Assistant Adjutant General, with the rank of Captain; an appointment which was subsequently confirmed by the Senate. I was present when this appointment was handed to him by that devoted patriot and able cabinet officer, Edwin M. Stanton. He observed as he gave it, 'I trust I shall hereafter have the pleasure of conferring on you higher honors;' to which Frederick modestly replied, 'I hope my future conduct will give you no reason to regret the confidence reposed in me.'

"Frederick had learned of the reputation already acquired by that brave and rising young General, Henry E. Davies, Jr., of the cavalry service, and he asked for and obtained an order to report to him for duty. His departure from the old 7th Regiment was the occasion for much regrets, with officers and men, and with himself. The officers assembled to bid him an affectionate farewell, and the regimental band serenaded him on the eve of his departure. This noble regiment took the field the following spring with more than 1760 bayonets, and of these brave men, how few, either officers or men, are now surviving!

“On the 12th of November, soon after his departure, Colonel Morris issued an order appointing his successor, which was duly made public, and contained the following handsome allusion to the late Adjutant.

“The Colonel commanding while he rejoices at the promotion of Captain Tremain, regrets that it will send him to a new field of duty and sever his connection with this regiment.

“He will bear with him the best wishes of the officers of the regiment for his future welfare and success.”

“Pursuant to orders, Frederick reported for duty to General Davies, then commanding the first brigade in the third division of the cavalry corps. The new field of duty thus opened to him, was specially suited to his taste and feelings. It was the cavalry service, and the excitement, life and dash of that arm of the service were peculiarly adapted to his ardent and enthusiastic nature. He became devotedly fond of the cavalry service; the remainder of his life was spent in it, and he became more and more interested in and attached to it. An accomplished and veteran officer who knew Frederick well, and who had been for nearly a year in the same division with him, remarked to the author recently, ‘Frederick was our beau ideal of a cavalry officer. Brave, generous and chivalrous he attracted our admiration. We were all proud of him. He had no enemy in the corps, and he achieved a reputation for gallantry equal to that of any officer in the army.’

“When he first joined his new brigade, he found it under marching orders, and skirmishing between it and the enemy occurred within a day or two afterwards, near Raccoon Ford. His Thanksgiving dinner was made up of hard tack eaten while the enemy’s shells were bursting around him.

“Soon after his return, and about the 20th of January, he was ordered by General Pleasanton, then commanding the cavalry corps, to leave the brigade with which he was connected, which had another Assistant Adjutant General, and report for duty to the first brigade and second division, which had recently lost its Assistant Adjutant General. He assumed his new position about the middle of January. This brigade was one of the largest and finest in the army, and was then under the command of Colonel Taylor. It was stationed at Warrenton, a pleasant village in Virginia. In April following, General Davies was placed in command of this brigade. Frederick remained with this brigade until his death. In a letter written January 27th, he writes of being pleasantly located, in a fine office, in the centre of the village, which was formerly occupied by a Virginia lawyer and judge, and adds, 'we surround this town with our picket lines, and they are attacked nearly every night by guerrillas, which kind of vermin abound in this region.'

"He writes from time to time, during the winter and in March, about the gay times in the army, several balls having been given, besides racing, sack racing, hurdle racing, a grand St. Patrick's day celebration by the Irish brigade, and he speaks in the highest terms of the officers with whom he was associated. The latter part of March the division received orders to be in readiness for a move, at a moment's notice.

"In the month of April commenced those grand movements of the cavalry which have become already historic. From that time, down to his death, the active military career of Frederick may be said to have been accomplished. He was an actor in those mighty military movements on which depended the fate of the Nation. He was a soldier of the Republic, in the great army whose tread shook the continent of America, and whose heroic deeds have excited the wonder and admiration of the world.

"My allusions to these movements must, necessarily, be brief and imperfect. A few weeks before his death, Frederick, at my request, declared his resolution to prepare, at his first leisure moments, a record of the battles in which he had been engaged, but alas! that leisure never came!

"His reports, as Assistant Adjutant General, giving a history of these movements, are not yet accessible to the public, and I have derived no information from them. He participated in no less than twenty-five battles and skirmishes during a period of ten months. My knowledge of these is derived from his own letters, dashed off in the midst of exciting scenes, from his conversations, and from information cheerfully furnished by cultivated and intelligent army officers, who were associated with him, at different periods of time during the campaign.

"The circumstances attending his death may be soon related. The movement which resulted in the battle of Hatcher's Run was a general advance of the whole division on the morning of February 5th, pursuant to orders. They were on the march all that day, and early the next morning, while the brigade were preparing for breakfast, the enemy broke in upon them, and a battle ensued which continued all day.

"About 2 P. M., while near Dabney's Mills, Frederick was leading his troops on the extreme left, in the skirmish line, and was about to make a charge, the cavalry being dismounted, when, General Davies having been wounded, Colonel Avery was called to command the brigade and had sent a mounted officer to notify Frederick that the command of the regiment had devolved upon him. While Frederick had turned around, partly, and was conversing with the messenger, he received the fatal wound from a Minie ball in his hip.

"He left the field accompanied by two men, meeting on his way Colonel Avery who describes him as looking pale, and having a smile on his face. In the ambulance, he was overtaken by his colored servant, and said to him, cheerfully, that they would soon visit Albany again. He, also, at the same moment, recognized his cousin, Major H. E. Tremain, of General Gregg's staff, while he was riding by with an important order from the general for reinforcements, hailed him, remarking that he was hit, perhaps seriously but he thought not dangerously, and then urged him to go on in the performance of his duty.

"He walked into the field hospital, where General Davies met him, placed him upon a bed in a room by himself, and gave him some stimulants and a cigar. The surgeons extracted the ball that evening, and pronounced it troublesome only, but not dangerous. He was visited there by Major Pease, Major Tremain and others, who, relying on the surgeon's report, left him without serious apprehensions. The next day he was sent to City Point Hospital, fifteen or twenty miles, where he arrived, cold and exhausted, attended by his servant.

He was in much pain, and not inclined to converse. The following day, the 8th, alarming symptoms appeared. He continued perfectly conscious, made his arrangements to leave for home, but was not made aware of the fact that his life was in danger, and about five o'clock, just as his servant had given him some water, he died, without a murmur or complaint having escaped his lips.

"A post-mortem examination revealed the fact that the wound was necessary to depart from the first. The ball after penetrating its course had turned back, and its location had deceived the surgeons who extracted the ball who supposed it merely a flesh wound.

The intelligence of his death spread a deep gloom over his entire brigade officers and men. A meeting of the brigade officers, (a rare compliment in the army,) was called and attended by every officer not absent on duty.

"BAY CITY, Mich., Jan. 11, 1902.

"MURRAY E. POOLE, Esq., Ithaca, N. Y.—Dear Sir:—I was recently shown a circular issued by you referring to the genealogy of the Tremains, et al. Will you kindly forward me three copies of the circular as well as any other pamphlet matter you have issued, and in return for the same, I think I can send you some interesting historical references.

"Our branch of the Tremain family formerly resided in New York but divided at the outbreak of the Revolutionary War. Part of the family joined the U. E. Loyalists and settled at Quebec and Halifax. My grandfather was a resident of Quebec and was an associate partner of John Jacob Astor in the fur trade. My father was educated at Prince Edwards Island College and a classmate and personal friend of Robert Bonner. I have also heard him say he was a second cousin of Lyman Tremain of Albany, N. Y., and a cousin of one Rudolph Tremain, who I think was an old time member of the New York Stock Exchange. My mother, nee Ellen Fick, is still living aged eighty-three years, and I think I will be able to give you the Canadian history of that branch of the Tremain family if the same will be of interest to you.

"Truly yours,
